

Laurie R. Godfrey (biological anthropology); B.A. 1967, Tufts, University; M.A. 1969, Ph.D. 1977, Harvard University. With University of Massachusetts, Amherst, since 1977; professor since 1991; Associate Director, Interdisciplinary Program in Organismic and Evolutionary Biology, 2002-2005. Previously with State University of New York, Binghamton, Cornell University, and Hartwick College; Mary Ingraham Bunting science scholar, Radcliffe College, 1983-85; National Science Foundation Visiting Professor, SUNY, Stony Brook (Dept. of Anatomy), 1995-95; Presidential Writer's Award, 1985, and Distinguished Teaching Award, 1997-98, Univ. of Massachusetts; Humanist Contributions to Science Award, American Humanist Association, 1988; Sigma Xi National Distinguished Lecturer, 1997-99; Board of Directors, National Center for Science Education, 1990-95; Editorial Board, American Journal of Physical Anthropology, 1995-99; Editorial Board, Journal of Human Evolution, 1993-95 and 2003-2005; Fellow, American Association for the Advancement of Science, 2004; Electorate Nominating Committee, Section H Anthropology, American Association for the Advancement of Science, 1999-2002 (Chair of Nominating Committee, 2001-2002); Section H Anthropology, American Association for the Advancement of Science Chair-elect, Chair, Retiring Chair (2004-2007).

Research: Field expeditions to Northern, Northwestern, Central, Southwestern and Southeastern Madagascar (Anjohibe, Anjohikely, Antsiroandoha, Andrafiabe, Fitsangatsanganan Ilay Olon' Tokana, Ampasambazimba, Taolambiby, Andrahomana and other sites), to explore the giant extinct lemur and associated fauna. Beza Mahafaly sifaka and mouse lemur projects. Ranomafana lemur ontogeny project. Museum and laboratory research on the functional morphology, development and evolution of Malagasy lemurs; allometry and heterochrony.