

First-Year Enrollment in Gen Ed Courses 2007-2008

The Office of Academic Planning and Assessment (OAPA) analyzed first-year enrollment in Gen Ed courses and created a spreadsheet (next page) that indicates the percentage of students enrolled in each course. Findings show that more than 80% of first-year students are enrolled in 70 courses.

An analysis of course characteristics shows that there are a number of courses with General Education designations that enroll a relatively small proportion (<50%) of students who are taking the course to fulfill a Gen Ed requirement. In most cases the non-Gen Ed students are taking the course to fulfill a major or some other requirement. Table 1 shows the proportion of courses within each designation that have this "mixed" enrollment. The first two rows show the number of courses that fall into each of the two course categories. The third row shows the proportion of all Gen Ed courses within the designation that have mixed enrollment. The fourth row shows the proportion of courses that reflect 80% of all first year Gen Ed enrollments that fall into this category.

The high number of Physical Science and R2 courses (particularly those with the greatest proportion of first year enrollments) that fall into the "mixed" category is particularly noteworthy. Social and Behavioral sciences also have a relatively high proportion of courses with mixed enrollments.
