A series of presentations showcasing social science contributions to critical issues facing society

STATISTICS AND PROTESTS AS WEAPONS OF RESISTANCE AGAINST RACIALIZED MASS INCARCERATION AND AGGRESSIVE POLICING

March 30, 2016 | 11:30 am
Campus Center, Hadley Room (10th Floor)

Pamela Oliver is a professor of sociology at the University of Wisconsin who has published many articles and a book on collective action and social movements. Since 1999, she has devoted much of her time to analyzing and speaking about statistical patterns of racial disparity in criminal justice in Wisconsin and the nation. She has made over 100 public presentations on these issues and served on the Governor’s Commission to Reduce Racial Disparities in Criminal Justice in 2007-8. She is working on a project about the politics of incarceration and analyzing differences among US states and metro areas in their racial disparity patterns.

Sponsored by the UMass Department of Sociology and the UMass College of Social and Behavioral Sciences

2015-2016 RESISTANCE SERIES
This themed series, underwritten by the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, will continue throughout the semester with other distinguished social scientists sharing their perspectives on resistance.