Shut Up and Write Tuesdays

Writing in the presence of others is not only less lonely, but also leads to better accountability and writing habits. This weekly drop-in provides time and space to write while caffeinated – come late or leave early. Optionally, writing consultants will be available to meet with writers to discuss any type of writing. Watch in future weeks for a link to reserve a 30–minute consultation; on–site sign–ups will also be available on a first–come, first–serve basis. Co–sponsored with the Writing Center. Pre-registration for the series is required. One registration for the summer–attend one week or attend them all.

FACULTY NEWS

Galman’s new publication looks at pain

Sally Campbell Galman, child and family studies, has a new publication in Anthropology News. “This was a piece that came out in response to a CFP for papers on the rise of populism. However, I submitted a proposal to write a comic instead of a traditional paper, and they accepted it,” Galman said.

It can be seen here: http://www.anthropology-news.org/index.php/2017/05/08/research-in-pain/

FYI it’s not COE

It makes sense that our acronym would be COE … but it is NOT.
COE refers to the College of Engineering.
Our designation is: EDUC

Please refrain from using COE in reference to the College of Education in your digital and print materials!
