Boston Labor Council

Kandace Montgomery is an unapologetically fierce black, queer, feminist, organizer who is done with intentional oppression placed on her people for the sole benefit of corporate profits and to uphold white supremacy. Now, she is part of the lead team of Black Lives Matter Minneapolis and is working with all the amazing, powerful, beautiful black folks across the region and nation to shut down business as usual, heal and build collectively, and demand that ALL #BlackLivesMatter.

Kandace also works as an organizer with TakeAction MN and is building collective power with women of color in the Twin Cities region who are working to center work around race and gender justice.

Lindsay McCluskey graduated from UMass Amherst in 2009 and was deeply engaged in student organizing around issues of college access and affordability. She participated in Tent State University, a week-long encampment on the campus lawn addressing the cost of public higher education. In the next 3 years, she helped to found the Public Higher Education Network of Massachusetts, organize the 2007 General Student Strike.

Since 2012, Lindsay has been working in various capacities in the labor movement. She is currently an organizer at the Greater Boston Labor Council, where she is working on wage theft prevention, organizing young workers, and building solidarity between unions.
