Seth Coluzzi is an assistant professor of musicology at Brandeis University and a scholar of the music, poetry, and culture of late-Renaissance Italy. His work focuses on issues of analysis, mode, and text-music relations in the Italian madrigal, and has appeared in Music Theory Spectrum, Journal of Musicology, Music and Letters, and the collection Perspectives on Luca Marenzio’s Secular Music. His current book project examines the musical settings, texts, and theatrical history of Battista Guarini’s pastoral tragicomedy Il pastor fido from 1585–1630. Alongside his scholarly work, Seth is an active singer-songwriter and a performer of classical ballet.
