INTRO TO STPEC

STPEC 101: Introduction to STPEC – Katherine Mallory
   Tuesdays 4:00-6:30 pm     3 credits, graded     Schedule # 71044 or 71046
This seminar is intended for students who are just beginning the STPEC major, whether as first year students or transfers. This class will be geared toward useful conversations like what is the STPEC Program really, how to read and use theory, and who are we that we care about social justice, and community building. Through horizontal discussion sections and field trips, 'Intro to STPEC' will engage students in a non-conventional learning atmosphere that challenges students to critically look at the relationship between our actions and theory.

   This class will be taught by Katherine Mallory, STPEC Chief Academic Advisor.
   This class is open to STPEC majors only and is a graduation requirement for the major.

STPEC SEMINARS

STPEC 391H: STPEC Seminar I – Antonia Carcelén
   TueThur 11:00-12:45        Schedule # 60020
This seminar is the first in the yearlong STPEC Seminar Sequence. STPEC Seminar I focuses on major theoretical currents in political theory and the historical circumstances that gave rise to those theories-in particular Liberalism, Marxism and Anarchism. STPEC Seminar II will analyze contemporary social movements in the context of these (and other theoretical apparatuses). As this is an interdisciplinary class, we will be bringing in analytic tools from various disciplines- including economics and political theory-but always paying attention to the historical construction and reception of ideas.

   Antonia Carcelén is a Ph.D. student in Comparative Literature.
   This is a four credit honors course. Enrollment is limited to 25 students. STPEC majors only. PREREQUISITES: One Intro to Social Theory course and one Intro to Political Economy Course chosen from the STPEC Recommended Course List.

STPEC 392H: STPEC Seminar II – Sreela Sarkar
   TueThur 11:00-12:45        Schedule # 60021
The second half of the STPEC Seminar sequence, STPEC Seminar II focuses on a series of interrelated political, social and theoretical movements of the 20th Century. In STPEC Seminar I we studied some of the driving forces behind the production of modernity as way to organize and understand the world. STPEC Seminar II will pay particular attention to the way in which the political practices and philosophies of the 20th Century relate to the successes and catastrophic failures of modernism in complex and contradictory ways. Some of the topics addressed include the Russian Revolution, totalitarianism, anti/post-colonialism, the role of identity in political theory/practice and postmodernism. A major research paper of the student's choosing will be produced over the course of the semester allowing her/him to both (1) more deeply engage with a topic, including one that may not be discussed in the seminar, and (2) practice applying the critical methodological and theoretical tools developed in the STPEC curriculum.

   Sreela Sarkar is a Ph.D. student in Communication. This is a four credit honors course. Enrollment is limited to 25 students. STPEC majors only. PREREQUISITE: Completion of STPEC 391H (the semesters may not be taken concurrently). This restriction will be enforced.
JUNIOR WRITING COURSE

STPEC 393A: Writing for Critical Consciousness – Ethan Myers
Schedule # 71041
Wed 4:40-7:10 pm

The STPEC Junior Writing Seminar focuses on individual development of voice. We will weave this theme through standard essay assignments, weekly response papers, cover letters and resumes, and a student-driven class project of your choosing. Since you and your classmates will be struggling together to find your voices, we’ll focus on peer-editing and tutoring techniques at the beginning of the semester. As we discuss peer-editing, we may consider issues of language and dialect, Black English, Standard Written English and feminism. The second half of the semester will focus on political, environmental, educational, cultural, and philosophical texts. Throughout all assignments I expect to see cultivation of your voice and communication of your own creative ideas. I encourage integration of ideas from your other courses and experiences. Be prepared to think critically and examine texts carefully. We will be sharing our writing with each other – be ready to give and receive constructive feedback.

This course meets only once a week; do not plan to miss any classes.
Ethan Myers has a Master’s Degree in Literature and American Studies from UMass Amherst.
Enrollment is limited to 20 students. STPEC majors only. Prerequisite: College Writing or equivalent.

Schedule # 60835

This course draws on both historical and contemporary sources to address critical issues and problems facing U.S. cities. Topics are organized around the following questions: How have cities come to take their shape and character over time? How are economic and social inequalities mapped onto the urban landscape? How are differences of race, class, and gender negotiated through urban institutions and community struggles?

Preston Smith is an Associate Professor of Politics at Mount Holyoke College.

STPEC 492H section 2: Public Policy Perspectives from the Left, Right, and Center: The Constitution, the Congress, the Courts, and the Blogs – Michael Aleo
Tuesday 6:30-9:00 pm
Schedule # 61609

This course will focus on public policy debates of the 21st century, including perspectives from the left, right, and center of the political spectrum. Beyond academic commentary on these debates, students will track blogs that provide analysis of the public policy issues discussed in class and will read and analyze legal decisions related to these matters. Through the course of the semester, students will form small lobbying groups that focus on a single policy issue. Students will create and maintain blogs to track contemporary commentary on the policy issue that they have been assigned. At the end of the semester, students will prepare policy position papers and debate policy stances in class.

Michael Aleo currently practices law at the offices of Lesser, Newman & Nasser, focusing primarily on employment, civil rights, and personal injury law. He has also practiced at the Lawyers’ Committee for Civil Rights and taught legal writing and research at New England Law, Boston. Michael Aleo is an alumnus of the STPEC Program.

STPEC 493H: Art, Activism and Minority Cultures in Contemporary Europe – Anna Schrade
Thursday 4:00-6:30 pm Schedule # 60638
Decolonial thinkers approach the connection between racism and the current configurations of citizenship and belonging in Europe (and beyond) not from the perspective of the theories, rules, laws and social structures that created them, but from the perspective of the resistances to them, thereby empowering culture and the production of counter-realities to the dominant orders as sites and ground of such resistances. This course aims at discussing new forms of activism and artistic practices that relate to this notion of resistance by locating them within the ‘cultural’ politics of their respective minority formations as well as within the framework of national and/or European Union regulative policies and civil society actions vis à vis those minority cultures. Examples include new forms of activism and artistic practices that were developed in the context of the Black Art Movement in Britain, the Afro-German, Queer of Color and Turkish-German communities and Black and Beur identities-in-politics in France.

Anna Schrade is a Five College Associate and cultural anthropologist whose teaching and research focuses on European minority cultures, African Diasporas, transnational Migration, visual culture studies, critical race theory and postcolonial studies.

PRACTICUM

STPEC 498Y: Exploring the Intersection of Theory and Practice – Katherine Mallory
(aka “Practicum”) No Class Meetings Schedule # 71029
This course fulfills the STPEC internship requirement. Students in this course undertake an internship of 120 hours or more in an organization of their choice, and engage in critical reflection on their experience. Fieldwork placements are identified and arranged by each individual student and must be approved by the instructor. Students are encouraged to use this class as an opportunity to synthesize knowledge gained in the classroom and test its applicability to “real life” situations.

The primary written assignment for the course is a 12-15 page (or longer, depending on credits) final paper emphasizing critical analysis of the student’s experience in the organization and/or the organization itself. Analytical themes may include (but are not limited to): the interplay of organizational structure and mission; the strengths and weakness of various means of working for social change; the impacts of economic and/or financial conditions and structures on the organization; and dynamics of race, class, and gender both within the organization and in its interactions with the larger community. All students are required to apply an analysis of race, class, and gender.

To enroll, submit a completed STPEC internship contract before the end of add/drop. (Note: you must meet with Katherine and get her approval of your placement before you turn in your contract. She can be reached at stpecinternship@sbs.umass.edu.)
