FORMATION OF DISSERTATION COMMITTEES

LUIS M. VALDIVIEZO  Proposed Dissertation Title: "Deconstructing the Hispanic Paradox of 'Interculturality Without Multiculturality' From Peruvian Negritude Literature and Music." Statement of the Problem: Peru contains a diverse society comprised of people with indigenous, Hispanic, Middle Eastern, Asian, and African Roots. However, the state's intercultural education policy has not explicitly recognized this whole diversity. This dissertation will explore the potential the Peruvian negritude tradition may have in the reform of Peruvian education policy. Chairperson: Dr. Maurianne Adams.

HEIDI BOHLER  Proposed Dissertation Title: "Fifth-Grade Students' Cognition and Transfer in a Net/Wall Unit." Statement of the Problem: Much of the content in American school physical education has focused on sport-related games. Since games are such a big part of the curriculum, physical educators' understanding of how students learn and think about tactics is highly relevant. Limited research exists regarding how young novices in physical education learn tactics, think about game play, and transfer that knowledge to similar games while participating in this model. Chairperson: Dr. Linda L. Griffin.

JEROLD LAGUILLES  Proposed Dissertation Title: "Investigating the Alumni Involvement of Low-Income Students." Statement of the Problem: In American higher education, there is unequal access to post-secondary education between low-income and high-income students not only in terms of participation rates but also in the types of institutions attended. The most selective institutions have begun to address this inequity by reducing the financial burden of economically disadvantaged students through the replacement of need-based loans with need-based grants. However, the long-term outcomes of this admissions policy have yet to be determined, especially with regard to future alumni giving and volunteering. Chairperson: Dr. Elizabeth A. Williams.

COLLEEN FARRELL-MEIER  Proposed Dissertation Title: "The Development of a Phonics Diagnostic Inventory: Validity with Other Reading Measures." Statement of the Problem: "Technically adequate assessments are needed to identify students who are at-risk for reading failure, to inform instruction and develop appropriate interventions, to monitor progress, and to comply with the federal law (NCLB, IDEA 2004). The purpose of this study is to examine the validity of items on a phonics diagnostic inventory with known measures of reading ability. Chairperson: Dr. John Hintze.

AERA – ABS Graduate Student Education Research Workshop

Call for Applications

Purpose and overview: The American Educational Research Association (AERA) and the Association of Black Sociologists (ABS) announce a joint professional development training workshop for advanced graduate students who are examining an education research topic from a sociological perspective. This workshop will provide advanced graduate students with mentoring and guidance on their dissertation and give them insight into publishing their work. A small group of senior scholars will review graduate students’ dissertation research (i.e., manuscripts, chapter drafts, preliminary findings, etc.) and lead workshop activities. All graduate students’ research will focus on an area in education research and/or sociology of education. This includes but is not limited to topics such as school structures, school climate, school financing, learning contexts, issues in higher education, children and youth, or student achievement. In the workshop participants will discuss the intersection of race, class, and gender with these education research topics. Students will submit a manuscript to a workshop senior scholar for review 4 weeks before the workshop. During the ABS Conference, there will be panel discussion featuring the senior scholars as well as a designated time for the scholars to work individually with the graduate students. Students and senior scholars will be expected to maintain contact during the year to advance the students’ research interests. Students whose work is completed or near completion will be invited to participate in a poster session at the 2010 AERA Annual Meeting in Denver (April 30- May 4, 2010).

Senior Scholars: Senior scholars will be invited to participate whose research addresses education topics and the intersections between race, class, and gender.

Dates: The workshop will be part of the 2009 ABS Conference, in New Orleans - June 17th- June 20th. All workshop activities will be held the afternoon and evening of Wednesday, June 17th.

Application: Graduate student applicants must have their dissertation proposals accepted. Applicants must be in the process of collecting or obtaining data for their dissertation, analyzing data, or writing their dissertation. The dissertation must address an issue or topic that is pertinent to education research and preference will be given to studies focusing on race, class, and/or gender.

Applicants will submit the following:
1. Complete Application form
2. Overview of research (2 pages limit; double spaced)
3. Writing sample (10 page limit)
4. Curriculum vitae
5. Letter of recommendation from faculty advisor

Application materials must be e-mailed to fellowships@aera.net no later than April 6th, 2009. Direct all questions to George L. Wimberly, AERA Director of Social Justice and Professional Development, at fellowships@aera.net or 202-238-3200.

About AERA: AERA, founded in 1916, is concerned with improving the educational process by encouraging scholarly inquiry related to education and evaluation and by promoting the dissemination and practical application of research results. AERA shares the products of scholarly research with peers, future educational researchers, practitioners, policymakers, and the public through its annual meeting, publications, and professional development activities.

About ABS: ABS is a national, professional organization of sociologists and social scientists, founded by women and men of African descent. The organization’s mission is to build a tradition of scholarship that will serve Black people in perpetuity. ABS membership is neither currently, nor has it ever been restricted to scholars of African descent. Their interests, however, define the focus of the organization’s work.

Examining Doctoral Education Across Academic Disciplines Using A Social Justice Perspective

Guest Editors: Benita J. Barnes and Shuli Arieh Archer

Doctoral education has long been considered the crown jewel of the American higher education system, and it is thought to attract the best and the brightest students the world has to offer. However, the notion of “the best and the brightest” can be problematic because historically this term has been narrowly defined. Therefore, the question becomes: How can doctoral education become inclusive so that it truly reflects the best and brightest regardless, and in light of, people’s social identities based upon race, class, gender, sexual orientation, religion, and ability?

This special theme issue aims to be the first collection of writings on doctoral education to explicitly use a social justice perspective, to focus on the impact in doctoral education of social inequality based on social identities, including residency status (i.e., US-born students, recent migrant students, or international students). The purpose of this issue is to explore the ways in which doctoral education may be failing in its mission to attract and retain the most talented students across academic disciplines. We wish to address the doctoral experiences of many students who have experienced structural inequities in their prior education, lack of access to cultural and social capital, and other limitations within the larger society.

We welcome scholarly research and theoretical perspectives that examine the many social justice concerns that shape doctoral students’ experiences at personal, interpersonal, or programmatic levels. Topics can include:

Admission and Access — Retention — Time-to-Degree — Department Culture and Climate

First Generation Doctoral Students — Academic Socialization Processes

Research or Teaching Assistantships — Fellowships, grants, stipends

Financial aid, family support — Peer community, housing, quality of life

Advisor/Advisee Relationships — Mentoring — Course Curriculum — Comprehensive Exams

Dissertation Writing — School/Life Balance — Program Policy — Other Relevant Topics

Format: See our website http://www.eee-journal.com for Instructions for Authors.

Timeline: Submission of 3 hard copies and an electronic disk with the file saved as a Rich Text Format document by November 1, 2009 mailed to Equity & Excellence in Education, 370 Hills South, 111 Thatchers Road, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003. Please address any questions to Guest Editor Benita J. Barnes (barnesbj@educ.umass.edu). This special issue is scheduled to be published in February 2011.
