Lecture, discussion. Placing women’s experiences at the center of interpretation, this course introduces basic concepts and perspectives in Women’s Studies. Focusing on women’s lives with a particular emphasis on the ways in which gender interacts with race, class, sexual orientation and ethnicity. Central aim is to foster critical reading and thinking about women’s lives, the ways in which the interlocking systems of colonialism, racism, sexism, ethnocentrism and heterosexism shape women’s lives and how women have resisted them.

This course will chart and attempt to understand Black Women’s experiences with work in the US and focus on African American women. Using Black feminist thought we will examine the historical, social and cultural factors that impact both the meanings and experiences of work for African American women and acknowledge some of their achievements. Finally, we will begin to create for ourselves an understanding of how their experiences and meanings can help us in making work, career and life choices. Fulfills Women of Color Requirement for majors and minors.

This course will present an integrated feminist analysis of the interconnections between gender, race, class, and sexuality as social domination systems, also focusing on these systems as they work in an international context. We will examine the development of materialist feminism as a theoretical perspective, comparing and contrasting it with theoretical perspectives which preceded it, such as radical, liberal, socialist and African American feminism. Issues to be discussed include: how capitalist global development connects to racism, sexism, class inequities, sexuality and women, prostitution as a feminist issue, relations between theory and practice. Texts will include an edited collection on Materialist Feminism, selections from Beverly Guy-Sheftall, ed. Words of Fire: Voices of African-American Feminist Thinkers, and other xeroxed handouts, and an autobiography by a Honduran peasant woman Don't Be Afraid Gringo. Course will be graded on a contract method, and will include a weekly intellectual journal, a take-home exam, and two 5-8 page papers. Prerequisite: WOST 201, Critical Perspectives

WOST 391E/ ECON 348
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 pm

This course uses a wide range of women’s issues to teach varied economic principles and theories. Popular women’s topics in past semesters include women’s increasing labor force participation; gender differences in hiring, promotions, and earnings; the growing poverty rate for female headed households; trade policy effects on women in the US and other countries; and race and class differences in the economic opportunities of women. Empirical assessment of women’s work in the market and in the home in the US and other countries. Reconsideration of traditional issues of political economy, comparative economic history, and labor economics

WOST 394A
Arab Women in Fiction
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15 am

Fiction about Arab women by female and male Arab authors. The imaginative visions created by these authors and the cultural roles the women play in literature and society. Fulfills Women of Color requirement for Women’s Studies majors and minors.

WOST 394H
Black Womanist/Feminist Theory
Monday 3:35-6:05

To understand Black Feminist Thinking, it is important to explore the context out of which it emerges. We will analyze the evolution of Black Feminist Consciousness and Thought in the U.S. as far back from the 1930s to the contemporary time, since the struggle for black women’s liberation which emerged in the mid-1960s is a construction of both intellectual and activist tradition during slavery and during the anti-slavery movement. This course will also be an interpretative analysis of the work and thought produced by a range of leading Black Women writers, scholars and intellectuals in everyday and alternative locations for knowledge production. Fulfills Women of Color requirement for Women’s Studies majors and minors.

WOST 395M/ POLSCI 375
Feminist Theory and Politics
Mon, Wed (lec), Fri (disc) 2:30pm

A theoretical consideration of the variaties of feminism (liberal-feminism, socialist-feminism, anarcha-feminism, radical-feminism, and eco-feminism. Also examines the relation between feminist theory and practice, the historical development of feminism and political theory, current issues within the canon of political theory and the problems of identity and difference(s) as related to race, class, sexual preference, and gender.

WOST 492H/682H
Political Ecology of Women’s Health
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15
Issues common and different to women in industrialized and developing countries; sex differences in health; STD’s and AIDS; fertility and infertility; reproductive control; population and environment; cancer; violence against women; technology, medical technology transfer, and appropriate medical technology. These issues examined in the theoretical framework of concepts of health and disease; personal vs. political responsibility for health and health care; the discourse on health, technological progress, and choice; international human rights instruments on science, technology, development, race, and gender; and the relevance of gender, race, and class structures to health and disease.

WOST 496A Resources in Women’s Studies Research (2 credits)
Emily Silverman
Wednesday 3:35-5:00 pm
WOST Librarian

In this two credit independent study, we will focus on research methods and resources in Women’s Studies, with opportunities to explore primary and secondary sources from Web sites to CD-ROMs, from printed materials to microfilm. Class meetings will permit time for demonstration and hands-on practice with both electronic and paper resources. Recommended for juniors and seniors. Please contact Emily Silverman to sign up at 545-0995 or essilverman@library.umass.edu

WOST 691B Student Research Seminar
Ann Ferguson
Wednesday 11:15-1:45

This seminar is organized around graduate student and faculty presentations of their own research, and will include some readings on general questions of feminist methodology and ethics of research. The seminar will include a public lecture series from 12:15 to 1:30 where Women’s Studies Graduate Certificate students, as well as UMass faculty, other UMass graduate students and visiting faculty, present their research and lead a discussion that includes issues of feminist research. Enrolled students will be expected to do the reading, present their research and discuss others, and keep an intellectual journal recording their reactions to the research presented in the lecture series. 3 credits

WOST 791A International Feminist Theory: Human Rights Issues and Analysis
Janice Raymond
Tuesday 2:30-5:15

This course focuses on what counts as feminist theory in the international arena. What is emerging feminist human rights theory? The more conventional U.S. approach to the teaching of feminist theory has been to examine the alleged schools of feminist thought: e.g., liberal, socialist, radical feminism. This course takes another approach grouping feminist theoretical activity around specific international political concerns and questions. Frameworks used are: 1) core themes or central issues of feminist theorizing; 2) key debates around which feminist theory has been organized; 3) feminist theorizing centered on existing bodies of thought such as critical race theory. The content of the course will focus on international feminist concerns: e.g. sex trafficking and prostitution; gendered war crimes; racial hatred “speech”; feminism and nationalism; female genital mutilation; economic “development” theory; reproductive technologies; population programs and policy; the relationship between theory and activism in the NGO context; and the role of both national and international law in furthering women’s rights. The goal of the course is to do theory emerging from a consideration of specific human rights issues, themes, debates, and existing theories.

ANTHRO 205  Inequality and Oppression  Robert Paynter
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

The roots of racism and sexism and issues they raise. The cultural, biological and social contexts of race and gender and examination of the truth of fallacies about biological variation, genetic determinism, human adaptation and the basis of human behavior. Historical influences on our views of how people differ from each other and of overlap among biology, politics, and economics.

ANTHRO 597A  Abortion, Motherhood, and Society  John Cole
Tuesday 9:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

This class is about the political economy of reproduction. It begins with an examination of the abortion controversy in the United States. It asks about people’s attitudes toward abortion and the ideological, social, political and economic issues that swirl around it. It also asks about alternatives to abortion both as a personal and as a social issue. These same issues are then explored in other societies and at other times that will include Japanese, Chinese, Third World as well as European and North American cases. The inquiry also broadens to examine issues of fertility, population growth, and gender and age relations. All this will be put into the context of development and ecological problems.

ASIAN LANGUAGES AND LITERATURE DEPARTMENT

JAPAN 560H  Women in Japanese Literature & Film  Doris Bargen
Monday 2:30-5:15 p.m.

Explores a variety of Japanese women’s issues addressed by both male and female authors in prose, poetry, drama and film. How are women’s roles as daughters, lovers, wives, mothers, and professionals culturally constructed? What triggers gender conflict in Japan and how does the balance of power between men and women shift from ancient to modern times? Topics of discussion will be female eroticism, women’s marital and reproductive problems, and their cultural influence.

Survey of the ancient and medieval stories of women and men and their goddesses. Begins in the ancient Near East, with the stories of Ianna and Ishtar and their devotees, and then turns to the classical world of Greece and Rome, with the Homeric Hymns and the tale of Cupid and Psyche. Surveys the images of women in the three religions of the book--Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, as well as Taoism and Buddhism. The medieval world inherited traditions, and we'll read stories from The Arabian Nights, The Canterbury Tales and the Decameron that illustrate these themes. Learn about the complexity of images of the feminine, including women as goddesses and priestess, as leaders of their people, as the embodiment of sexuality and fertility, as pious housewives and cunning deceivers. Readings; Baring and Crashford, The Myth of the Goddess; Young, An Anthology of Sacred Texts by and about Women; Kinsley, The Goddesses Mirror; Wolkstein and Kramer, Inanna; Rayor, Sappho’s Lyre; selections from the Arabian Nights, Canterbury Tales, and Decameron. Requirements: Journal every two weeks, three five-page papers, class participation.

Review of literature by and for medieval women, including saints lives, lyric poetry, romances, mystical treatises, letters and sermons. Examines the canon of medieval women writers as it now stands--Marie de France, Christine de Pisan, Hildegard of Bingen, Dame Julian of Norwich, Marguerite Porete, Hadewijch, Mechthild of Magedeburg, with particular emphasis on mystical text--and look at the new translations and writings on medieval women in the past decade. What is the current state of medieval scholarship on women? How have these achievements affected the view of the Middle Ages as a whole? What are the fruitful areas for new scholars to explore? Requirements: some background in Medieval literature or history; reading knowledge of at least one medieval vernacular language or medieval Latin. Several seminar reports, final paper. Texts: Petroff, Medieval Women’s Visionary Literature and Body and Soul; Newman, Sister of Wisdom; Cazelles; The Lady as Saint; several anthologies of critical writing.
Dress and Culture
Susan Michelman
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.

Dress and culture examined from an interdisciplinary and cross-cultural perspective focusing on diversity and social change. Discussion of sociocultural perspective focusing on diversity and social change. Discussion of sociocultural meaning of dress in European, African, North and South American, Pacific, and Asian cultures. Course objectives are to understand how dress is a form of non-verbal communication and its sociocultural importance in diverse cultural settings. To learn the importance of dress as a vehicle by which various identities (cultural, gender, personal), roles (gender, social, status, etc.), values (personal, cultural), and attitudes are identified and expressed. To gain an appreciation of cultural diversity as it is expressed through physical appearance.

EDUC 697A  Women and Higher Education  Peg Jablonski
Wednesday 4:00-6:30 p.m.

This course is an introduction to the issues affecting women in the academy as students, teachers, leaders, and scholars. Some of the topics include: barriers to women’s full participation in higher education, including sexual harassment and racism; the question of coeducation versus single sex education; conditions for women undergraduates including the so called “chilly climate”. In addition, the course will explore issues germane to female faculty members, barriers to institutional leadership, and the goals and contributions of women’s studies as well as the current attack on feminist scholarship.

EDUC 752  Gender Issues in International Education  TBA
Wednesday 1:00-4:00 p.m.

Examines the role and status of women in various societies, with an emphasis on Third World countries in the process of economic development. Topics will include the effects of the development process on women, women’s skills in survival and adaptation, women as preservers of culture, and the effect of education on these processes. Participants will (1) examine the implications of the development process for women in the future, (2) explore methods to analyze women’s issues from a political-economic perspective, and (3) identify and critique various approaches which have been used to include women in the development process. Course requirements will include a short initial paper, a class presentation, and a final project/paper.

ENGL 470  Virginia Woolf  (Advanced Seminar)  Laura Doyle
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

Virginia Woolf is one of the most influential writers of the twentieth century. Her experimental storytelling practice opened up the world in utterly new ways, and we will ask exactly how and why it did so. While our main concern will be to understand Woolf’s writing well and intimately, her work will also serve as the occasion for studying narrative and cultural theories. We will explore issues bearing on literary modernism, storytelling craft, sexual identity and writing, the function of art in modern western cultures, and the political history of the novel. We will read selections from Woolf's essays and memoirs as well as several novels. As an advanced seminar the course is writing-intensive, including drafts and revisions of all papers, and the writing of a major research paper.

ENGL 497A  Shakespeare and the Female Heroic  Kathleen Swaim
Thursday 1:00-3:45 p.m.

Shakespeare’s comedies typically privilege female characters and values, as his tragedies typically privilege males. His heroic women in comedies constantly play against the culture’s patriarchal norms. Sometimes the principle women evade patriarchal expectation and constrictions by dressing as men, sometimes they sexually or otherwise substitute for each other, sometimes they feign death until their chastity is no longer in question. The Honors Seminar will explore a series of Shakespearean comedies in which women challenge patriarchal limits, including (probably) As You Like It, Twelfth Night, Much Ado About Nothing, Measure for Measure, All’s Well That Ends Well, Pericles, and The Winter’s Tale. It will establish the patriarchal context by way of contemporary historical documents-such as marriage rites and homilies and advice books for women and the literary critical context by way of supplementary theoretical essays. It will also explore the nature and limits of comedy, a dramatic genre that, in Shakespeare’s hands, typically celebrates love, marriage, family, nurturance and life, and that typically allows individuals and societies to overcome aberrations and move into healing, generation, and regeneration. The course will expect active participation in class discussion appropriate to a seminar and an Honors course. Students will be asked to produce 2 or 3 short and 1 long essay or project. Previous study of Shakespeare would be helpful but is not required.

ENGL 497C  Ethnic Autobiography  Margo Culley
Monday, Wednesday 11:15 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

See description of ENGL 891G below.

ENGL 891G  Ethnic Autobiography  Margo Culley
Wednesday 1:25-4:25 p.m.

This course will focus on selected modern and (mostly) contemporary American autobiographies that self-consciously construct specific cultural racial and/or ethnic identities including texts that intentionally “interrogate” and blur such constructs. Students may choose to write short (2-3 pp.) weekly response papers (ten) or to write an extended seminar paper (20-25 pp.). The seminar paper may focus on one tradition of ethnic autobiography or use a comparatist approach.

ENGL 891H  Queer Theory  Deborah Carlin
Wednesday 2:30-5:00 p.m.

Queer theory is more query than theory at the present historical moment, a set of conflicting questions rather than methodological presuppositions. This course will approach queer theory as an evolving critique--paying particular attention to its intellectual practices as well as to its social and its cultural politics. Three distinct focuses will emerge as the semester progresses: the politics of queer signification, representation(s) and reading queerly, and queer pedagogies. Issues addressed will include: queer historiography, identities within the politics of the postmodern, whether gender politics and queer theory are irreconcilable pursuits, and the ways in which emerging discourses of race and class confront and complicate predominately white (male) and privileged academic theories.

ENGL 891K  Rhetoric and Women’s Diaries  Jean Nienkamp
Thursday 1:25-4:25 p.m.
This will be a Janus-faced course, examining both rhetorical theories and women’s diaries for how they illuminate each other. On the one hand, the course is an “applied rhetoric.” We will read a variety of rhetorical theories—that is, theories about how language affects people—to give us several “terministic screens” through which to view diary literature. On the other hand, the course is about diaries and how they often offer a textual trace of the writer’s process of internalizing cultural imperatives and reshaping or translation them to interpret—and create—their own lives and identities. Women’s diaries are particularly amenable to this kind of interpretation because, for a number of reasons, the cultural imperatives and the personal experiences may not be a comfortable fit, so we can expect to find traces of interpretive struggle.

ENGL 891L Contemporary Issues in Feminist Theory
Jenny Spencer
Thursday 1:00-3:45 p.m.

The focus of this course is on a range of issues and problems that contemporary feminist theorists and scholars are currently working through. The authors we will read assume an audience who values feminist inquiry and have a basic familiarity with the field (i.e., this is not intended as an introductory course). There will be sections on Men in Feminism, Feminism and Post-Colonialism, Women and Race, Women and Representation, Women in the Academic Workplace. Issues around feminist pedagogy will be with us throughout the semester. Advanced undergraduates may participate with the permission of the instructor.

HIST 389 U.S. Women’s History Since 1890 (HSD)
Joyce Berkman
Tuesday, Thursday 1:25 p.m., plus discussion section

Lecture and discussions. U.S. women’s experience 1890 to the present, exploring female consciousness and gender relationships analyzing customs, attitudes, policies, laws concerning women’s place; attention to social class, ethnicity, race, gender, religion, regionality, sexual preference. Interdisciplinary methodology. Assorted paperbacks—fiction and nonfiction. Course journal or two essays. Prerequisite: sophomore standing or higher.

HIST 592A History of the Women’s Movement in the U.S.
Joyce Berkman
1965-present
Tuesday, Thursday 3:30-4:15 p.m.

We will examine one of the most transformative movements in US history since the mid-sixties. Along with the Civil Rights movement, the struggle to bring about sexual and gender equality and equity has had profound repercussions in every sphere of American life. Whether the focus is reproductive rights, sexual orientation, elected representatives to state and national office, educational and athletic opportunities or organization of household and child rearing and how a woman or a man forms a sense of gendered self, the women’s movement’s imprint is indelible. In our study of the movement, we will explore its interconnections with other movements for social change as well as the impact of antifeminist efforts.

Junior year writing seminar.

HIST 797B  U.S Women’s History Sources and Methods  Kathy Peiss
(4 credits)  Thursday 9:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.

A course about research methods, evidence, and interpretation in U.S. women’s history. Focuses on the history of women in western Massachusetts in the 19th and 20th centuries, using local record, artifacts, and other materials. Intends to familiarize you with different kinds of sources, the techniques historians use to understand them, and the problems of analysis that habitually arise. Note that some class sessions will be held off-site. Background in women’s history is not required but highly recommended; if you do not have that preparation, see instructor for short reading list. Permission of the instructor is required.

POLITICAL SCIENCE DEPARTMENT
318 THOMPSON HALL 545-2438

POLSCI 297C  Cultural Theory and Politics  Barbara Cruikshank
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15 a.m.

This course approaches the traditional topics of political inquiry (freedom, power, conflict and change, equality) in the domain of culture. The politicization of culture (culture wars, sex wars, English-Only, to name a few) comes out of the political commitments of both the left and the right. At the same time that cultural conflicts are proliferating, our ability to subject cultural conflict to political solutions is questionable. Culture will be treated as a domain of politics and power, a domain constituted by politics and power, even though it is a domain resistant to deliberate political reform. We will examine how the location and conceptualization of politics itself is transfigured into cultural politics (e.g. ‘family values’ policy, ‘politics of representation’, ‘culture of poverty’).

PSYCHOLOGY
403 TOBIN HALL  545-0377

PSYCH 308  Psychology of Women (SBD)  Carole Beal
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15

This course is designed to provide an introduction to the psychology of women, including a review and evaluation of psychological theories and research about female development and the life experiences that primarily affect girls and women. We will consider the diversity of female experience, as well as common themes that are shared by most women. PRIORITY TO PSYCHOLOGY MAJORS.

All Departmental courses except 100-level automatically count for Women’s Studies credit. For additional courses covering applied areas of Women’s Studies, consult the Component Course section, Pages 15-21.

SOCIO 106 Race, Sex, and Social Class (SBD)
#1 Monday, Wednesday 10:10 plus discussion Dan Clawson
#2 Tuesday, Thursday 11:15 plus discussion Pamela Quiroz

SOCIO 106F #3 Monday, Wednesday, Friday 11:15 (PATTERSON) TBA

Lecture. An overview of sociological approach to race, class and gender inequalities--especially economic inequalities--in the contemporary United States. Some attention will also be devoted to the presidential election and its potential impact on the future of race, class and gender inequalities. Within the segment devoted to race, African Americans receive most emphasis. Readings consist of one book and selection of Xeroxed articles. Evaluation is based upon several pop quizzes, three exams (two during the semester and a final), as well as two five-page papers.

SOCIO 222 The Family (SBD) TBA
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 9:05 a.m., 12:20 p.m.
Tuesday, Thursday 2:30-3:45 p.m.

Lecture, discussion. Historical development of the family: changes in household structure, in relations between husband and wife, between parents and children and among extended kin. Social forces shaping the contemporary family, from the choice of a mate, to marriage (both his and hers) and kinship, to parenting (from the perspective of both parents and children), to the diverse endings of marriage. Three exams.

SOCIO 393A Gender and Education Pamela Quiroz
Tuesday, Thursday 2:30 p.m.

The academic experience of girls and women along with the factors affecting female educational attainment. Focus on the schooling experience of girls and women within the U.S. education system, with attempts to be inclusive of sexual orientation and racial and ethnic diversity. Begins with an historical account and sociological analysis of girls’ and women’s entry into formal education, providing backdrop for examination of contemporary experiences of females from elementary school through the graduate years. Women’s status and experience as educators and professionals in the educational institution. Sociology, history, journalism, etc., used to provide an overview of women’s placement within the academic structure and the impact of gender on the realization of educational, economic and even social opportunities.

SOCIO 497X Sexuality, Gender and the Law Janice Irvine
Monday 1:25-4:25 p.m.

Legal issues related to both sexuality and gender have recently assumed great visibility. This course will examine sex/gender legal developments in a social and political context. We will look at particular topics, for example sodomy laws, sexual harassment, and sex education in public schools. The course will emphasize the reciprocal relationship between the law and cultural and theoretical influences.

SOCIO 597A Gender, Race and Welfare State Formation Susan Thistle
Monday 16:00-18:30

How the process of welfare state formation has varied by gender and race/ethnicity in the United States. Central goal is to understand the inadequacy of current social policy addressing women’s poverty; approached through consideration of theories of welfare state formation (with recognition of the underlying dynamics of industrialization), variation in the timing of movement into the labor force by gender and

SPAN 756  Early Spanish-American Women Writers  Nina Scott
Wednesday 4:00-6:30 p.m.  (in Spanish)

This seminar will focus on women writers of Spanish America, from the Colonial era to the end of the 19th Century. We will look at women’s roles in society (conquistadors, nuns, witches, angels-in-the-house, etc.), networks of friendship among them, anxiety of authorship, etc. We will study a variety of texts, including letters, spiritual autobiographies, poetry, novels and women’s magazines. Authors to be covered include Catalina Juana Ines de la Cruz, Dolores Veintimilla, Mercedes Cabello de Carbonera, Gertrudis Gomez de Avellaneda, Soedad Acosta de Samper and Juana Manuela Gorriti. Prerequisite: graduate level proficiency in Spanish.

SOCIAL THOUGHT AND POLITICAL ECONOMY (STPEC)
MACHMER HALL  545-0043

STPEC 491H  Asian and Asian American Women: Myths of Deference, Arts of Resistance  Amrita Basu
Thursdays 6:00-8:30 p.m.

Even the most sympathetic observers often assume that Asian women are so deeply oppressed that they demure in the face of intolerable conditions. Such notions of women’s deference find echoes in popular conceptions of Asian American women. Part of the work of this course is to question assumptions of women’s quiescence by redefining agency and activism. But an equally important challenge is to avoid romanticizing resistance by recognizing victimization in the absence of agency, agency in the absence of activism, and activism in the absence of social change. Thus while appreciating the inventive ways in which Asian and Asian American women resist, we will explore why such resistance may perpetuate their subjugation.

WAGS 11  Cross-Cultural Construction of Gender  Michele Barale

Introduces students to the issues involved in the social and historical construction of gender and gender roles from a cross-cultural and interdisciplinary perspective. Topics will include the uses and limits of biology in explaining human gender differences; male and female sexualities including homosexuality; women and social change; women’s participation in production and reproduction; the relationship among gender, race and class as intertwining oppressions; and the functions of visual and verbal representation in the creating, enforcing and contesting of gender norms.

WAGS 16  English Women in the Age of the Enlightenment  Margaret Hunt

Investigates the history of European women in the period approximately 1680 to 1830 in both Western and Eastern Europe. Looks at female philosophers and scientists, women monarchs (including Queen Anne of England and Catherine the Great of Russia), prophetesses, revolutionaries (including Olympe de Gouges and Mme. Roland), peasants, prostitutes and cross-dressers. There will be attention to original sources (autobiographies, political tracts, and court cases) and to the ways modern-day historians make sense of this formative period in the history of both modern gender roles and European culture. Knowledge of one or more European languages other than English recommended but not required.

WAGS 30  In Their Own Words: Autobiographies of Women  Rose Olver

How does the writing of autobiography help a woman affirm, construct, or reconstruct an authentic self? How does she resolve the conflict between telling the truth and distorting it in making her life into art? Is the making of art, indeed, her chief preoccupation; or is her goal to record her life in the context of her times, her religion, or her relationship to others? Reading autobiographies of women writers helps us raise, if not resolve, these questions. We shall also consider how women write about experiences particular to women as shown in their struggles to survive adversity; their sense of themselves as authorities or challengers of authority, as well as their sense of what simply gives them pain or joy. Readings from recent work in the psychology of woman will provide models for describing women's development, as writings of women in turn will show how these models emerge from real lives. Includes traditional autobiography, historical memoir, poetry, journals and personal narratives, psychological studies, criticism and theory: Maxine Hong Kingston’s The Woman Warrior, Maya Angelou’s I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, poetry and prose by Elizabeth Bishop, Shirley Abbot’s Womenfolks, Charlotte Bronte’s Jane Eyre, Jamaica Kincaid’s Annie John, Carol Gilligan’s In a Different Voice, Mary Field-Belenky, et al., Women’s Ways of Knowing, and recent work by Janet Surrey, as well as selections from works by Paule Marshall, Virginia Woolf, Toni Morrison, Alice Walker, Lorene Cary, and, of course, Anonymous.
Will examine genders and sexualities in Latin America. This will be an interdisciplinary course making use of literary documentation. Will expose students to the variety and complexity of issues surrounding gender and sexuality in a continental field that itself denies easy definition. By proceeding ahistorically at times, the course will begin to revise conventional accounts of conquest and colonization as sexual-political processes in which rape, miscegenation, collusion, and all sorts of sexual co-dependencies - both violent and negotiated - appear as important grounds of identity formation. Special attention will be focused on figures or tropes such as Malinche; on the development of racial castes through miscegenation; and on comparative analysis of the rhetorics of differentiation between the Spanish and Portuguese sexual models of colonial reproductions.

Freud located identity formation in the emotion of fear - a boy's fear of castration, a girl's terror at lack. Later theories have agreed that worries about exposure, ridicule, and confession shape the sexual self. Our course will explore the gendered origins and effects of fear, asking how fear of the other sex, and fear about the self, ground identity. We will try to differentiate among forms of fear, comparing anxiety, obsession, trauma, and phobia. Course material will be studied for the ways in which it condenses and substitutes various forms of dread. Course material will include fiction (Pat Barker, Regeneration; Lydia Chukovskaya, Sofia Petrovna; Toni Morrison, Jazz; Mary Shelly, Frankenstein), poetry (by Anna Akhmatova, Rita Dove, Thom Gunn, Elizabeth Macklin); theory (Freud, Torok and Abraham); quasi-autobiography (Kenzaburo Oe, A Quiet Life; Nathalie Sarrute, Childhood), and film (Carrie, M, Perfect World, Psycho, Vertigo). We will ask what cultural and psychological work fear performs: what fears are required for liberation from social taboos? How do adults contain (and repeat) the fears that ruled childhood? Why do we like to be frightened?

Begins with an examination of the experience of women from different racial, ethnic and economic backgrounds during Reconstruction. It will look at changes in family life as a result of increasing industrialization and the westward movement of settler families, and will also look at the settlers’ impact on Native American Women and families. Topics will include the work and familial experiences of immigrant women (including Irish, German, and Italian), women’s reform movements (particularly suffrage, temperance and anti-lynching), the expansion of educational opportunities, and the origins and programs of the Progressives. Examines the agitation for suffrage and the subsequent split among feminists, women’s experience in the labor force, and participation in the world wars. Finally, we will look at the origins of the Second Wave and its struggles to transcend its white middle-class origins.

Looks at women’s experience through the lenses of religion, family and literary culture from the beginning of the nineteenth century through the Gilded Age. Using a mix of primary and secondary sources, students will trace the changing moral values guiding female education as well as the varieties of Christianity that gave shape to different forms of activism. It will also track changing family ideologies, the responsibilities of mothers and constructions of childhood. The course will include women’s texts reflecting on their experiences as daughters, mothers, reformers, slaves, Christians and professionals. Looks at the development of various strands of feminist thought and the production of a class of educated middle-class women interested in blunting the brutalities of capitalism.
Over the past twenty years the body has come into sharp focus in a wide range of disciplines. Recent developments in literary and cultural studies, feminist theory, art, dance, theater, religion, technology, and medicine, have given us multiple ways to view and consider the body. At one end of the spectrum we find the “lived body” where we are fully in and responding to the bodies that we inhabit; at the other, we find out-of-body travel, near-death experiences, virtual bodies in cyberspace. Explores some of these interdisciplinary views and use the questions and images that emerge in the process as jumping off points for creative experiment and expression in different media. What are the images that emerge when we explore the body as a container of memory, an aesthetic ideal, a social and cultural construct, a series of biological and chemical systems, a subordinate vehicle for carrying the mind, a site of contest and conquest? How do different body practices—ranging from sports to yoga to fire walking to ballet— influence our attitudes about life? Projects might include writing a body autobiography, a series of poems, a script for performance, a choreographed dance, a book of body maps, a video piece, or formal research paper.

BLKSTU 44 Issues of Gender in African Literature C.R. Cobham-Sander

Explores the ways in which issues of gender are presented by African writers and perceived by readers and critics of African writing. We will examine the insights and limitations of selected feminist, post-structuralist and post-colonial theories when they are applied to African texts. Also looks at the difference over time in the ways that female and male African writers have manipulated socially acceptable ideas about gender in their work. Tests will be selected from the oeuvres of established writers like Soyinka, Achebe, Ngugi and Head, as well as from among more recent works by writers like Farah, Aidoo, and Dangaremba. Preference will be given to students who have completed a previous course on African literature, history, or society.

ENG 4 Representing Sexualities in Word and Image Jay Grossman

Traces the cultural production of sexual knowledge over the last century, beginning with print and video representations of the AIDS crisis and concluding with Whitman’s daring projections of same-sex desire in the “Calamus” poems first published in 1860. Syllabus undertakes a kind of reverse genealogy, beginning in the present with a range of representations associated with the HIV pandemic (AIDS as “a gay disease” and as “the disease of gayness”) and then moving backward: first to the 1950s and the 1960s (periods often seen, respectively, as those of normative heterosexuality and of sexual revolution), and then to the nineteenth century and an appraisal of Walt Whitman’s writings. Undertakes the sequence of materials partly to answer the question how “we” came to be where “we” are today. Largely directed toward the texts and contexts out of which emerges the “sexual orientation” called “gay male,” but issues of “straightness,” “lesbianism,” “bisexuality,” and recently alternative called “queer” will necessarily arise as well.

ENG 75 Hysteria and America: Stories and History K. Sanchez-Eppler

During the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries the medical practice of treating hysteria with the physical confinement of bed-rest was gradually replaced by the verbal outpourings of the psychoanalytic “talking cure.” This transition reflects changing attitudes towards women -- who are always associated with hysteria -- alterations in the preferred mechanisms of social control from the external to the internal, and a changing understanding of the relation between representation -- telling one’s story -- physical and social realities. Explores these changes and the relations between them through the reading of medical texts and female advice books, Freud’s works on hysteria, especially his case study “Dora,” selections from the writings of Cixous and Foucault, and a variety of American literary texts including Charlotte Perkins Gilman’s The Yellow Wallpaper, Alice James’ Letters and Journals, Henry James’s The Bostonians, Sylvia Plath’s Ariel, and Hilda Doolittle’s Tribute to Angels as well as selections from her Tribute to Freud.

GERMAN 53 Women and Social Change in Germany Ute Brandes
For centuries, German women have sought to add their voices to the dominant political and cultural discourse. Emphasizing the last 200 years, this interdisciplinary course will first review female self-assertions from the Age of Chivalry up to the eighteenth century. Then focuses on the emerging bourgeois images of femininity and contrast these with late nineteenth century female demands for education and suffrage. In discussing the twentieth century, we will trace the sharply diverging ideological prescriptions for ideal womanhood in the political contexts of the Weimar Republic, in Hitler Germany, and in both post-war states, communist East and democratic West Germany. Readings in literary, political and autobiographical texts, plus music, art, and films. Works studied will be music by Hildegard von Bingen and Clara Schumann; literature by Benedikte Naubert and Bettina von Arnim, Sophie La Roche’s The History of Lady Sophia Sternheim, Fanny Lewald’s Autobiography, Anna Seghers’ The Excursion of the Dead Girls, and Christa Wolf’s Kassandra; art by Kethe Kollwitz and Paula Modersohn-Becker; speeches by Louise Aston, Rosa Luxemburg, and Alice Schwarzer; films by Leni Riefenstahl, Helma Sanders-Brahms, Margarethe von Trotta, and Ulrike Ottinger. Conducted in English, with German majors required to do a substantial portion of the reading in German.

PS 39  Re-Imagining Law: Feminist Interpretations  Kristin Bumiller
LJST 39

Feminist theory raises questions about the compatibility of the legal order with women’s experience and understandings and calls for a reevaluation of the role of law in promoting social change. It invites us to inquire about the possibilities of a “feminist jurisprudence” and the adequacy of other critical theories which promise to make forms of legal authority more responsive. Will consider women as victims and users of legal power. Will ask how particular practices constitute gendered subjects in legal discourse. How can we imagine a legal system more reflective of women’s realities? The nature of legal authority will be considered in the context of women’s ordinary lives and reproductive roles, their active participation in political and professional change, their experiences with violence and pornography as well as the way they confront race, class and ethnic barriers.

RUSSIAN 26  Gender, Identity Russia  Janet Gyatso
Susan Niditch

As the study of Russian culture opens itself to new questions about gender and identity, and as the identity of Russia itself is changing before our eyes, we will examine the ways in which notions of sex and self have changed in Russian history and across genres. How have genders and identities been imagined by heroes, narrators, poets, memoirists, fiction writers, and readers? Readings come from works by Pushkin, Pavlova, Tolstoy, Gippius, Kollontai, Platonov, Akhmatova, Tsvetaeva, Ginzburg, Palei, Vasilenko, Petrushevskaaya, and Ahvarts, with some recent feminist scholarship about Russia and selected feminist theorists whose work is pertinent to questions of identity. Special attention will be paid to the boom of Russian women’s writing since 1987, to the complex and long-standing hostility toward feminism among members of the Russian intelligentsia, and to the emergence of feminist and lesbian and gay movements in the 1990s. All readings and discussions in English.

CCS/HA 197 Cross-Cultural Readings of The Short Story
Component
Eva Rueschmann
Monday, Wednesday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

This course will introduce students to the short story form and its many stylistic and thematic variations in European, African, Asian, Latin American and North American literatures of the twentieth century. We will examine various modes and techniques of narration and representation in relation to both storytelling traditions indigenous to specific cultures and international stylistic influences. This course will also provide an opportunity to apply different analytical and critical approaches to short fiction, including formalist, folkloric, biographical, psychoanalytic, feminist, and post-colonial strategies. We will consider three cinematic adaptations of short stories for comparative purposes, John Huston's The Dead, Joce Chopra's Smooth Talk and Ruy Guerra's Erendira. Stories by James Joyce, Kay Boyle, Ernest Hemingway, Jamaica Kincaid, Jorge Luis Borges, Gabriel Garcia Marquez, Nadine Gordimer, Es'Kia M'phalele, Margaret Atwood, James Baldwin, Cynthia Ozick, Amy Tan, Sandra Cisneros, Ginu Kamani, Edwige Dandikat, Joyce Carol Oates, Hisaye Yamamoto, Leslie Marmon Silko, Laurie Moore, Milan Kundera, and many others. Requirements: two in-class presentations, two shorter papers, and a final comparative essay (final creative project is a possibility).

CCS/HA 234 Traveling Identities
Component
Emigrants, Immigrants, Exiles and Sojourners in Film, Literature And Culture
Eva Rueschmann
Monday 6:30-9:30 Wednesday 2:30-5:20 p.m.

This seminar focuses on the experiences of emigrants, immigrants, exiles and sojourners, which have inspired a number of recent and contemporary novels, feature films, documentaries, autobiographies and theoretical debates about cultural identity and place. Using cultural studies of travel and displacement, ethnic studies, and psychoanalytic theories of identity as critical frameworks for discussion, we will examine some of the following issues arising out of cinematic, fictional, autobiographical and theoretical texts on migration and displacement: the complexities of adaptation or resistance to new cultures; culture transfer, hybridity and biculturality; the journey as metaphor, escape, physical ordeal and psychological odyssey; the meanings of nostalgia and home; intergenerational conflicts between tradition and modernity; protagonists' and artists' representation and negotiations of national and ethnic identity; the cultural and psychological consequences of border crossings; and the interconnections between language, culture, and sense of self.

HA 135 Music of Africa and its Diaspora
Component
Jay Pillay
Tuesday, Thursday 9:00 - 10:20 a.m.

This course concentrates on some of the traditional and contemporary musical styles of Africa and its transplants into the Caribbean and South America. Using a number of case studies including South African kwela, mbqanga and mbube, Nigerian juju, Ashanti kete drumming, Ghanaian highlife, Zairean soukous, Zimbabwean chimurenga, Latin American salsa, the Caribbean steel band, and Brazilian samba, we will discuss issues raised by Africa and her diasporic musics: the relationship of music to cultural identity, gender construction, nationalism, political struggle, ethics, modernism, westernization, and the recording and broadcast industries. Theories of traditional and popular culture will also be Gender is neither fixed nor stable. Rather, what we think of as "masculine" and "feminine" evolves over time and changes from era to era. When we consider the broad sweep of U.S. history, we can easily perceive that in every major era peoples' ideas about masculinity and femininity shifts, and people in different racial and ethnic groups and in different classes have vastly different ideas about the proper behavior for men and women. Are these shifts due to developments and changes in our socio-economic system—the advent of large and impersonal cities and workplaces teeming with new immigrant workers? Do our ideas about gender change in response to war? Are they a result of the new social science—for instance, as the result of the work of the sexologists writing at the end of the nineteenth century who divide humans into "normal" heterosexual and "deviant" homosexual groups? What kinds of cultural representations are created to convey changing concepts of gender? Using novels, memoir, biography, film, and historical and cultural studies, we will examine competing conceptualizations of gender and sexuality in U.S. society and culture in the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

Since the invention of photography in 1839, women have played an active role in every stage of the medium's history. While early historic accounts did not acknowledge their contributions, several recent books have begun to remedy the situation. In this course, we will survey the major periods of photographic history, concentrating on the work of women photographers worldwide. We will examine women's role primarily in art photography, but also in commercial and vernacular venue. Students will complete individual research projects and dependent on funding, we hope to produce a collaborative CD ROM based on interviews with contemporary photographers and critics.

This course will examine the social structures and ideologies of gender, race, class. For instance, when we consider the situation of battered women, we see that all women confront gendered social structures and prejudice. Yet, the experiences of those women and their options vary depending on their race and class. Through the use of examples as the one above, drawn from both history and public policy, we will work to hone our critical skills in analyzing gender, race, and class in American society. This course is designed for advanced Division II and Division III students. Students will have the opportunity to develop comprehensive research projects and to present their own work for class discussion.

NS/SS 238
Men and Reproduction: Biological, Social, and Ethnical Matters
Fay Schrater
Tuesday, Thursday 2:00-3:20 p.m.

After decades of emphasis on contraception, reproduction, and reproductive health for women, attention is shifting to a need to examine those matters for men. The details of the issues are rarely the same, however, because of differences in the biological as well as the gender-determined roles of men and women. Further, because women suffer a far greater burden of reproductive mortality and morbidity than do men, and because women also have the greater responsibilities for the physical and social consequences of fertility, it is critical to determine the ways in which "male matters" affect the reproductive health and rights for women. It is also important to analyze the biological, social, and ethical complexities of the roles of men in human reproduction and family life. Students will read and discuss literature drawn from the biological and social sciences that covers the following topics: the availability and effectiveness of contraceptives for men; the dependence of men's attitudes about contraceptives on whether they or their partners are the users and whether use could imply infidelity, whether, and if so, how, environmental toxins affect fertility; the different social, ethical, and physical consequences to men and women of infection with sexually transmitted disease (STD); the attitudes of men toward sexuality and fidelity, the social, ethical and financial responsibilities of men for the children they help beget and for the women who bear those children. Students also will write a term paper on one of the above topics, and give a class talk on the chosen topic.

SS 102
Poverty and Wealth
Laurie Nisonoff
10:30 -11:50 a.m.

Who gets the money in America and who doesn't? Why is there poverty in the richest country in history? Although often sanctified by economic theorists in oblique formulas, the state of poverty and character of wealth go to the heart of what it is to live in America. This course encourages inquiry into a hard accounting of this contemporary social and economic reality. Thematic units include federal income measurement, facts and fictions; the business elite; taxation; family and sexual inequality; race; health care and aging; education; and the history of social welfare programs and charity. To understand how income inequality is perceived and measured, we will also examine three paradigms in economic inquiry: radical, liberal, and conservative. Students will be encouraged to engage in field observations in local settings where the poverty and policy issues we study are likely to be raised. Students with an interest in the community service scholars project are encouraged to enroll. Evaluation will be based on class participation and assigned problem sets and essays.

SS 124
Women and Gender in Early Modern Europe
Jutta Sperling
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

This course is an introduction to the social and cultural history of women and gender in Early Modern Europe. It will focus on Italy, but include a comparative perspective on France, Germany, and England. Among the topics we will discuss are: the "renaissance" of domesticity in fifteenth-century Italy; marriage and the family; the evolution of the dowry-system; neo-platonic theories on beauty, love, and gender; women's roles in court society; the salonnière in seventeenth- and eighteenth-century France; women in the Reformation; images of women rulers, from Elizabeth to Marie Antoinette; the witch-craze; sexual difference in anatomical representations; men's and women's autobiographies; male and female homosexuality; women artists, musicians, scientists, and writers. We will read primary as well as secondary literature.

SS 132  Religious Movements and Social Change  Sue Darlington
component  Monday, Wednesday  2:30-3:50 p.m.

Religion is a powerful social force and is often the basis of, or a coping mechanism for social change. We will explore why people use religion along with politics and/or economics to guide their behavior in situations of social change and how religion responds to and influences change. Through case studies we will examine various religious perspectives and anthropological theories of religion and how these approaches give us insight into current issues. Discussion will focus on the importance of cultural values and understanding in the process of change. Case studies will most likely include early Christianity, cargo cults in Melanesia, liberation theology in Latin America and socially-engaged Buddhism in Thailand.

SS 134  Law and Difference  Flavio Risech-Ozeguera component  Tuesday, Thursday  9:00-10:20 a.m.

This course will examine the law and legal institutions as sites of production, definition and mediation of social difference. Using landmark court decisions and laws such as Brown v. Board of Education, Roe v. Wade, Bowers v. Hardwick and California’s Proposition 187, and popular legal spectacles such as the Bobbitts, Rodney King’s beating and the gay military cases, we will develop skills of critical analysis of legal questions bearing on race, ethnicity, gender and sexual orientation. The history of the legal treatment of racial difference in the U.S. will be a particular focus of the course. This is a community service scholars project-related course. Students will be encouraged to engage in field observations in local settings where the legal issues we study are likely to be raised. This course is intended for students with little or no prior exposure to legal studies.

component  Monday, Wednesday  2:30 - 3:50 p.m.

This course will explore Asian immigration of the past and present focusing in particular on social and cultural aspects. The framework will be the far-reaching and turbulent economic, political and foreign policy changes which have had diverse and varying impacts upon this group of immigrants and their children. How did racism affect their lives? What factors were important in their sense of identity? Since males constituted the majority in the early days, what impact did it have on their social relationship? Did the experiences of women differ? Are Asians imbued with a strong cultural work ethic? Readings will be from various fields including history, literature, anthropology, sociology, social and literary criticism. Background in U.S. history is recommended strongly.

SS 172  Creating Families: Law, Culture & Technology  Marlene Fried component  Barbara Yngvesson
Tuesday, Thursday  10:30-11:50 a.m.

This course will investigate strategies for acquiring children including adoption, surrogacy and new reproductive technologies. We will explore the ways in which these practices - legal, contested, and clandestine - are shaped by ethics, law, and lineage in various cultural contexts. Among the questions to be addressed are the following. What are the conceptions of mother? of father? of children? of families? How does women’s status affect their relation to reproductive alternatives? Are women and children property, owned either by individual men or by the community?

SS/NS 238  Men and Reproduction: Biological, Social and Ethical Matters  Fay Schrater
component
Tuesday, Thursday  2:00-3:20 p.m.
In this course, we will draw from a range of theoretical paradigms to analyze various conceptions of human rights as embodied in particular cultural, legal and political systems, international treaties and declarations, and national laws and constitutions. What are the roles and histories of law and anthropology in human rights jurisprudence and activism? What is the history of the concept of human rights? Are human rights universal or culturally specific? How should human rights be defined and enforced? Is there a "language of human rights," and if so, how do grassroots activists become literate in it? Case studies will provide insight into the theoretical, methodological and ethical issues involved in human rights work, touching on the problems of "dissenters," refugees and "displaced persons," border crossers, environmental activists and others. Some prior coursework in legal studies and/or anthropology desirable.

During one short century, capitalist Japan and capitalist United States cooperated, competed, and finally engaged in mortal combat. In both countries institutions were set in place in which the ideology of enterprise and profit became legitimized as part of the cultural lives and world of the people. We will examine the consequences of these ideas: on social classes, the family, women and wives. How and why do people embrace a mentalité that allows for bigotry and bias, warfare, invasion, and annihilation of the enemy? These two nation-states will be used as examples to help us understand the essentially similar ways that two culturally disparate societies can function. Background in Japanese and United States histories recommended.

In this course we will consider different perspectives on the historical emergence of the modern Western idea and experience of self and identity, including cross-cultural variations in notions of personhood. We will address specific contemporary issues, with an interest in contrasting modern and post-modern notions of self, such as alternative perspectives on racial, sexual, and cultural identity; the current fascination with "multiple personality disorder;" the ways in which new computer technologies may be disrupting the assumption of a single personality in one body, while legal practices insist on this assumption, etc. This course will draw on anthropology, clinical psychology, and social theory. Readings will be drawn from Freud and other psychoanalytic theorists and psychologists such as Roy Schafer and Kenneth Gergen, Foucault, Natalie Davis, Stephen Greenblatt, James Clifford, and contemporary writers on identity and identity politics, Judith Butler, Gloria Anzaldua, Juan Flores, Elizabeth Grosz, Stuart Hall.

In the mid-1960s, the famous Brazilian Marxist historian, Caio Prado Junior maintained that contemporary economic, racial and political problems (in Brazil) stem from settlement patterns based upon colonial commerce of Brazil's past. Yet, until recently Brazil was seen as having a nonracist national culture in which democracia racial flourished. How much do we really know about racial formation and power in Brazil? Similarly, what do we really know about gender relations in Brazil? This seminar investigates the material and intellectual structures and processes of race, gender and class in Brazil. In addition, we will examine social, political and cultural movements in the last century to interrogate questions of power and the mappings of Brazil’s social stratification. Therefore, our focus will be on 1) social, economic and political inequalities along the lines of race and gender, and the popular mobilizations for social justice as a result of such inequalities; and 2) the meaning and logic of race and gender as articulated and contested in Brazil. Special emphasis will be placed on the centrality of African heritage in Brazilian culture and history and the role that Afro-Brazilians may or may not play in the African Diaspora. A prior course in either Latin American Studies, Black Studies or African Studies is highly recommended, but not necessary.

SS 307 Race and Culture in Psychoanalytic Theories Lourdes Mattei
Component Monday 2:30 - 5:20 p.m.

This course will look at the ways psychoanalytic schools understand the relationship between culture and individual development. In order to explore the cultural dimension, the course will review psychoanalytic understandings of racism and bigotry as well as the constructions of psychosocial identities. Particular attention will be paid to the development of racial and ethnic identities in the United States. In addition, we will explore cross-cultural views of the self from a psychoanalytic perspective. Case material (case presentations, narratives, fiction) and film will be used to illustrate theory and practice.

SS/HA 355I Gender, Race and Class in U. S. History and Society Laurie Nisonoff Susan Tracy
Wednesday 1:00-4:00 p.m.

See HA355I for description.
WS 101  Introduction to Women’s Studies  Kiran Asher
Monday, Wednesday 9:25 - 10:40 a.m.

Course offers an overview of women’s position in society and culture by examining women’s lives from a variety of experiential and theoretical perspectives. The first section examines works by women that illuminate both the shared and the diverse social, psychological, political, and economic realities of their experience; the second section introduces analyses of sexism and oppression, with a focus on different frameworks for making and evaluating feminist arguments. Concludes with visionary feminist views of women recreating their lives.

WS 200  American Women’s History Since 1890  Mary Renda
HIST 276  Tuesday, Thursday 9:25 - 10:40 a.m.

Examines the history of women and cultural construction of gender in the U.S. since the end of the last century. How have class, race, and ethnicity shaped the history of women’s work, debates over female sexuality, women’s attempts at social change, and representations of women in cultural and political contexts? In what ways has gender contributed to racial consciousness and class formation in the United States? Using primary and secondary material, we will examine “women’s experience” in the realms of work, politics, sexuality, and reproduction.

WS 203 (01)  20th Century American Women Writers  Elizabeth Young
Tuesday, Thursday 10:50 - 12:05 p.m.

Examines the work of a variety of twentieth-century women writers located in the United States, focusing on the genre of prose fiction; the period from 1900-1970; and the themes of gender, race, and sexuality. Particular attention will be paid to developments in African American women’s writing and to lesbian literary representations in this period. Writers may include Djuna Barnes, Gwendolyn Brooks, Willa Cather, Kate Chopin, Zora Neal Hurston, Nella Larsen, Carson McCullers, Toni Morrison, Tillie Olsen, Gertrude Stein, Edith Wharton, and Hisaye Yamamoto.

WS 203 (02)  Gender, Culture, Identities: French and Francophone Women Writers in Translation  Elissa Gelfand
Monday, Wednesday 10:50 - 12:05 p.m.

Study of the complex relationships between gender, culture, and language as they inform women’s identities and as represented in twentieth-century works by women writing in French. After considering critical readings that address the multiple conjugation of race, ethnicity, class, sexuality, and gender, we will examine works of fiction-in their specific French, African, Caribbean, and Quebecois contexts-that depict these interpenetrating and problematic components of women’s lives. Authors studied will be selected from the following: Duras; Sarraute; Wittig; Cizous Sudaka; Ernaux; Atlan; Cardinal; Brossard; Hebert; Chedid; Schwarz-Bart; Conde; Warner-Vieyra; Beyala; Ba; Djebar; Sebbar; Accad. Also, possibly films by Safe Faye, Euzhan Placy, Brigitte Rouan, Marguerite Duras, and Martine Dugowson.

WS 257  Women/Gender in Development  Kiran Asher
Monday, Wednesday 1:10 - 2:25 p.m.

This course takes a critical approach to understand the issue of women/gender in development in the developing world. We will examine the conceptual literature related to the issue, and explore the praxis-oriented strategies of women/gender concerns in development. Finally, we will explore how feminist theories in the West have influenced the discourse and practice of women/gender and development, and how they in turn have been critiqued and influenced by third world feminisms.

WS 333 (01) Genres: Feminist Theory & Film Elizabeth Young
ENG 272 Wednesday 1:00 - 3:50 p.m.

Investigates contemporary feminist theory--including but not limited to feminist film theory--in relation to film. It examines the influential formulations of the cinematic “male gaze” and “women’s film”; recent theorizations of race and sexuality in cinema and in culture; gender complexities in popular Hollywood genres; and critical issues emerging from films made by women. Students undertake extensive theoretical readings and attend mandatory weekly film screenings.

WS 333 (02) Gender & Domestic Labor Fran Deutsch
PSY 319 Tuesday 1:00 - 2:50 p.m.

Social, psychological, and sociological theories and research addressed to why women do more housework and child care than men are examined. Special attention is paid to the situation of dual-earner families. Class and ethnic differences on the nature of this inequality are considered, and the barriers to full equality at home explored.

WS 333 (03) Women, Politics & Activism Mary Renda
HIST 381 (02) Monday 1:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m.

Examines the changing relationship between women and policies in the U.S. from the 1790s to the 1970s. Focusing on women’s activism in and out of formal political arenas, we will consider the conceptual and interpretive problems raised by the inclusion of women in American political history. Students will be expected to write a substantial essay based on original research.

WS 333 (04) Rhythms of Revolt Leah Glasser
ENG 373 (01) Thursday 1:00 p.m. - 3:50 p.m.

Close study of language and imagery in the fiction of nineteenth - through early twentieth-century women writers, with a focus on their often conflicting depictions of rebellion and submission. Discussion will cover the relationship between the biographies of selected writers and their work. In this context, each writer’s portrayal of the role of work in the lives of their heroines will be of particular interest. We will also explore the ways in which many women writers of the period expanded the concept of regionalism. Readings will include a selection of works by writers such as Charlotte Bronte, George Eliot, Kate Chopin, Charlotte Perkin Gilman, Sarah Orne Jewett, Mary Wilkins Freeman, Edith Wharton, Willa Cather, and Zora Neil Hurston.

WS 333 (05) Politics of Biodiversity Conservation Kiran Asher
POL 358 Tuesday 1:00 p.m. - 3:50 p.m.

The aim of this course is to investigate how discourses on tropical biodiversity as a global resource justify first world intervention in the third world tropics in the name of defending a common future. We will explore how the universal scientific language of conversation biology ignores power differentials between the first world and third world actors. We will argue the case through specific examples of conservation and development projects in the neotropics.

WS 333 (06) Women’s Movements: Theory and Practice Christine Kelly-Filkohazi
POL 382 Wednesday 1:00 p.m. - 3:50 p.m.

This seminar explores the theory and practice of women’s movements of the late 20th century in the United States, western Europe and the emerging nations of eastern Europe. We will consider current theoretical claims that women’s organizing in advanced industrial democracies manifests a new paradigm of political practice in which autonomy and identity are central values, and strategies for change are extra-institutional. In addition, we will evaluate how national context influences movement theory and practice. Reproductive rights, war crimes, child care, domestic violence, comparable worth and environmental campaigns will be considered.

Anthro 330 Anthropology of Gender and Sexuality Lynn Morgan

Focuses on contemporary scholarship concerned with the extent to which gender and sexuality are socially constructed. Looks at ways it is possible to describe the experience of sexual identity and read accounts of cross-culturally varied ways in which natural and cultural phenomena are genderized. Topics include sexual knowledge, secrecy, ritualized homosexuality and transvestism, and the genderization of knowledge of power.

Art 342 Body Images: Jennifer Burns

Visions of Embodiment Since 1960

See department for description.

Classics 223 The Virgin in Ancient Myth and Literature Paula Debnar

Examines the construction of “virginity” and the roles virgins play in literature from Hesiod to Augustine. How do attitudes towards virginity reflect the relationship between the individual and society? What connections are assumed between sexual abstinence, power, and immortality? Readings may be from the Hymns, Hesiod, Aeschylus, Euripides, Plato, ancient medical literature, Livy, a Greek novel, the New Testament, Gregory of Nyssa, and Augustine. All texts are in English.

Eng 373 Race, Gender and the Politics of Sentiment in Antebellum America Maria S. Castellanos

See department for description.

Geo 312 Women and the Environment Heidi Glaesel

People’s interactions with their environments are socially constructed. In this seminar some of the ways in which women and girls interact differently with the environment than others are examined. Topics include women and nature; women in agricultural systems; women, the environment, health, and disease; women in earth and environmental movements; and fieldwork and research-informant relations.

Ger 241 BunTesrepublik Deutschland?: Gabriele Davis

Representations of Afro-Germans and Turkish (IM)migrants in Film and Literature (emphasis on Afro-German and Turkish women)

Who are “the Germans”? Studies Germany as an evolving multicultural society with members from diverse racial, ethnic, religious, and cultural backgrounds. By analyzing literary and expository writings and films, we will investigate the histories and listen to voices of Afro-Deutsche and Turkish (im)migrants in Germany. We will examine such concepts as national, individual, and gender identity, Heimat, Auslander, Migrant, Immigrant, and Asylant, and discuss German immigration and citizenship laws. Authors to be included: Maya Opitz, Katharina Oguntoye, (Kemal Kurt), Alex Tekinay, Emine Sevai
Ozdamar, Sinasi Dikmen, and Gunter Wallraff. Films: Ich wollte schon immer blond sein auf der Haut; Bread and Chocolate; Ali - Angst essen Seele auf; Yasemin; 40 m² Deutschland; Journey Hope; (Abschied vom falschen Paradies).

Hist 101 (03)  Heroes & Heroines  Carol Straw

The great become godlike, but how are they transformed? Deeds of valor are one way, but violence is not the only road to the sacred. The courage of self-sacrifice and the vision of the philosopher are also ennobling. What social facts determine definitions of heroism? Are male and female heroism essentially the same or fundamentally different? students investigate the core connection between free will, honor, and the divine to discern how ordinary people become extraordinary. Readings include The Iliad, The Odysseys, Iphigenia, Antigone, The Pology, the lives of saints and martyrs, Beowulf, Roland, and Lancelot.

Phil 248  Philosophy of Race and Racism  Lisa Tessman

Investigates the construction of the concept of race and the origins, history, and contemporary deployment of racism. It focuses on racism in the United States. We will consider what it means to treat racism as a form of oppression that is interlocked with gender, economic, and other forms of oppression.

Psy 211  Psychology of Women  Gail Hornstein

Can psychological theories of sex-role development explain the complex diversity of women’s lives? Autobiographies, memoirs, and fictional works provide the “data” to be analyzed; emphasis is placed on assessing the adequacy and scope of existing psychological perspectives on women.

Rel 229  Freedom and the Navigation of Desire  Courtney Bickle

See department for description.

Soc 221  Sociology of Gender  Eleanor Townsley

Focuses on the social production and reproduction of gender relationships. The main emphasis is the modern United States, but compares and contrasts the social organization of gender in different times and places. The syllabus is structured around selections from major social, political, economic, and cultural theories of gender in addition to several exemplary empirical studies. Weekly topics include kinship and socialization, the construction of gender in interaction, the contemporary moral order of masculinity and femininity, issues in sexuality, paid work, housework and family organization, legal systems and nation=states, war and the institutionalization of rape, and the gendered organization and deployment of “expert” authority in a range of social contexts.

WST 150b Introduction to Women's Studies
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 11:00 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

An introduction to the interdisciplinary field of women's studies through a critical examination of feminist histories, issues and practices. Focus on the U.S. with some attention to the global context.

WST 350b Gender, Culture and Representation
Monday Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

Examines how gender is structured and represented in a variety of arenas including art, politics, law, and popular culture. Through the critical reading of key contemporary works of feminist theory and intensive investigation of multidisciplinary case studies, study the variety and ambiguities of political and symbolic representation - how can one women's experience “stand for” another's?

ANT 244b Women/Body/Self Cross Culturally
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:30 p.m.

The course will examine critically the categories "woman", "body", "self". It will make use of extensive material from other cultures as well as subcultures in the U.S. and draw on feminist anthropologists and on women writers from different cultures, as well as on feminist historical works.

ARH 280b Colloquium: Film and Art History
Tuesday, Thursday 9:00-10:20 a.m. Screenings Monday 7-9 p.m.

Topic for Spring, 1998: En-gendering Stardom: The Construction of female and male personae in Hollywood film. This course will consider the visual structuring of the screen personae of Marlene Dietrich, Barbara Stanwyck, Marilyn Monroe, James Stewart, Cary Grant, and James Dean. By analyzing films produced to feature each of them, we will focus on codes of dress, gesture, and spectatorship, in seeking a historical understanding of the cultural construction of gender and the complex visual fascination of the cinematic image. By permission of the instructor. Enrollment limited to 20. Screening fee.

CLS 233b Constructions of Gender and Sexuality in Greco-Roman Culture
Monday, Wednesday 2:40 - 4:00 p.m.

The construction of gender, sexuality, and erotic experience is one of the major sites of differences between Greco-Roman culture and our own. What constituted a proper man and a proper woman in these ancient societies? Which sexual practices and objects of desire were socially sanctioned and which considered deviant? What ancient modes of thinking about these issues have persisted into the modern world? Attention to the status of women; the role of social class; the ways in which genre and convention shaped literary representation; the relationship between representation and reality.

CLT 235b Fairy Tales & Gender
Elizabeth Harries
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

A study of literary fairy tales in Europe from the 1690's to the 1990's, with emphasis on the ways women have written, rewritten, and transformed them. Some attention to oral storytelling and to related stories in other cultures. Writers will include Aulnoy, Perrault, le Prince de Beaumont, the Grimms, Andersen, Christina Rossetti, Angela Carter, Anne Sexton, Olga Broumas. Prerequisite: at least one college level course in literature. Not open to first year students.

CLT 268b Latina and Latin American Women Writers
Nancy S. Sternbach
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 11:00-12:10 p.m.

This course examines the last twenty years of Latina writing in this country while tracing the Latin American roots of many of the writers. Constructions of ethnic identity, gender, Latinidad, "race," class, sexuality, and political consciousness are analyzed in light of the writers’ coming to feminism. Texts by Esmeralda Santiago, Gloria Anzaldúa, Sandra Cisneros, Judith Ortiz Cofer, Denise Chávez, Sheila Ortiz Taylor, and many others are included in readings that range from poetry and fiction to essay and theatre. Knowledge of Spanish is not required, but will be useful. First-year students must seek permission of the instructor.

CLT 272b Women Writing: Twentieth-Century Fiction
Marilyn Schuster
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 10:00-10:50 a.m.

A study of the pleasures and politics of fiction by women from English-speaking and French-speaking cultures. How do women writers engage, subvert and/or resist dominant meanings of gender, sexuality, race and ethnicity and create new narrative spaces? Who speaks for whom? how does the reader participate in making meaning(s)? how do different theoretical perspectives (feminist, lesbian, queer, psychoanalytical, postcolonial, postmodern) change the way we read? Writers such as: Woolf, Colette, Schwarz-Bart, Morrison, Duras, Rule, Kingston, Winterson and Wittig.

EAL 252b The Korean Literary Tradition
Hyaeweol Choi
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:20 p.m.

Topic for Spring 1998: Representations of Women in Pre-Modern Korea. In this course we will inquire into the representations of women in Korean society from the earliest times through the 19th century. Using various texts, myths, poetry, fiction, non-fiction and (auto)biography, we will examine the cultural factors that have influenced the formation of images of women in different historical epochs. Topics will include issues such as textual representations of women; the image and status of women in a patriarchal society; and the impact of various belief systems on women's lives as reflected in literary and historical texts. All readings are in English translation.

ENG 286b Reading and Writing Autobiography
Ann Boutelle
Th 1:00-2:50 p.m.

In this workshop, we will explore, through reading and through writing, the presentation of self in autobiography. A major focus will be on the interweaving of voice, structure, style, and content. As we read the work of ourselves and of others, we will be searching for strategies, devices, rhythms, patterns, and approaches that we might adapt in future writings. The reading list will consist of writings by twentieth-century women. Admission is by permission of the instructor. During the registration period, students should leave a sample of their writings at the English Department office, Wright 101.

ENG 300b Seminar: A Major British or American Writer
Robert Hosmer
Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.
Topic for Spring, 1998: Muriel Spark. Heir to Waugh and Greene, both of whom supported and encouraged her work, Muriel Spark stands today in the front rank of contemporary writers, by anyone's standards a major novelist. A quick-witted, keen-eared, sharp-eyed satirist, Spark has- at the age of 78-just published her twentieth novel, Dreams and Reality. In addition, she has written short stories, stage plays, radio plays, essays, biographies, poems, books for children, and two parts of an autobiography-in-process, everything animated by her very particular, if perhaps eccentric, viewpoint, a fusion of her religious faith and transcultural experience. This seminar will explore issues of gender, religion, and class in an effort to come to terms with the work of this contemporary woman to whom nothing seems impossible. Readings: five/six novels; two volumes of autobiography; poems; two/three plays; essays; and children's stories. Seminars are for juniors and seniors only or by petition and permission.

ENG 378b Writing Women: The Art of Self-Fashioning Sharon Seelig
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:20 p.m.

A consideration of a wide variety of texts by 17th-century women--diaries, letters, and memoirs; poems (sonnets, personal and religious lyrics); drama; and prose fiction-- with some of the following questions in mind: what self-conceptions or forms of self-representation shape these writings? to what extent are these texts informed by external considerations or genres--by romance, religious autobiography, poetic or narrative conventions--or by expectations of an ending? what kinds of assumptions or preconceptions does the modern reader bring to these texts? Seminars are for juniors and seniors only or by petition and permission.

GOV 321b Seminar: Power and Politics in Africa: The Female Factor Walter Morris-Hale
Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

A glimpse into the totality of nation-building from the female perspective.

GOV 364b Seminar in Political Theory: Feminist Theory Kristin Bumiller
TBA

Topic for 1997-98: Re-Imagining Law: Feminist Interpretations. An inquiry into the possibilities for a feminist jurisprudence and an evaluation of critical theories of law and social reform. The nature of legal authority will be considered in the context of women's ordinary lives and reproductive roles, their active participation in political and professional reform, their experiences with violence and pornography as well as the way they confront race, class and ethnic barriers.

GOV 367b Seminar in Political Theory Gary Lehring
Thursday 3:00-4:50 p.m.

Topic for 1997-98: Gay and Lesbian Politics and Theory. An exploration of the lesbian and gay political movement in the United States, this seminar will begin with the invention of the medical model of "homosexuality" in the 19th century and trace the rise of a lesbian/gay/bisexual political movement through the 20th century. The course will adopt an historical approach, examining issues of policy, politics and identify from within these different time periods, including an examination of the rise in lesbian and gay multiculturalism and the advent of lesbian and gay studies as an academic discipline.

HST 278b History of Women in the U.S. 1865-1970 Helen L. Horowitz
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

This course will continue the examination of the historical position of women within the society and culture. Problems will include the implications of class, the rise of the "lady," changing notions of sexuality, educational growth, feminism, African-American women in "freedom," wage-earning women, careers, radicalism, the sexual revolution, the impact of the world wars and depression and feminism's second wave. Emphasis on social and cultural aspects.
JUD 224b  Women in Rabbinic Literature  Elizabeth Shanks
Alexander  Monday, Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

An introduction to the Jewish textual tradition, the world of rabbinic discourse and the literary genres produced, including biblical narratives about women and female aspects of the deity and their interpretations in rabbinic commentaries. Explorations of the legal status of women in Mishnah, Gemara, responsa, codes and commentaries, addressing issues of marriage, the family, divorce, wife-beating, abandonment, lesbianism, adultery, abortion, birth control, prostitution, rape. All readings will be in English translation.

MUS 100B  Women, Men and Music in the Western Tradition  Raphael Atlas
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 11:00 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

This course investigates the construction of gender in music, as well as the roles of women and men in musical activities (such as composition and performance) and activities connected with music-making (such as writing about music and patronage) within selected Western traditions from the late 18th to the late 20th centuries.

PHI 305b  Seminar: Topics in Feminist Theory  Kathryn Pyne Addelson
Monday Wednesday 2:40 - 4:00 p.m.

Topic for 1997-98: Feminist Theory and Practice. Feminist theory had origins in the practice of the women’s movement and now constitutes a distinctive approach to fundamental philosophical questions. Readings of classic work and current accounts of knowledge, political and moral theory. Prerequisites: at least one course from philosophy, feminism and society concentration in philosophy minor, or permission of the instructor.

PSY 266b  Psychology and Women  Faye Crosby
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 11:00 a.m. -12:10 p.m.

Exploration of the existence, origins, and implications of the behavioral similarities and differences between women and men and of the psychological realities of women’s lives. Topics include gender role stereotypes and gender role development; power issues in the family workplace, and politics; and mental health and sexuality. Particular emphasis is given to the issue of diversity among women. Prerequisite: Psych 111 and Psych 112 or permission of the instructor.

PSY 366b  Topics in the Psychology of Women  Faye Crosby
Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

Multicultural mentoring. What are the theories? What does the research show? How do gender and ethnicity influence the mentoring process?

SOC 323b  Seminar: Gender and Social Change  Nancy Whittier
Tuesday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

This course examines theory and research on the construction of and change in gender categories in the United States. Particular attention will be paid to social movements that seek to change gender definitions and stratification, including both feminist and anti-feminist movements. Theoretical frameworks will be drawn from feminist theory and social movement theory. Readings will examine historical shifts in gender relations and norms, changing definitions of gender in contemporary everyday life, and politicized struggles over gender definitions. Themes throughout the course include the social construction of both femininity and masculinity, the intersection of race, class, and identity. Case studies of social movements will include feminist, lesbian and gay, right-wing, self help, men’s, anti-abortion and pro-choice movements.
