NCATE - Standard 4: Diversity

Supporting Explanation:

America’s classrooms are becoming increasingly diverse; more than one-third of the students in P–12 classrooms are from minority groups. The families of an increasing number of students are immigrants, many with native languages other than English and from diverse religious backgrounds. Growing numbers of students are classified as having disabilities. At the same time, minority teachers are less than 15 percent of the teaching force. As a result, most students do not have the opportunity to benefit from a diverse teaching force. Teacher candidates need to develop proficiencies for working with students from diverse backgrounds and with exceptionalities to ensure that all students have the opportunity to learn. Regardless of whether they live in areas with great diversity, candidates must develop knowledge of diversity in the United States and the world, dispositions that respect and value differences, and skills for working in diverse settings.

One of the goals of this standard is the development of educators who can help all students learn and who can teach from multicultural and global perspectives that draw on the histories, experiences, and representations of students from diverse cultural backgrounds. Therefore, the unit provides opportunities for candidates to understand the role of diversity and equity in the teaching and learning process. Coursework, field experiences, and clinical practice are designed to help candidates understand the influence of culture on education and acquire the ability to develop meaningful learning experiences for all students. Candidates learn about exceptionalities and inclusion as well as gender differences and their impact on learning. Proficiencies, including those related to dispositions and diversity, are drawn from the standards of the profession, state, and institution; they are clear to candidates and are assessed as part of the unit’s performance assessment system.

Field experiences and clinical practice support the development of educators who can apply their knowledge of diversity, including exceptionalities, to work in schools with all students. They provide opportunities for candidates to reflect on their observations and practices in schools and communities with students and families from diverse ethnic, racial, and socioeconomic groups. Clinical faculty design learning experiences for candidates in field experiences and clinical practice to help candidates process diversity concepts and provide feedback to candidates about their performance.

A cohort of candidates and faculty from diverse groups informs the unit’s curriculum, pedagogy, and format in culturally meaningful ways. Diversity in education programs assists candidates in addressing teaching and learning from multiple perspectives and different life experiences. It provides for different voices in the professional development and work of the education profession. It allows a greater range of backgrounds and experiences among faculty and candidates to enhance understanding and interaction with colleagues from different backgrounds. In this regard, the unit recruits, admits or hires, and retains candidates and faculty from diverse cultural backgrounds. A plan, which is monitored and revised regularly, may provide guidance in ensuring and maintaining diverse representation.

Candidates have the opportunity to interact with adults, children, and youth from their own and other backgrounds throughout their college careers, and particularly in their professional preparation programs. Candidates, higher education faculty, school faculty, and P–12 students with whom candidates work are males and females with diverse ethnic, racial, language, religious, and socioeconomic backgrounds and histories and from different regions of the country and world. Candidates also have opportunities to work with adults and students with exceptionalities.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FORMATION OF DISSERTATION COMMITTEE

KAI YU Proposed Dissertation Title: "Exorcizing the Haunting Specter of Meritocracy: A Qualitative Research on the Implementation of Inclusive Education in Beijing." Statement of the Problem: The problem this study addresses is the gap between tracking--grouping students by ability, a practice that stems, in part, from a prevailing meritocratic ideology--and inclusive education--grouping students heterogeneously, a practice that the central government has adopted as official policy. The goals of this study are to (1) discover attitudes, strategies, tactics, and other behavior (embraced or engaged in by school principals, teachers, and other actors) that support and inhibit the government's policy of dismantling the tracking structure, and (2) to explore their causes and consequences.

RESEARCH ON FAMILIES LECTURE

UMass Amherst Center for Research on Families welcomes renowned scholar and author, ANN C. CROUTER of the College of Health and Human Development and Social Science Research Institute at Pennsylvania State University. Her talk, "The long arm of the job: Implications for families", will be given on Thursday, April 12th, 2007, at 4:00 p.m., in 620 Thompson Hall at University of Massachusetts Amherst.

The lecture is free and open to all.

Ann C. Crouter is one of the nation’s leading scholars on issues of work and family. Her research has focused on the connections between parents’ work conditions, family dynamics, and the development of children and adolescents. She has explored these issues with her long-time collaborator, Susan McHale, in the context of three longitudinal research studies focused on dual-earner families, all funded by the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development (NICHD). She currently collaborates on research to examine similar themes in ethnic minority families, as well as a large investigation of the work and family circumstances of low-income, rural parents, part of an NICHD-funded program project conducted by researchers at the University of North Carolina and Penn State. Most recently, with support from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation and NICHD, Crouter is co-directing a set of inter-related studies that closely examine the work-family interface for managers and employees in the hotel industry. These studies combine surveys, daily diaries, and the collection of biomarker data to look closely at the implications of work stress in this exciting but challenging sector of the service economy. Crouter co-organizes, with sociologist Alan Booth, Penn State’s National Symposium on the Family, an annual conference and edited book series supported by a host of Penn State organizations and by NICHD. She serves on the editorial board of Journal of Marriage and the Family and is immediate past-chair of the Board of Directors of the Christian Children’s Fund (CCF), a non-profit, non-denominational NGO providing education, nutrition, and health services to children and families in need around the world via community development projects. Dr. Crouter is Professor of Human Development at Pennsylvania State University and directs Penn State’s Social Science Research Institute and Children, Youth, and Families Consortium. In June, she will become the next Dean of the College of Health and Human Development.

Ann Crouter’s presentation is part of CRF’s Tay Gavin Erickson Lecture Series, a forum which brings nationally recognized speakers with expertise in family research to campus each year. The lecture series began in 1999 though an endowment established in memory of Tay Gavin Erickson. The speakers provide public lectures, highlighting the importance of research on the family and its implications for public policy. The Center for Research on Families (CRF) at the University of Massachusetts Amherst actively supports and disseminates social and behavioral sciences research on issues relevant to families. 2007 UNH COMPOSITION CONFERENCE CALL FOR PAPERS

The University of New Hampshire is offering a composition conference on October 12-13, 2007 with keynotes Ellen Cushman (Michigan State University), Paul Kei Matsuda (University of New Hampshire), Gwendolyn D. Pough (Syracuse University) and Stuart Selber (Penn State University). The theme of the conference is Literacies—Personal, Professional, Academic. The focus will be on exploring literacy as it is learned inside and outside of school, and its multiple uses.

We invite proposals for 75-minute concurrent sessions. Sessions can be proposed by an individual or a group of presenters. We prefer interactive sessions and hope to avoid the reading of papers. Among the possible topics to be addressed are: literacy, technology and accessibility; multi-media literacies; virtual reading and writing communities; non-school sponsors of literacy; literacy norms and second language learners; literacy and popular culture; and new discourse conventions in academic writing.

Proposals should include: Session Title; Proposal Type (individual or group); Complete contact information of each presenter including name, address, daytime phone and email address; A 400-word session description as well as a 50-word summary.

GRANT SCHOLARS PROGRAM NOMINEE

The William T. Grant Scholars Program supports promising early career researchers from diverse disciplines. The award is intended to facilitate the professional development of early career scholars who have some demonstrated success in conducting high quality research and are seeking to further develop their skills and research program. Studies from these Scholars contribute to theory and policy/practice for improving the everyday settings of youth.

Candidates are nominated by a supporting institution and must submit five-year research plans that demonstrate creativity, intellectual rigor, and a commitment to continued professional development; are grounded in theory and sound research methods; and provide evidence for appropriate mentoring from senior investigators. Every year, four to six William T. Grant Scholars are selected and each receives $350,000 distributed over a five-year period.

Congratulations to Meg Gebhard for her nomination to this prestigious award.
