

SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY & SOCIETY INITIATIVE

at the University of Massachusetts Amherst

2009 EVENTS

September 24, 2009

Information & Communication Technologies and Digital Government: The Turkish Case

4-5 PM, Thompson 620

Turhan Mentes, Secretary General, Hacettepe University, Turkey

October 23, 2009

Ethics in Science & Engineering: Redefining Tools and Resources

8 am - 5 PM, WEB DuBois Library, 26th Floor

Invitation Only; organized by the Ethics in Science and Engineering National Clearinghouse (ESENCE)

October 30, 2009

Open Government: Transparency, Participation & Collaboration

12 noon, School of Management 108

Beth Noveck, US Deputy Chief Technology Officer for Open Government

November 2, 2009

Experimenting with Democracy: Results from the Study of Online Town-halls with Members of Congress

3:30 PM, Campus Center 917

David Lazer, Associate Professor, Northeastern University; Director, Program on Networked Governance

November 5, 2009

2nd US-Korea Info. & Communication Technology-Based Policy Forum

World Bank, Washington DC; Registration Required

Organized by the National Information Society Agency of Korea

November 6, 2009

Introduction to ATLAS.ti and CAT for Qualitative Data Analysis

10 am - 4 PM, Tobin Hall

Stuart Shulman, Asst. Professor of Political Science, UMass and Director, Qualitative Data Analysis Program

Organized by the Center for Research on Families; Registration Required

The Science, Technology, and Society Initiative (STS) at the University of Massachusetts Amherst is based in the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences and the Center for Public Policy and Administration. The STS Initiative advances multidisciplinary collaboration among the natural, physical and social sciences, engineering and public policy and is a catalyst for innovative, collaborative research. For more information about STS, please visit www.umass.edu/sts.