Worldwide and Wide
Keep the Web

By Matthew Flinders and Kenneth Neil Carter

The Web is a truly global phenomenon, connecting people from all over the world. It allows for the free exchange of information and ideas, fostering collaboration and innovation on a scale never seen before. With over 5 billion users worldwide, the Web has become an integral part of our everyday lives. Whether it's for work, education, or entertainment, the Web is indispensable. As we continue to rely more on digital content and online services, it's essential that we keep the Web open and accessible to all. This means supporting policies and initiatives that promote innovation, diversity, and inclusivity. The Web is a living, breathing ecosystem that needs our collective care and support to thrive. Let's work together to ensure that the Web remains a vibrant and dynamic space for all.
