Economic and Regional Development Planning

Concentration
Coordinator
Henry Renski

Economic development is the process by which communities secure the resources necessary to provide for and sustain economic opportunities for their residents. New technologies and global trade have altered the competitive landscape of business—creating new opportunities for some cities and towns while posing great challenges for others. Economic developers continue to deal with the on-going challenges of aging infrastructure, persistent disparities between metropolitan suburbs relative to inner-cities and rural places, dislocated and underemployed workers, and growing income inequality.

The economic and regional development concentration at LARP provides students with the strong foundation needed to become leaders in the growing field of economic development planning. The curriculum integrates theory, methods and practice. Topics of study include: state and local economic development policy; science, technology and entrepreneurship-based economic development; challenges of rural economic development, workforce development, industrial planning, public and private developmental finance; and applied economic and spatial analysis.
