Anyone can be a target of violence; whether you identify as male, female, or transgender; straight, queer, or questioning

What is Title IX?

Title IX is a federal law that protects members of our campus community from sex or gender-based discrimination and violence in terms of education and employment. Gender based discrimination, including discrimination based on an individual's gender expression, is prohibited at any UMass affiliated event by Title IX and/or University policy. UMass is committed to providing an environment free from gender based discrimination, harassment, sexual assault, stalking, or domestic violence. Any member of the campus community who experiences gender based discrimination is entitled to file a report and/or complaint with the Title IX Coordinator, the Dean of Students Office, or the Equal Opportunity Office.

What is a Title IX Responsible Employee?

The university has designated certain employees as "responsible employees" who are required under Title IX and University policy to promptly report any potential incident of sexual misconduct, sexual assault, sexual harassment, relationship violence, stalking or other assault or harassment involving a UMass student and/or employee.

Who is a Title IX Responsible Employee?

Responsible employees include senior administrators, faculty with administrative or supervisory responsibilities, academic advisors, coaches and trainers, advisors to RSOs, employees in Student Affairs and Campus Life (unless they are designated as "confidential" such as licensed clinicians, clergy, or certified rape crisis or domestic violence counselors), and staff in managerial and supervisory roles.

What if I talk or write about a personal experience with sexual violence in a class or paper?

If you share an experience of violence in class via discussion or assignment, and it is clear that the violence occurred while you were affiliated with UMass, the faculty or TA may report to the Dean of Students Office.

What happens when the Dean or Title IX Coordinator receives my report?

The Dean or Title IX Coordinator will follow up with you to discuss options for support and accountability.
