

ADVISING GUIDELINES FOR THE MASTER OF EDUCATION DEGREE (M.Ed.)

This guide provides Master of Education (M.Ed.) degree students with information about College of Education and Graduate School procedures to aid the advising process and to promote continuous and smooth progress toward completion of the degree.

There are three major steps toward the Master of Education degree:

1. admission and assignment of initial advisor and formation of Projected Program of Study (file typed Form M-1);
2. completion of the Program of Study;
3. completion of Proposed Program of Study (file typed Form M-2 and typed M.Ed. Degree Eligibility Form).

Within the framework of University Graduate School regulations, and with the advice and approval of an academic advisor, Master's degree students plan programs of study that include a minimum of 33 credits beyond the baccalaureate degree.

NOTE: The School Counselor Education and School Psychology concentrations admit students into a joint Master's/Education Specialist (Ed.S.) degree program. Students in the program receive their Master's and Ed.S. after completing a minimum of 63 credits (33 M.Ed. credits and 30 Ed.S credits).

Graduate School regulations, requirements, and administrative processes which affect your progress toward receipt of the degree are found in the Graduate School Bulletin and the Graduate School Handbook at: <https://www.umass.edu/graduate/policies/handbook>.

Refer to those documents for information, regulations, and procedures concerning enrollment status, statute of limitations, grading policy, academic average for graduate degrees, satisfactory or reasonable progress, maximum credit loads, course withdrawal, incomplete grade, academic dismissal, transfer of credits, leave of absence, continuous enrollment/program fee, off-campus registration, and readmission.

The guidelines that follow provide information which reflect elements unique to the College of Education (<http://www.umass.edu/education/>) or items which have proven especially helpful to College of Education graduate students.

To ensure a successful Master of Education degree, carefully follow the appropriate degree completion checklist and file the appropriate Master's degree forms provided on the College of Education website umass.edu/education/current-students/milestones.
