

8th Annual Sam Bowles Lecture

Suresh Naidu

Jack Wang and Echo Ren Professor of Economics and
Professor of International and Public Affairs
Columbia University

The Evidence-based Path to Mostly Automated Socialism

Thursday November 14, 2024

4 PM

Gordon Hall, 3rd. Floor

Reception to follow

Join us on Zoom by using the QR Code or clicking on this text.

The goals of economic planning, as envisioned by 20th century socialist economists, have largely been achieved in social democracies, where government shares of GDP often exceed capital shares. But administrative data, living deep learning models, and algorithmic policies set by both business and governments make a new set of economic governance tools possible and necessary.

The Sam Bowles lecture is an annual lecture sponsored by the Economics Departments at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst in honor of Professor Emeritus Sam Bowles and recognition of his contributions to the department and the profession

For more information on past lectures:

<https://www.umass.edu/economics/sam-bowles-lecture>