Dr. Martina Nieswandt—Principal Investigator
Associate Professor, Department of Teacher Education & Curriculum Studies, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Professional Interests:
Students’ interests and motivation; Computational media for learning; Learning in-and out-of-school; External representations and student cognition.; Motivation, affects and cognition in learning and teaching science in grade K-16; Science teacher identity; Issues of English language learners in science classes; Urban education with emphasis on science teaching and learning.

E-mail: mnieswan@educ.umass.edu

Elizabeth McEneaney, PhD — Co – Principal Investigator
Assistant Professor, Department of Teacher Education & Curriculum Studies, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Professional Interests:
Sociology of education, program evaluation and the use of data by school administrators and teachers, educational policy, urban education, the charter school movement, the role of community and non-profit organizations in supporting schooling and child well-being, authentic assessment, research methods and statistics.

E-mail: emcenean@educ.umass.edu

Research Assistants:

Miancheng Guo is a doctoral student in Science Education at the UMass College of Education. His learning and research interests include students' interest and motivation in science and engineering, inquiry-based teaching and learning, and design-based science.

E-mail: mianchengguo@educ.umass.edu

Hyunsook Shin is a doctoral student at the University of Massachusetts College of Education. Her focus is on interdisciplinary literacy development for English language learners as well as mainstream students, she is interested in ways of students empowering with integrated learning of literacy skills and content knowledge.

E-mail: mianchengguo@educ.umass.edu

Nyudlia Araeva, MPPA — Project Coordinator
Nyudlia is a graduate of Center for Public Policy and Administration at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Her professional and research interests include women's empowerment, social justice, public health and community health education.