Experiential Background

My life has always focused around sitting back and watching everyone else float on by real fast. I like to study Sociology by just watching people. I choice BDIC when I went to ben and jerry's 4 times a week this summer just seeing how they all behaved. Its cool. I came to UMass knowing I would entertain a major in the sociology dept., but I got deeper into it and began learning more and more I soon discovered that maybe this was not for me maybe I needed more, maybe I needed BDIC.

My goal is to study the interactions between human beings in a ginormous setting. Were so complex to the affect that there are tons of interactions per day. This can be a confusing thing but seeing as how I have always been fascinated with it since I was a little boy, I always know this is the right thing for me. My experience is watching people and my born tendency understanding all humans. Since this is the truth about me, I just know in my heart of hearts that I can do whatever I put this mind to no matter if Im here or their, I will be watching.
