Keep on breathing

Keep on shining, &

Keep on keeping on.

As a soon to be new graduate heading into the field of nursing, I look up to all of you: for strength, for motivation, and for guidance.

You are all heroes.
We appreciate all that you do, today and every day.

There is no word that we can express our appreciation in a degree close to how we really feel it in our hearts, there is no way that we can pay you back for your work for humanity....

We are all together in this as whole humanity, and I want to share this poem from a Turkish poet with you our fellow nurses, physicians and healthcare providers all over the World. And may be a poem written in 1948 meant to describe your lifelong commitments and may be a poem that will remind you the history that you are making in these days with a warm smile on your face and some seriousness..

On Living Nazim Hikmet - 1902-1963

Living is no laughing matter:
you must live with great seriousness like a squirrel, for example—

I mean without looking for something beyond and above living,
I mean living must be your whole occupation.
Living is no laughing matter:
you must take it seriously, so much so and to such a degree that, for example, your hands tied behind your back, your back to the wall, or else in a laboratory in your white coat and safety glasses, you can die for people—even for people whose faces you've never seen, even though you know living is the most real, the most beautiful thing.

I mean, you must take living so seriously that even at seventy, for example, you'll plant olive trees— and not for your children, either, but because although you fear death you don't believe it, because living,

I mean, weighs heavier...
