

BUNKER HILL

Film and Introduction by Director Kevin Willmott
Professor, University of Kansas

Bunker Hill, the new independent feature film from director Kevin Willmott (CSA: Confederate States of America) stars Emmy and Peabody

Award winner James McDaniel (NYPD Blue); Laura Kirk, star and co-writer of the acclaimed feature film Lisa Picard is Famous, which premiered at The Cannes Film Festival; and Saeed Jaffrey the legendary actor from India who has starred in more than 150 films.

What would happen if 9/11 happened again? Bunker Hill is the story of a former Wall Street executive who leaves prison and heads for the small town of Bunker Hill, Kansas, where his ex-wife and their children have started a new life. Soon after he arrives, an apparent massive terrorist attack against America darkens the town. Cut off from the world, the town's militant past is reawakened and forces coalesce to protect citizens from an unseen enemy. The town's fear leads to the creation of a posse of gunmen, resulting in torture, illegal searches and eventually, murder. Civil liberties and justice itself hang in the balance as the town must decide whether to embrace freedom or fear.

Monday, November 17, 2008, 7:30 PM
Herter Hall, Room 231, UMass Amherst

Sponsored by Program for Undergraduate Mentoring and Achievement
Free to Public

PUMA • 305 New Africa House, UMass Amherst • Ph (413): 577-1740