

SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY & SOCIETY INITIATIVE

at the University of Massachusetts Amherst

2010 EVENTS

March 5, 2010

e-Government Development in Russia: Key Success Factors

1 -2 PM, Thompson 620

Evgeny Styrin, School of Public Administration, Lomonosov Moscow State University and Visiting Scholar, Center for Technology in Government, SUNY, Albany

March 22, 2010

Inside and Outside the ICT Center in urban Delhi: Understanding "Muslim Women" as Subjects of New Technologies and Development Interventions

12-1 PM, Thompson 620

Sreela Sarkar, National Center for Digital Government Doctoral Fellow, UMass Amherst

April 2, 2010

Managing Business Commons: Information Infrastructures and Network Actors

12:15-1:15 PM, Thompson 620

M. Lynne Markus, John W. Poduska Sr. Professor of Information and Process Management, Bentley University

April 23, 2010

Who Reaps the Wealth of Open Networks? Exploring the Social-geography of ICT use in Public Libraries

12-1 PM, Thompson 620

Martha Fuentes-Bautista, Assistant Professor of Communication, UMass Amherst

May 6-7, 2010

JITP2010: The Politics of Open Source

Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center, Room 163C

A conference organized by the Journal of Information Technology and Politics

Pre-registration is required. Visit www.umass.edu/jitp

The Science, Technology, and Society Initiative (STS) at the University of Massachusetts Amherst is based in the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences and the Center for Public Policy and Administration. The STS Initiative advances multidisciplinary collaboration among the natural, physical and social sciences, engineering and public policy and is a catalyst for innovative, collaborative research. For more information about STS, visit www.umass.edu/sts.