

Teaching Native American Histories

A Summer Institute for Teachers, July 5-26, 2019
Funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities

Join us in New England for an exceptional professional development opportunity for K-12 educators.

This three-week program explores the histories of Native American peoples through five conceptual themes showing how past and present are linked.

Funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, the program provides a $2,700 stipend to help cover expenses.

Highlights:

- Interdisciplinary exploration of the struggles and achievements of indigenous peoples
- A wealth of exciting new scholarship to incorporate into your K-12 teaching
- Primary source analysis, museum visits, tribal community engagement, and conversations with Native and non-Native program faculty
- Investigates key questions about sources and interpretation
- Co-directors: Linda Coombs (Aquinnah Wampanoag) and Alice Nash (UMass Amherst)

Application Deadline: March 1, 2019

Successful applicants will be notified by March 29, 2019
