

Office of Academic Planning & Assessment for the General Education Council

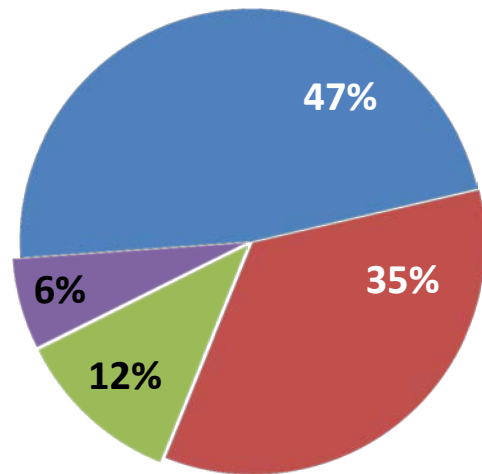

Integrative Experience Instructor Survey

Spring 2014

73.5% Response Rate

166 Responses

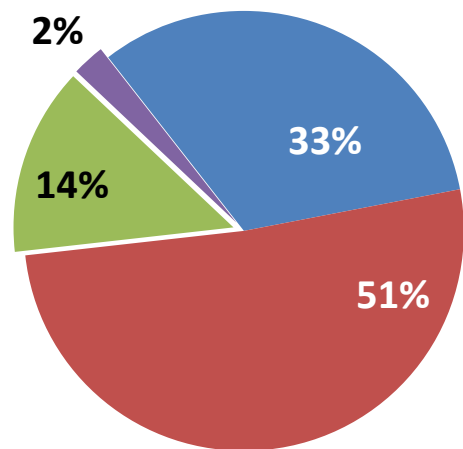

How important do you think it is to have a course that asks students to make connections across the various components of the university learning experience?

82% of IE Instructors think it is important undergraduates take a course that addresses the IE

- Very Important
- Somewhat Important
- Somewhat Unimportant
- Very Unimportant

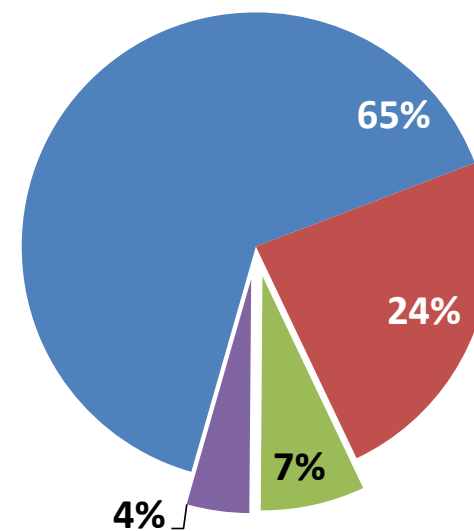

Given your most recent experience teaching IE, and your students' responses to taking the course, how successful do you feel your course was in fulfilling the IE goals?

84% of IE instructors believe their last IE teaching experience was successful in fulfilling the IE goals.

- Very Successful
- Somewhat Successful
- Somewhat Unsuccessful
- Very Unsuccessful

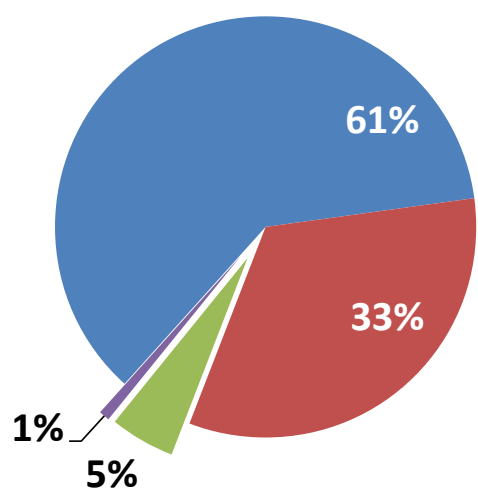

How interested are you in teaching an IE course again?

89% of IE instructors are interested in teaching an IE course again.

- Very Interested
- Somewhat Interested
- Somewhat Uninterested
- Very Uninterested

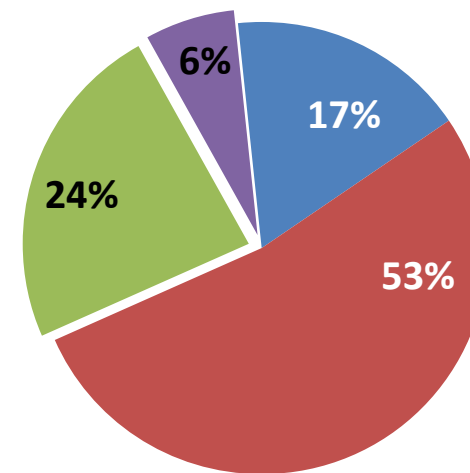

To what extent do you feel that your IE course enhances students' progress toward achieving learning goals specific to their major?

94% of IE instructors say their IE course enhances students understanding of the goals specific to their major.

- To a great extent
- To some extent
- To a little extent
- To no extent

How prepared have your students been to engage effectively in the integrative and reflective thinking that the IE course requires?

More than 2/3 of IE professors believe students are prepared to engage in integrative and reflective thinking.

- Very Prepared
- Somewhat Prepared
- Somewhat Unprepared
- Very Unprepared