WOST 301 – Theorizing Women’s Issues – Taught by Kreimild Saunders

New description: Theorizing Feminist Issues will begin with a discussion of the grand theories of second wave feminism on patriarchal domination, women’s oppression and subordination in society in generally. The second part of the course will advance critiques of heterosexism, the exclusion and marginalization of women of color, the post-structuralist challenge to essential (knowing) subjects and privileged claims to knowledge. It will articulate queer theory’s criticism of coherence of the sex/gender system and the critique of the colonizing impact of feminism on Third-World women by post-colonial scholars.

WOST 391D/JUDAIC 391D – Women, Gender and Judaism – offered on Tuesday (2:30-5:15) not Wednesday as stated in Departmental Course listing.

NEW WOMEN’S STUDIES COURSES LISTINGS

WOST 291D Schedule #574924	Women, Globalization and Cybernetics Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.	Sima Fahid
--------------------------------------	---	------------

This course examines the way in which cyber media complex of transnational capital constructs centered, hierarchical and unequal power layers across the globe and how this affects women’s lives throughout the world. It will demonstrate the way in which globalized cyber-media capitalist culture articulates racialized and sexualized bodies and creates new geographies of power across North/South divide which especially afflict women globally. Fulfills Women of Color requirement outside the U.S. for Women’s Studies majors and minors.

WOST 393J Schedule #586796	Queer Theory: The Reconceptualization of Gender and Sexuality Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45	Kreimild Saunders

Queer theory challenges the second wave feminist presumption of a coherence between sex, gender and sexual desire. The course examines queer as a developing set of ideas around the relationship between sex, gender, sexual desire, subjectivity and identity. It further looks at the emergence of various sexual identities and practices (e.g. butch-femme, transgender/transsexual, bisexual, sado-masochistic among others) inviting students to think the possibilities and limitations of the application of queer theory in making sense of these practices. First year students not eligible.

WOST 394A
Schedule #586740

Women in Islam
Thursday 2:30-5:15 p.m.

Sima Fahid

The aim of this course is to analyze Muslim women's lives in the modern period within a post-colonial context and beyond an orientalist outlook. By exploring historical, economic, political and socio-cultural issues (including sexuality), the transformation in women's lives will be examined and women's resistance to these changes will be investigated. Fulfills Women of Color requirement outside the U.S. for Women's Studies majors and minors. First year students not eligible.

NEW DEPARTMENTAL COURSES

SOC 222

The Family
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

Naomi Gerstel

Shattering myths about our past and present, the course will begin with an analysis of the history of families, looking at changing relationships between partners and spouses, between parents and children, among extended kin. Having established "roots," we will turn to the contemporary family across the life course to first examine the choice of a mate, marriage, and kinship in all its modern diversity. Focusing on gender, readings and lectures will analyze "his" and "her" experience of love, communication, sexuality, violence, and the ways in which paid work shapes families, with special attention to variations associated with race and class. Then we turn to the conditions that shape parenting both from the perspective of mothers and fathers and from the perspective of daughters and sons. Then we turn to the end of life--the family experiences of the elderly, the separated, divorced, and widowed, showing how gender (in interaction with race) shape these endings. Lecture and Discussion Groups.

SOC 383

Gender and Society
Tuesday, Thursday 2:30-3:45

Naomi Gerstel

This course explore gender difference and gender inequality. We will ask: what are the sources of difference? of inequality? Is difference necessarily equivalent to inequality? Throughout, we will examine femininities and masculinities, with special attention to racialized gender. The course begins with cross-cultural and historical material and then turns to the contemporary experience--by examining first the early creation of difference and inequality of girls and boys--in the body, early socialization, and education, through language, schools and the media, then to the maintenance of difference between and inequality of adult women and men--in the economy and labor force as well as in intimacy, sexuality and families.

Budget Cuts and Course Availability

As you are probably aware, the University is undergoing serious budget cutbacks. The Women's Studies Course Description Guide is compiled in April of 2002, and because the funding picture is uncertain, courses may be eliminated, changed, or restricted in enrollment. For up to date information contact the department or program offering the course to verify information. For more on the budget cuts, www.saveumass.org, www.umass.edu/actnow. The Women's Studies web page will be updated on budget and course information www.umass.edu/wost.

WOST 187 Introduction to Women's Studies (ID) Alexandrina Deschamps
Monday, Wednesday 10:10-11:00 a.m. with Friday discussion

Lecture, discussion. Placing women's experiences at the center of interpretation, course introduces basic concepts and perspectives in Women's Studies. Focusing on women's lives with a particular emphasis on the ways in which gender interacts with race, class, sexual orientation and ethnicity. Central aim is to foster critical reading and thinking about women's lives, the ways in which the interlocking systems of colonialism, racism, sexism, ethnocentrism and heterosexism shape women's lives, and how women have resisted them.

WOST 187H Introduction to Women's Studies (ID) Alexandrina Deschamps
Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.

WOST 201 Critical Perspectives in Women's Studies Banu Subramaniam
Section #1 - Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.
Section #2 - Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

Introduction to the fundamental questions and concepts of Women's Studies and to the basic intellectual tools of analysis integrating economic and cultural imperialism, gender, class, race, and sexual orientation. Also addresses the multifaceted dimensions of women's lived experiences within a global context.

WOST 295C Career and Life Choices (2 credits) Karen Lederer
Monday 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Development of a systematic approach to career, educational, and life planning. Emphasis on prioritization of values and subsequent life choices. Elements of self exploration include: distinguishing between choosing a major and a career; identifying and expanding areas of career interest; identifying current skills and skills necessary for career of choice; relating knowledge, interests and skills to career goals; and current issues for women in the workforce. Career planning skills include budgeting, writing resumes and cover letters, interviewing, and use of various resources. Women's Studies students or seniors only. Mandatory Pass/Fail.

WOST 301 Theorizing Women's Issues tba
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

The objective of this course is to introduce ways of analyzing and reflecting on current issues and controversies in feminist thought within an international context. Feminist theories of the construction of gender, race, class, and sexuality will be considered. Questions addressed are:

Women's Studies Program Courses – Page 4

What constitutes theory in Women's Studies? How does theory reflect, critique, challenge and change dominant sex/race/class power structures? What is theory's relationship to practice? What are the contemporary issues important to feminist/womanist theory? The common thread of this course is to provide students with some tools of analysis for addressing these issues.

WOST 391D/
JUDAIC 391D

Women, Gender, Judaism
Tuesday 2:30-5:15 p.m.

Susan Shapiro

This course examines the ways in which the categories "woman/man," "feminine/masculine" and "gender" differently construe the character of Judaism. "Judaism" is here understood in religious, cultural and social terms. This is not a course that focuses primarily on questioning contemporary forms of Jewish women's identities, nor on filling-in the blanks of the "missing women" of Jewish history and tradition, although some attention will be paid to these matters. Rather, our main focus will be on historical constructions of women's gender roles and identities in Judaism and their cultural and social consequences. Three types of literature, therefore, will be important in this course: (1) primary religious texts about women and gender in Judaism; (2) interpretations and historical accounts of different periods and aspects of women's (and men's) gender roles in Judaism and Jewish culture; (3) current critical, feminist theories of discourse, culture and politics through which to problematize our readings of both primary and interpretative texts.

WOST 391E/
ECON 348

Political Economy of Women
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

tba

This course uses a wide range of women's issues to teach varied economic principles and theories. Popular women's topics in past semesters include women's increasing labor force participation; gender differences in hiring, promotions, and earnings; the growing poverty rate for female headed households; trade policy effects on women in the U.S. and other countries; and race and class differences in the economic opportunities of women. Empirical assessment of women's work in the market and in the home in the U.S. and other countries. Reconsideration of traditional issues of political economy, comparative economic history, and labor economics.

WOST 391H

US Women's Lives in Contexts:
Reading and Creating Political Autobiography
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

Arlene Avakian

A course in which students will read both women's autobiographies and oral histories as well as do some of their own autobiographical work. The class will explore the ways in which lives are embedded with their social, political and cultural contexts and the ways in which people construct their lives. We will have a particular focus on the ways in which gender, race, class, ethnicity and sexual orientation impact on lives and the ways these social forces interact with each other. Focusing on their own lives in their context, students will create autobiographical work which could take a variety of forms; e.g. written, oral, visual, or dramatic. Readings will focus on contemporary US women, public figures, and "ordinary" women.

WOST 391P/591P

Bodies, Gender and Performance
Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.

N. Pravaz

This course will explore the ways women have been represented, marked and produced as such, and women's own investments and/or contestations of these processes. Conceptualizing gender as performance, we will inspect corporeal practices stemming from one's social location, and temporary identification strategies on the part of the subject. We will study the representation of women's bodies in science, art and popular culture, and the ways our bodies have been inscribed and invested as "female" in different cultural contexts, defining both our biological outlook and our identities as "women." Turning toward an understanding of how the marking of the body becomes a fundamental piece in the constitution of women's own subjectivities, we will examine the performative ways in which women live in, through and against our bodies in practice.

WOST 391W Writing for Women's Studies Majors tba
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 10:10-11:00 a.m.

Fulfills University's Junior Year Writing Requirement. Offered fall semester only. Course acquaints students with the many genres of writing within Women's Studies and is structured around a set of readings selected to represent a large variety of stylist approaches including scholarly writings in a number of fields, book and film reviews, journal writing, letters to the editor, zines, web pages, personal and self-reflexive prose, newsletter prose, and conference reports. The readings will be short, and each will be intended to serve as a model of it's kind to be analyzed, emulated, and/or critiqued. The course allows students to hone skills on modes of expository writing and argumentation useful for research and writing in a variety of fields.

WOST 392L Women of Color and Activism Alexandrina Deschamps
Monday, Wednesday 3:35-4:50 p.m.

This course will focus on "women of color" as they deal with identity politics and political agency in their lives and in their communities. Themes of the course will be, (1)Defining Activism, (2)Grassroots to National Levels of Activism, (3)Organizing Strategies, (4)Diversity of Organizational Structure, (5)Methods of Analysis, (6)Feminist Activism/Women's Activism. The course will seek to establish groundwork for contemporary and future activism between all women in an effort to build bridges by exploring similarities in goals and missions and replace fragmentation with inclusiveness.

WOST 393H/ Philosophy of Gender & Sexuality Ann Ferguson
PHIL 381H Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

A comparison of philosophical theories of gender and sexuality, including Natural Purpose theory (ancient Greek and Christian thought), biological determinism, Freudianism and Foucault. We will investigate the ways that women and their bodies have been viewed by feminist theorists on female embodiment such as Beauvoir, Rich, Wittig and Butler. Issues will include: the relation between sex, gender and sexuality, dichotomies between ideals of masculinity/femininity, reason/emotion, subject/object, connection between oppression by race, class, sexuality and gender, representations of women and theories of self, identity and subjectivity. Texts will include Conboy, Medina and Stanbury, eds. Writing on the Body: Female Embodiment and Feminist Theory, Freud Sexuality and the Psychology of Love; Foucault History of Sexuality, v. 1, Feinberg Stone Butch Blues and selected readings. Prerequisites include either a 100 level Philosophy class or WOST 201 or permission of the instructor. Course requirements include class participation, 2 short papers, a mid-term exam and an 8-10 page term paper. Since the class is an honors course, it requires additional class preparation and discussion, as well as extra written work, and receives 4 credits.

WOST 497A/ Women in Cold War U. Schmidt
GERMAN 497A x Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.
Tuesday 6:00-8:00 p.m.

Changes in the status of women were a major step in the transition from war to peace in all countries which had taken part in the Second World War. In post-war Germany, motherhood, marriage, family and equal rights were particularly hard-fought areas in developing two contrasting concepts of social order. In the competition between democratic West Germany and communist East Germany - on the front lines of the Cold War - gender became an explicitly political category. Thus, the social position which women had been allotted in the two states did not mark the transition from war to peace, but rather the transition from a hot to a Cold War order.

WOST 791B/ Feminist Theory Ann Ferguson
PHIL 791B Thursday 4:00-6:30 p.m.

This seminar will concern various feminist philosophical approaches to the study of gender and male domination, including approaches which insist as well on the relevance of other social domination relations (race, class, sexuality, nationality). The first part of the seminar will be a review of various feminist frameworks, including liberal, radical, psychoanalytic, marxist and socialist-feminist (the modernist approaches), and the postmodernist approaches of post-structuralism, post-colonialism and intersectionalities. The rest of the seminar will be organized by topics, which will include: feminist epistemology, subjectivity (the agency/structure question), identity politics and queer politics, the ethics and politics of care, the equality/difference debate (gender theory vs. sexual difference theory), and global feminist visions. Readings will include Tuana and Tong, eds. Feminism and Philosophy and Alexander and Mohanty, eds. Feminist Genealogies, Colonial Legacies, Democratic Futures, a packet of readings, and books by Judith Butler (The Subject of Power), Joan Tronto (Moral Boundaries), and Angela Miles (Integrative Feminisms). Course requirements will include one or more class reports and a seminar paper.

AFROAM 391B

Modern AfroAm Women's Novel
 Monday, Wednesday 9:05-11:00

J. Smethurst

In this course we will examine novels written by African American women from the Harlem Renaissance to the present. The course will engage a simple, but fundamental issue: is there such a thing as modern African American women's literature? Some of the ways that we come at this issue will be from the point of genre (e.g., the novel of manners, the slave narrative, the sentimental novel, the gothic romance, the historical novel, and so on.), audience reception, and the relation of the novels to popular culture. We will also consider the historical contexts of the novels and the impact of various artistic, intellectual, and social movements (e.g., the Civil Rights, Black Power/Black Arts, First and Second Wave Feminism, and Gay Liberation) on the formal and thematic choices of the authors we study.

COMLIT 387 Myths of the Feminine E. Petroff
Monday, Wednesday 2:30 Discussion Wednesday 3:35

Lecture, discussion. A survey of the ancient and medieval stories of women and men and their goddesses. We'll begin in the ancient Near East, with the stories of Inanna and Ishtar and their devotees, and then turn to the classical world of Greece and Rome, with the Homeric Hymns and the tale of Cupid and Psyche. We'll then survey the images of women in the three 'religions of the book'—Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, as well as Taoism and Buddhism. The medieval world inherited all these traditions, and we'll read stories from The Arabian Nights, The Canterbury Tales, and the Decameron that illustrate these themes. We'll learn about the complexity of images of the feminine, including women as goddesses and priestesses, as leaders of their people, as the embodiment of sexuality and fertility, as pious housewives and cunning deceivers. This is a 4 credit Honors course. Readings: Baring and Cashford, The Myth of the Goddess; Young, An Anthology of Sacred Texts by and about Women; Kinsley, The Goddesses Mirror; Wolkstein and Kramer, Inanna; Rayor, Sappho's Lyre; selections from the Arabian Nights, Canterbury Tales, and Decameron. Requirements: Journal every two weeks, three five-page papers, class participation.

Lecture. This course broadly outlines the major events and cultural trends for American women from the colonial era to the end of the 19th century. Topics covered include: European, African, and Native American women's experiences during white colonialization and the American Revolution; religion and the witchcraft scare; women's educational, moral reform, suffrage, and abolitionist activism in the mid-to-late 19th century; family structures and gender roles; race relations, slavery, the Civil War and Reconstruction; and evolving theories of women's sexuality, social value, and citizenship. The course will require you to read several (5-7) books and articles. There will be two essay exams and one or two short papers.

HIST 397A Gender & Sexuality in Latin America K. Bliss
 Tuesday, Thursday 2:30-3:45

This upper-level undergraduate seminar will explore social debates over the relationship of sex and gender to such issues as work, political rights, family and reproduction, health care, religion, crime and deviance, and education in national period Latin America. This year the course will focus on Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Mexico. Weekly readings and class meetings will address the following questions: In what ways have social spaces in these nations been gender-segregated? What logic has historically underpinned legal restrictions on women's rights to work outside the home, vote, receive higher education or live on their own? How is it that activities considered "normal" for men were long considered "deviant" for women, and vice versa? And in what contexts did social attitudes toward marriage, paternity and divorce change? Over the course of the semester, students will study and discuss popular literature, reform tracts, films, criminological studies, and political manifestoes from the period. They will assume responsibility for helping to lead class discussions and will prepare several short papers as well as a longer final project for course completion.

JUDAIC 391D/ Women, Gender, Judaism S. Shapiro
WOST 391D Wednesday 2:30-5:15

Seminar. This course examines the ways in which the categories "woman/man", "feminine/masculine" and "gender" differently construe the character of Judaism. "Judaism" is here understood in religious, cultural and social terms. This is not a course that focuses primarily on questioning contemporary forms of Jewish women's identities, nor on filling-in the blanks of the "missing women" of Jewish history and tradition, although some attention will be paid to these matters. Rather, our main focus will be on historical constructions of women's gender roles and identities in Judaism and their cultural and social consequences. Three types of literature, therefore, will be important in this course: (1) primary religious texts about women and gender in Judaism; (2) interpretations and historical accounts of different periods and aspects of women's (and men's) gender roles in Judaism and Jewish culture; (3) current critical, feminist theories of discourse, culture and politics through which to problematize our readings of both primary and interpretative texts.

DEPARTMENTAL

COMM 397G

Public Sexual Culture

Thursday 6:30-9:30 p.m.

Instructor: Lynn Comella

Examine the production and circulation of sexual meanings, identities, values, and knowledge across a variety of popular cultural forms and spaces. We will investigate pornography and different forms of sexual culture from the perspective of history, economics, fantasy, sexual education, labor relations, "taste culture," and public policy considerations. In doing so, we will draw upon work from film studies, cultural studies, queer studies, and feminist theory. Recommended background courses: COMM121-Intro to Media and Culture and COMM 297E-Popular Culture and Cultural Studies. 3 credits.

ENGL 132

Man and Woman in Literature (AL G)

Thursday 6:30-9:30 p.m.

Literature treating the relationship between man and woman. Topics may include: the nature of love, the image of the hero and heroine, and definitions, past and present, of the masculine and feminine.

PSYCH 308

Psychology of Women (SB U)

Monday 5:30-8:30 p.m.

A general introduction. Two sections: the issue of sex differences, including evidence for and explanation of such differences; and "Women's issues," topics of particular interest to women in contemporary society (e.g., violence against women, work and achievement). Prerequisite: Elementary Psychology.

SOCIOL 106

Race, Gender & Class Ethnicity (SB U)

Monday 6:30-9:30 p.m.

Introduction to sociology. Discussion of the effects and experiences of race, gender, and social class on social and economic processes and their relationship to family, occupation, and other aspects of social life.

SOCIOL 222

The Family (SB U)

Thursday 6:30-9:30 p.m.

First part: historical transformations in family life (relationships between husbands and wives, position and treatment of children, importance of kinship ties); second part: the contemporary family through life course (choice of a mate, relations in marriage, parenthood, breakup of the family unit).

SOCIOL 383

Gender and Society

Wednesday 6:00-9:00 p.m.

Instructor: Ingrid Semaan (semaan@soc.umass.edu)

What is gender? How do gender relations intersect with class and race relations? We will be exploring these questions and others through fiction, film, and academic literature.

SOCIOL 395K — ONLINE— CRIMINAL JUSTICE SERIES

Domestic Violence

A survey of patterns and trends in domestic violence in contemporary America, including detailed discussion of the factors that cause and reduce it. Topics include the role of family and work-related stresses as triggers in domestic violence, cultural definitions of violence as an acceptable or unacceptable response to anger; gender-related differences in this response, and the individual and social costs of domestic violence. Special attention will be paid to historical changes in American legal definitions of domestic violence and to the resulting changes in the American criminal justice system's responses to it.

WOST 187

Introduction to Women's Studies (I U)

Monday 6:30-9:00 p.m.

Basic concepts and perspectives in Women's Studies, with women's experiences at the center of interpretation. Critical reading and thinking about gender and its interaction with race and class. Focus on women's history and contemporary issues for women.

WAGS 24 Text and Disciplines: Fiction as History Barale
Tuesday, Thursday 11:30 a.m. Saxton

This course seeks to understand the shared and differing readings of gender that are offered by two disciplines: History and Literature. A series of American novels, surrounded by a grouping of critical commentaries from historians and literary critics, will be used to examine each discipline's construction - and possibly misconstruction - of gender's operation. Our reading will include works by the following authors: Louisa May Alcott, Gwendolyn Brooks, Willa Cather, Sarah Orne Jewett, Catharine Maria Sedgwick, and Harriet Wilson.

WAGS 33 Ingrate Books: Griffiths
Chartering and Un-chartering Patriarchy
Monday, Wednesday 12:30

The so-called European "Great Books" tell and retell the heroic tale of how males took charge of heaven and earth. We shall consider the formation of that literary canon from the standpoint of contemporary works that revise, debunk, or reverse this myth. Ancient texts will be paired with modern retellings: Homer's Odyssey with Christine Bell, The Perez Family; Sophocles' Antigone and Oedipus the King with Rita Dove, The Darker Face of the Earth and Martha Graham, "Night Journey"; the Homeric Hymn to Demeter and Shakespeare's Tempest with Gloria Naylor, Mama Day and Fred Wilcox, "Forbidden Planet"; Euripides' Medea and Bacchae with Toni Morrison, Beloved; and the "Ballad of Mulan" with Maxine Hong Kingston, The Woman Warrior and James Cameron, "Aliens." We shall examine how the subordination of female to male supports other ranked categories: mind / body, rational / irrational, public / private, heaven / earth, order / disorder. If classic heroines and goddesses such as Penelope, Demeter, Antigone, Medea, and Athena were male constructs implicated in the silencing of Greek women, can they be remade as the basis of a modern non-exclusionary canon?

WAGS 53 Representing Domestic Violence Bumiller
Monday 2:00-4:00 p.m.

This course is concerned with literary, political and legal representations of domestic violence and the relations between them. We question how domestic violence challenges the normative cultural definitions of home as safe or love as enabling. This course will consider how these representations of domestic violence disrupt the boundaries between private and public, love and cruelty, victim and oppressor. In order to better understand the gaps and links between representation and experience, theory and praxis, students as part of the work for this course will hold internships (three hours per week) at a variety of area agencies and organizations that respond to situations of domestic violence.

Gender: An Anthropological Perspective

Gewertz

Thursday 2:00-5:00 p.m.

This seminar provides an analysis of male-female relationships from a cross-cultural perspective, focusing upon the ways in which cultural factors modify and exaggerate the biological differences between men and women. Consideration will be given the positions of men and women in the evolution of society, and in different contemporary social, political, and economic systems, including those of the industrialized nations.

PSYCH 40f

Sex Role Socialization

Olver

Wednesday 2:00-4:30 p.m.

An examination of the processes throughout life that produce and maintain sex-typed behaviors. The focus is on the development of the psychological characteristics of males and females and implications of that development for participation in social roles. Consideration of the biological and cultural determinants of masculine and feminine behaviors will form the basis for an exploration of alternative developmental possibilities. Careful attention will be given to the adequacy of the assumptions underlying psychological constructs and research in the study of differences.

historical and social contexts. Periodic film screenings will enrich students' understanding of the cultural contexts of the course; and students may shape individual research projects and presentations to address additional current writers and topics.

The Political Economy of Pleasure
Wednesday 2:30-5:20 p.m.

Bethany Ogdon

Through a combination of anthropological, media studies, and cultural studies approaches, this course examines the social relations behind the production, marketing, and consumption of enjoyment: photographic, culinary, sexual, cinematic, musical, and televisual. Students will be introduced to concepts of political economy, commodities, and the construction of desire and pleasure. The course will closely examine how an economy of pleasure crosses and often reinforces hierarchies of class, race, gender, and ethnicity. Readings will include selections from Marx on the commodity fetish and alienated labor, Simmel, Appadurai, Lacan on jouissance, Zizek's "The Metastases of Enjoyment," Mintz's "Sweetness and Power," and Lutz and Collins's "Reading National Geographic."

Controversies in U.S. Econ/Social History
Tuesday, Thursday 2:00-3:20 p.m.

Susan Tracy

This course addresses the development of the U.S. economy and society from the colonial period to the present. Focusing on the development of capitalism, it provides students with an introduction to economic and historical analysis. We will study the interrelationship among society, economy, and the state; the transformation of agriculture; and the response of workers to capitalism. Issues of gender, race, class, and ethnicity will figure prominently in this course. This is designed to be a core course for students concentrating in economics, politics, and history. We will work on developing research skills in economics and historical methodologies. Classes will have a lecture/discussion format. Students will be expected to attend class regularly, lead occasional discussions, and write several papers.

HACU 237

The Brontë Sisters
Tuesday, Thursday 2:00-3:20 p.m.

Lise Sanders

This course will explore the lives and writings of a prolific set of Victorian siblings: Charlotte, Anne, and Emily Jane Brontë. Raised in rural isolation in the moors of northern England, yet deeply connected to the social and political concerns of their time, these women wrote some of the most vivid and imaginative fictions of the mid-Victorian era. In addition to the major novels - among them Jane Eyre, Villette, Shirley, Wuthering Heights, Agnes Grey, and The Tenant of Wildfell Hall - we will also read the sisters' first publication, a collection of poems published in 1846 under the pseudonyms Currer, Acton, and Ellis Bell. These primary materials will be considered in the context of selected contemporary reviews and biographical writings including Elizabeth Gaskell's The Life of Charlotte Brontë (1857) and in light of recent criticism by Nancy Armstrong, Sandra Gilbert and Susan Gubar, Margaret Homans, Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak, and others. Weekly critical response papers and a substantial research paper (suitable for inclusion in a Division II portfolio) will be required.

American and European Modernisms
Monday, Wednesday 2:30-3:50 p.m.

Eva Rueschmann

Focusing on the rise and development of literary and artistic modernism in American and European cultures, this comparative course explores how modernism both signaled the emergence of new aesthetic experimentation and developed in relation to cataclysmic historical changes in culture and society during the early part of the 20th century, including the rise of mass culture and cinema; industrialization, urbanization, and migration; new concepts of gender roles and sexuality; the impact of World War I and the Russian Revolution; and the influence of psychoanalysis and new forms of subjectivity and consciousness. Comparing American and European writers and their vision of modernity, we will pay attention to the ways in which we might expand and revise our understanding of "high modernism" by considering the representations of class, gender, race and the influence of popular culture in canonical texts. In addition, we will focus on women writers and African-American modern artists who provided their own critical responses to the challenges of making it new.

Controversies in Public Health
Tuesday, Thursday 9:00-10:20 a.m.

Elizabeth Conlisk

The goal of public health may be to maximize the health of the public, but how is that best done and who decides? Public health resources are limited and the information needed to make decisions is often incomplete and imperfect. Not surprisingly, there is often considerable disagreement on what problems to address and how. This course will examine local, national, and international topics in public health, historical and contemporary, that have been viewed differently by various community, professional, commercial, and governmental groups. Some of the topics to be discussed include the restriction of smoking in public places, breastfeeding among HIV-positive women in developing countries, and "golden rice" and the use of genetically modified foods. The readings for the course will be drawn from the primary literature as well as articles that highlight the historical, political, and social context of each issue.

SS 119

Economic Development/Women's Lives
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30 - 11:50 a.m.

Laurie Nisonoff

What happens to women when societies "modernize" and industrialize their economies? Is capitalist economic development a step forward or a step backward for women in industrialized and developing countries? In this seminar we look at debates about how some trends in worldwide capitalist development affect women's status, roles, and access to resources, and locate the debates in historical context. In the "global assembly line" debate we look at women's changing work roles. We ask whether women workers in textile and electronics factories gain valuable skills, power, and resources through these jobs, or whether they are super-exploited by multinational corporations. In the population-control debate, we ask whether population policies improve the health and living standards of women and their families or is the main effect of these policies to control women, reinforcing their subordinate positions in society. Other topics include the effects of economic change on family forms, the nature of women's work in the so-called "informal sector," and what's happening to women in the current worldwide economic crisis. We will use journal articles, short fiction, videos, and The Women Gender & Development Reader to explore these issues. Evaluation is based on participation, short essays, and a research project.

Family, Race and Gender in the U.S.
Wednesday, Friday 10:30 - 11:50 a.m.

Margaret Cerullo

This introductory sociology and feminist studies course will explore the complex roles that dominant ideals of family life play in contemporary U.S. society and politics, while examining the diversity of families that people actually live in or aspire to. Beginning by asking what we mean by family, we will explore the kinds of leverage families and states have to compel their members behavior and how this differs for men and women and according to class, race, and ethnicity. We will explore why feminists have regarded the family as a crucial institution for understanding the social status and power of women. We will examine slavery, in which African slaves were positioned outside the institution of kinship altogether, while developing ideals and practices of kinship invisible to dominant culture. We will examine slavery's legacies, for the "family values" of welfare reform in the contemporary United States, and for the tensions between white and black feminisms. The class will be oriented toward developing the ability to read and write analytically, and with a critical sociological and feminist imagination.

World War II and the Craft of Storytelling
Tuesday, Thursday 9:00-10:20 a.m.

Aaron Berman

World War II defined an era and transformed the lives of all who endured it. In doing so, the war has become a growing source of stories, and these "tellings" will be the subject of the discussions, writings, and projects in this first-year tutorial. Stories, above all, provide clues to the meanings we have attached to the politics and experience of the war, and the resulting social transformations within the United States, particularly with regard to matters of race, gender, and class. We will draw widely from journalists, scholars, novelists, artists, and participants, and we will certainly consider whose stories are "heard" and why. But we also intend to study these writings as human productions in their own right. What do they teach us about the method of history and craft of storytelling? We hope to identify authorial choices and, ultimately, incorporate what we learn into our own analytical and creative historical writings.

SS 215 The Politics of the Abortion Debate Marlene Fried
Tuesday, Thursday 2:00-3:20 p.m.

Abortion rights continue to be contested worldwide and access to abortion is limited everywhere, regardless of its legal status. Harassment of abortion clinics, providers and clinic personnel by opponents of abortion is routine, and there have been seven murders of people involved in abortion care. This course examines the abortion debate in the U.S. looking historically at the period before legalization and up to the present. We explore the ethical, political and legal dimensions of the issue and investigate the anti-abortion and abortion rights movements and ideology. We view the abortion battle in the U.S. in the wider context of reproductive freedom. Specific topics of inquiry include: the morality of abortion; abortion access worldwide; coercive contraception and sterilization abuse; welfare rights; population control; criminalization of pregnant women.

SS 265 Family Gender Power: A Comparative Margaret Cerullo
Approach
Wednesday 1:00-3:20 p.m.

In this course we will explore questions concerning the bases of women's power and subordination in different historical, class, race, and cultural locations, with particular attention to women's position in relation to kinship and the political order. Our case material will come from Europe, China, and the United States. In China and Europe, we will examine the emergence of different patriarchal structures and the role of the state in shaping family, gender, and reproduction. In the United States, we will focus on the racialized production of gender and kinship, from the era of slavery to the rise of the welfare state and its dismantling in the name of "family values." Throughout the case studies, we will highlight various forms of resistance to subordination and the diversity of lived experiences. This course is designed as a core feminist studies course in social science. It will also be valuable for students concentrating in child studies or wanting to incorporate gendered perspectives into their study of European, U.S., or Chinese politics and history.

SS 285 Women of Color and Labor in the U.S. Lili Kim
Wednesday 2:30-5:20 p.m.

Whether as slave women or as racial ethnic immigrant women, women of color have always filled a special niche in the labor market in the United States. This course examines the histories of women of color and their labor outside home in the context of American economy, politics, and culture. The course will begin with the overview of American labor history and theoretical frameworks for interpreting women's work. We will consider the politics of labor through the analytical lenses of gender, race, ethnicity, nationality, and sexuality. We will examine diverse labor experiences of women of color in the United States, such as black women in the institution of slavery, Filipina migrant nurses, Japanese women domestic workers, Mexican women in the cannery industry, Chinese and black women workers in the defense industry during World War II, Korean women shopkeepers and entrepreneurs, and sweatshop workers in the garment industry. The focus will be on women's agency and activism through union organizing and economic empowerment. Instructor permission is required.

WST 101f Introduction to Women's Studies
 Monday, Wednesday 1:15-2:30 p.m. #1 M. Renda
 Tuesday, Thursday 8:35-9:50 a.m. #2 T. Burk

(Speaking-intensive) This course introduces the social and historical construction of women and gender from cross-cultural and interdisciplinary perspectives. We will consider the intersection of gender, race, and class oppression and how these intersections structure sexuality, reproduction and sexual violence. We will explore how gendered bodies are produced by colonial and neocolonial discourses. We will examine the development of feminist theory and its practices in local and international contexts.

WST 200f Women in History M. Renda
 HISTORY 276F U.S. Women since 1890
 Tuesday, Thursday 1:15-2:30 p.m.

This course examines the history of women and the cultural construction of gender in the United States since the turn of the twentieth century. How have class, race, and ethnicity shaped the history of women's work, debates over female sexuality, women's work for social change, and representations of women in cultural and political contexts? In what ways has gender contributed to racial consciousness and class formation in the United States? Using primary and secondary material, we will examine "women's experience" in the realms of work, politics, sexuality, and reproduction.

WST 203f (01) Feminist Approaches to Literature E. Young
 ENGLISH 243f American Gothic
 Monday, Wednesday 11:00-12:15 p.m.

An examination of the gothic--a world of fear, haunting, claustrophobia, paranoia, and monstrosity--in American literature and culture, with an emphasis upon issues of race and gender. Topics to include: slavery and the gothic; women's and lesbian gothic; Southern, Northern, and national gothic; freakishness and grotesquerie; visual gothic. Focus on short and long prose fiction, with some film and photography. Authors and artists may include Alcott, Arbus, Browning, Chesnutt, Crane, Dunn, Faulkner, Gilman, Jackson, Jacobs, McCullers, Morrison, Parks, Poe, Romero, and Wideman.

WST 250f Global Feminism A. Bandarage
 Tuesday, Thursday 11:00-12:15 p.m.

What is globalization? What are its positive and negative effects on different regions, cultures, social classes, ethnic groups, the sexes, and the environment? How are women resisting against poverty, militarism, and the environmental and cultural destruction accompanying globalization? What alternative visions and models of development are offered by women's movements working for peace, justice, and environmental stability?

WST 333f (01) Emily Dickinson In Her Times M. Ackmann
 Tuesday 1:00-3:50 p.m.

(Community-based learning course) This course will examine the writing of Emily Dickinson, both her poetry and her letters. We will consider the cultural, historical, and familial environment in which she wrote, with special attention paid to Dickinson's place as a woman artist in the nineteenth century. Students will be asked to complete a community-based learning project in which some aspect of Dickinson's life and work is interpreted for the general public and incorporated into an ongoing display at the Dickinson Homestead. The class will meet at the Dickinson Homestead in Amherst.

Gender, Race and Science
Tuesday 1:00-3:50 p.m.

K. Barad

This course examines different approaches to understanding the nature of scientific practices. Of central interest will be the diverse accounts offered by feminist studies of science. We will pay particular attention to notions of evidence, methods, cultural and material constraints and the heterogeneous nature of laboratory and theoretical practices. We will consider the ways in which gender, race and sexuality are constructed by science and how these factors influence both scientific practices and our conceptions of science. We will also examine the feminist commitment to taking account of the multifaceted dynamics between science and society without forfeiting the notion of objectivity.

Feminist Theologies
Tuesday, Thursday 11:00-12:15 p.m.

J. Crosthwaite

Mary Daly, Elisabeth Schussler Fiorenza, Phyllis Trible and Naomi Goldenberg, among others, have argued that traditional Jewish and Christian theological systems have overlooked the needs, concerns, histories and contributions of women. Their challenges range from the historical modification of a presumably unbiased religious system to the outright rejection of a so-called patriarchal establishment. Whatever their approach, feminist theologies offer diverse and incisive tools for understanding how a theological system operates, how transitory cultural assumptions become embedded in ongoing doctrines and how apparently minor adjustments can have significant ripple effects.

Globalization and Fundamentalism
Wednesday 1:15-3:05 p.m.

A. Bandarage

The worsening problems of global environmental and social destruction, including the oppression of women, are frequently attributed either to economic and cultural globalization or ethno-religious fundamentalism. However, in what ways do globalization and fundamentalism reinforce each other? What theories and social movements provide more balanced alternatives to the extreme models of psychological and social development represented by both these forces? This course will seek answers to these questions in relation to case studies of ethno-religious as well as gender, race, and class struggles from both the Northern industrialized and impoverished Southern countries.

WST 101 Women of Color: Defining the Issues Elisabeth Armstrong
 Thursday 7:30-9:00 p.m. Ann Arnett Ferguson

WST 101 will explore the distinct modes of analysis that women of color have brought to understanding their condition, as well as how relations of power have shaped women's knowledge, social practices and forms of resistance. The subjects of the invited lecturers might include women and work, women as culture makers, writers, artists, performers, family as a site of resistance and domination, women and nationalism, images and representations of women of color, self-representations, colonial and postcolonial identities, militarization, migrations, and global capitalism. Graded satisfactory/unsatisfactory only. May not be repeated for credit. 2 credits

WST 227 The History of Feminist Thought I : Wendy Kolmar
 19th Century Feminisms (pending CAP approval)
 Monday, Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

The objectives of this course are: first, to explore the broad range of work that lays the intellectual and theoretical ground work for contemporary feminist theory and politics; second, to understand the history of the persistence of central ideas and issues as well as the introduction of entirely new strains of thought and erasure of others; and third, to consider some of the fundamental questions these theories raise about the origins of gender difference, the nature and origins of patriarchy, the intersection between gender, race, class, sexuality, and nationality as categories of analysis or bases of oppressions or empowerment.

WST 240 Global Women, Feminized Work Elisabeth Armstrong
 Tuesday, Thursday 9:00-10:20 a.m.

Advertisements for Madison Avenue fashions gloss over the necessary labor of picking cotton and sewing cloth. Similarly, the women who wear the clothes have scant knowledge of the people who make them. This course pulls the thread of profit that connects disparate places and far-flung people in the global assembly line. As women take the frontlines of cheapened work, they develop new methods of resistance and hone old means of survival. This course relies upon intensive research projects alongside historical, sociological, oral, and written narratives to examine gender and work in economies of slavery, colonialism and multinational capitalism. Prerequisite: WST 150.

WST 245 Gender, Race and the Welfare State in the U.S. Gwendolyn Mink
 Tuesday, Thursday 10:20-11:50 a.m.

This course will examine the development of the U.S. welfare state in light of its gendered and racialized politics and impacts. Readings and lectures will consider the welfare state as a whole through a focus on relationships among the welfare state, democratization, and persistent inequality. Particular attention will be given to welfare policy, an arena of vexed interactions among the politics of gender, race, and class. Prerequisite: WST 150.

WST 301 Feminist Theory (pending CAP approval) Myriam Chancy
Tuesday 3:00-4:50 p.m.

This course is designed for students ready to do advanced work in contemporary feminist theory as articulated by women of varying socio-economic, racial, and national backgrounds. Our study will be plural in nature, encompassing writings by women marginalized by race, class, nationality, and/or sexuality; it will also address a variety of social issues including, but not limited to, representations of women in film and advertising, classism, racism, anti-semitism, homophobia, and sexual harassment. Our primary aim will be to blur the boundary between what has been defined historically as 'practical' as opposed to 'theoretical' deployment of feminist outlooks. Prerequisites: WST 150 or 250 and one other Women's Studies course or permission of the instructor. Additionally, all students must sign up outside the Women's Studies Program office (Seelye 207b).

WST 314 Gender and Film (pending CAP approval) Wendy Kolmar
Tuesday 3:00-4:50 p.m., Monday 7:30-9:30 p.m.

This course examines the operation of gender in popular film representations and explores the ways in which directors have responded to these representations. We will examine the contributions of feminist film theory in shaping these conversations since the 1970s. Students will develop critical and theoretical tools for film viewing and analysis. Prerequisites: WST 150 or 250 and one other Women's Studies course or permission of the instructor. Additionally, all students must sign up outside the Women's Studies Program office (Seelye 207b).

WST 317 Feminist Legal Theory Gwendolyn Mink
Wednesday 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Common readings and discussion will consider U.S. feminist legal theories of subordination and difference as well as feminist legal and policy theories of sex and gender justice. We will pay particular attention to the ways in which intersecting statuses, identities, and interests based on race, class, sexuality, and gender can stratify different women's relationships to the same laws and can undermine the distribution of women's rights to all women. Topics addressed will include work, reproduction, family formation, violence and sexuality as sites of women's oppressions. Throughout the course, students will be asked to theorize the problems posed for law by asymmetries of power and resources among women and between women and men; and on the significance of rights to women's prospects for equality. Prerequisites: WST 150 or 250 and one other Women's Studies course or permission of the instructor. Additionally, all students must sign up outside the Women's Studies Program office (Seelye 207b).

AAS 248 Gender in the Afro-American Literary Tradition TBA
TBA

A study of Afro-American literature through the lens of gender. How does the issue of gender affect the relationship between race and writing? Authors include: Nella Larsen, Zora Neale Hurston, Charles Johnson, Ida B. Wells, Richard Wright, and John Edgar Wideman. Prerequisites: AAS 113 or 237 or with permission of the instructor. Enrollment limited to 20.

AAS 350 Race and Representation: Afro-Americans in Film Ann Arnett Ferguson
Monday 7:30-9:30 p.m., Thursday 3:00-4:50 p.m.

This course will examine the representation of African-Americans in U.S. cinema from two perspectives. The first views the images of African-Americans in Hollywood film and the social historical context in which these representations are produced. The continuity of images as well as their transformation will be a central theme of investigation. The second perspective explores the development of a Black film aesthetic through the works of directors Oscar Micheaux, Julie Dash, Spike Lee, Matty Rich and Isaac Julien. We will attend to their representations of blackness, and the broader social and political community in which they are located. Prerequisite: AAS 111, 113, 117 or the equivalent. Open to Juniors and Seniors only. Permission of the instructor required.

AMS 120 Scribbling Women Sherry Marker
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

With the help of the Sophia Smith Collection and the Smith College Archives, this writing intensive course looks at a number of 19th and 20th century American women writers. All wrestled with specific issues that confronted them as women; each wrote about important issues in American society. Enrollment limited to 15. Priority given to incoming students. Writing intensive.

AMS 220 Colloquium: Fashion Attitudes Bettina Friedl
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

This course will explore attitudes towards fashions in women's dress from the early 19th to the mid-20th century. The goal of the course is to investigate details of changes in dress, various dress reform movements, and the significance of women's dress that will be studied in literature, fabric, painting, magazine illustrations and fashion plates, fashion photography and film. Permission of the instructor required.

ANT 244 Gender, Science and Culture Frédérique Apffel-Marglin
Tuesday, Thursday 3:00-4:50 p.m.

The starting point for this course will be feminist anthropological studies of the biology of women's bodies. The course is located at the intersection of feminist critiques of science, ethnographic studies of modern Western scientific practices, and the new historiography of science. The course will range from women's explicit exclusion from the beginnings of science in 16th and 17th century Western Europe to contemporary practices of in vitro fertilization and germ-line engineering. Not open to first-years. Limited enrollment.

ARH 360 Studies in American Art: John Davis
Topic: Women and Art at the Turn of the Century
Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

An exploration of American women as producers and subjects of late nineteenth-century visual culture. Our investigation will include the changing possibilities of artistic training and practice, the nature of gendered space, the "aestheticization" of turn-of-the-century culture, and the ideological underpinnings of such concepts as "allegory," "reverie," and "melancholy." Throughout we will be sensitive not only to the variety of roles assigned women by mainstream nineteenth-century American culture, but also to the roles women artists were able to define for themselves in an era of complex societal change. Not open to first and second-years. Permission of the instructor required.

CLT 229 Topics in Renaissance Culture: Ann Jones
The Renaissance Gender Debate
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

In "La Querelle des Femmes" medieval and Renaissance writers (1350-1650) took on misogynist ideas from the ancient world and early Christianity: woman as failed man, irrational animal, fallen Eve. Writers debated women's sexuality (insatiable or purer than men's?), marriage (the hell of nagging wives or the highest Christian state?), women's souls (nonexistent or subtler than men's?), female education (a waste of time or a social necessity?). Brief study of the social and cultural changes fuelling the polemic; analysis of the many literary forms it took, from Chaucer's Wife of Bath to Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew, women scholars' dialogues, and pamphlets from the popular press. Some attention to the battle of the sexes in the visual arts. Recommended: a previous course in classics, medieval or Renaissance studies or women's studies. Not open to first years.

African Women's Drama
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:30 p.m.

Katwiwa Mule

This course will examine how African women playwrights use drama to confront the realities of women's lives in contemporary Africa. We will consider the following questions: What is the specificity of the vision unveiled in African women's drama? How do the playwrights use drama to mock rigid power structures and confront crisis, instability and cultural expression in postcolonial Africa? How and for what purposes do they interweave the various aspects of performance in African oral traditions with elements of European drama? Readings, some translated from French, Swahili and other African languages, will include Ama Ata Aidoo's Anowa, Osonye Tess Onwueme's Tell It to Women: An Epic Drama for Women, and Penina Mlamba's Nguzo Mama (Mother Pillar).

Construction of Gender in Modern Japanese Women's Writing
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

Kimberly Kono

This course will focus on the construction of gender in the writings of Japanese women from the mid-19th century until the present. How does the existence of a feminine literary tradition in premodern Japan influence the writing of women during the modern period? How do these texts reflect, resist, and reconfigure conventional representations of gender? We will explore the possibilities and limits of the articulation of feminine and feminist subjectivities, as well as investigate the production of such categories as race, class, and sexuality in relation to gender and each other. Readings will include short stories and novels by such writers as Higuchi Ichiyō, Hayashi Fumiko, Kōno Taeko, Yoshimoto Banana and Yamada Amy. Taught in English, with no knowledge of Japanese required.

EAL 261

Major Themes in Literature:
East-West Perspectives: Gendered Fate
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 11:00 a.m. - 12:10 p.m.

Sabina Knight

Is fate indifferent along lines of gender? What (and whose) interests are served by appeals to destiny? Close readings of women's narratives of desire, courtship, sexuality, prostitution and rape will explore how belief in inevitability mystifies the gender-based oppression of social practices and institutions. Are love, marriage and mothering biological imperatives? What are love, seduction and desire if not freely chosen? Or is freely chosen love merely a Western ideal? How might women write to overcome fatalistic discourses that shape the construction of female subjectivity and agency? Works by Maya Angelou, Simone de Beauvoir, Hayashi Fumiko, Nadine Gordimer, Toni Morrison, Wang Anyi and Zhang Jie. All readings in English translation.

Topics in East Asian Literatures:
The Tale of the Genji and its Legacy
Wednesday 7:30-9:30 P.M.

Thomas Rohlich

This seminar will begin with a reading and study of The Tale of the Genji, one of the greatest works of Japanese literature. We will look at the cultural and societal milieu of the author, as well as the textual features that mark it as an icon of Japanese culture today. We will also examine ways in which the Genji is represented in later texts, such as medieval Noh plays and even 20th century manga, as a way of examining both the question of influence and the role that the Genji plays in the literature and culture of Japan. All readings are in English translation with no knowledge of Japanese required. Permission of the instructor required.

FRN 340 Women Writers and Images of Women Hélène Visentin
in 17th and 18th Centuries French Literature
Monday, Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

How did women have access to knowledge in the early modern period? Who were the women who dared to put pen to paper? How did feminist protests take form? We will examine the representation of women in the 17th and 18th centuries society through different literary genres (novels, plays, essays) and we will analyze texts by women authors. The relations between these representations and the social and historical context will be central to our study of this period. Texts by Madeleine de Scudéry, Molière, Marie-Madeleine de La Fayette, Françoise de Graffigny, Isabelle de Charrière et Denis Diderot. Some of these texts will be compared with their film adaptations. Readings and discussion in French. Permission of the instructor required.

GER 227 Brave New World: Women and the Gertraud Gutzman
Experience of Exile
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

The displacement of populations through war and ethnic strife has been a constant of world history, past and present. One of the examples of forced migration, with significant impact on American life and culture, is that of the Nazi period (1933-45) in Germany and Austria. This course will explore the exile experience of women from these lands (in the majority, German and Austrian Jews): their endurance and resistance during the Nazi period, their central role in the survival of their families, and the effects of exile on their artistic work. Readings will include letters, diaries, memoirs, films, autobiographies, poems and fiction by writers, artists, publishers, political activists and philosophers such as Hannah Arendt, Helen Wolff, Toni Sender, Anna Seghers, Erika Mann, Marlene Dietrich. The course will also include women writers from other countries forced into exile for political reasons such as Eva Hoffman, Nawal el Saadawi, Marina Tsvetayeva. Conducted in English. Knowledge of German not required.

GOV 269 Politics of Gender and Sexuality Gary Lehring
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

An examination of gender and sexuality as subjects of theoretical investigation, historically constructed in ways that have made possible various forms of regulation and scrutiny today. We will focus on the way in which traditional views of gender and sexuality still resonate with us in the modern world, helping to shape legislation and public opinion, creating substantial barriers to cultural and political change.

HST 228 Religious Women in Medieval Society Fiona Griffiths
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

Monasticism provided medieval women an opportunity to pursue the religious life free from the obligations of marriage, motherhood and family. Topics include saints and martyrs, prophets and heretics, sexuality and virginity, literacy and education within the cloister, mysticism, relations between religious women and men, and the relevance of gender in the religious life. Do medieval texts by and about religious women reveal a distinctive feminine spirituality?

HST 252 Women in Modern Europe 1789-1918 Darcy Buerkle
Tuesday, Thursday 3:00-4:40 p.m.

A survey of European women's history from the French Revolution through World War I. We will study shifts in conceptions of public and private with an emphasis on a range of emerging gender, class and race-based relationships to the body politic through primary and secondary sources including autobiographies, novels, treatises and films.

HST 278 History of Women in the U.S., 1865-1970 Helen Lefkowitz Horowitz
 Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:20 PM

Continued examination of the historical position of women within the society and culture. Problems include the implications of class, changing notions of sexuality, educational growth, feminism, African-American women in "freedom," wage-earning women, careers, radicalism, the sexual revolution, the impact of the world wars and the depression, and feminism's second wave. Emphasis on social and cultural aspects.

IDP 208 Women's Medical Issues Leslie Jaffe
 Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

A study of topics and issues relating to women's health, including menstrual cycle, contraception, sexually transmitted diseases, pregnancy, abortion, menopause, depression, eating disorders, nutrition, and cardiovascular disease. While the course focus will primarily be on the physiological aspects of these topics, some social, ethical, and political implications will be considered, including the issues of violence, the media's representation of women and gender bias in health care. Enrollment limited to 70.

JUD 265 Jews and Judaism in America, 1650-present: Holly Snyder
Gender in American Jewish History
 Monday, Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

The distinctive religious, cultural, and social life of Jews in different American settings. Special focus on gender roles and Jewish women's lives in the contexts of immigration, the Americanization of Judaism, assimilation, and the negotiation of conflicting identities. Attention to Jewish social and communal life as well as contributions of Jews to the wider political and cultural scene.

PSY 268 Lesbian Identity and Experience Kathleen Shanahan
 Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

Perspectives on the psychological, social, and cultural construction of lesbian identity and sexual orientation are examined. Themes include the lesbian in contemporary and historical context; sexual orientation as it intersects with gender, race, ethnicity, and social class; identity politics vs. queer theory; bisexuality, transgenderism, and transsexuality; lesbian identity development in adolescence and adulthood; issues of coming out; sexism; heterosexism and homophobia; lesbian and bisexual sex and intimacy; and lesbian coupling, family-building, and parenting. The strengths and resiliencies of lesbians as well as the kinds of psychological and social problems that can develop in hostile and disaffirming contexts are examined.

PSY 366 Topics in the Psychology of Women Lauren Duncan
 Wednesday 1:10-4:00 p.m.

Issues in Adolescent Gender Role Development. In this course we examine psychological issues girls face in their adolescent years. Topics may include body image, self-esteem, academic achievement, peer and dating relationships, and gender socialization. This is a community based learning course and a central component involves volunteering as a mentor to an adolescent girl in the Northampton area. Recommended Pre or co-requisite: PSY266 or WST150, and permission of the instructor.

REL 242 Mary: Images and Cults Vera Shevzov
 Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

Whether revered as the Birth-Giver of God or simply remembered as a Jewish peasant woman, Mary has both inspired and challenged generations of Christian women and men. This course focuses on key developments in the "history of Mary" since Christian times to the present. How has her image shaped Christianity? What does her image in any given age tell us about personal and collective Christian identity? Topics include Mary's "life"; rise of the Marian cult; Mary and the Papacy; differences among Protestant, Catholic and Orthodox Christians; apparitions (e.g., Guadalupe and Lourdes); miracle-working icons; Mary, liberation and feminism. Liturgical, devotional, and theological texts, art, music, and film.

SOC 229 Sex and Gender in American Society Nancy Whittier
Tuesday, Thursday 9:00-10:20 a.m.

An examination of the ways in which the social system creates, maintains, and reproduces gender dichotomies with specific attention to the significance of gender in interaction, culture, and a number of institutional contexts, including the economy, politics, and the family.

SOC 310 The Sociology of Courageous Behavior: Myron Glazer
Gender, Community and the Individual
Tuesday 3:00-4:50 p.m.

The application of theory and research in contemporary sociology, with particular emphasis on the study of loss, adversity, and courageous response. Case studies include the analysis of ordinary people and extraordinary evil, women's involvement in the anti-Apartheid struggle in South Africa, the oppressive Communist society in Czechoslovakia, resistance in concentration camps and ghettos and rescuers of Jews during the European Holocaust. Women's memoirs will serve as a major source. Admission by permission of the instructor.

SOC 325 Migration and Gender (pending CAP approval) Ingrid Sommerkorn-Abrahams
Thursday 3-4:50 p.m.

International mainstream (im)migration scholarship has traditionally been gender-blind. Although many contemporary voluntary and involuntary migration movements are female dominated, the male migrant is considered prototypical. Women are either (often) invisible in migration research or they are seen as dependants and rarely as protagonists of the migration process in their own right. In this seminar we will explore the migratory experience of selected ethnic groups by analyzing social science research with a 'gender-specific lens'. Topics include: Changes in gender and generational relations, the role of family and social networks in the migration process, comparisons between labor migration in the U.S. and in Europe. Permission of the instructor required.

THE 214 Black Theatre Andrea Hairston
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

A study of the Black experience as it has found expression in the theatre. Emphasis on the Black playwrights, performers, and theatres of the 1950s to the 1990s. The special focus on Black Theatre U.S.A. makes this course integral with Afro-American studies offerings. More than half the playwrights considered are women, and the investigation of gender is central to examining all plays and productions. Attendance required at some performances.

THE 242a Acting II: Confronting Gender/
Performing the Body Ellen Kaplan
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 10:00-12:00 p.m.

The course combines rehearsal and performance of selected dramatic texts with the creation of students' original work, to look at the ways in which culture shapes gender and its performance on and off stage. We examine the (female) actor's body in performance, and the nature of cultural assumptions about body image Utilizing acting training techniques and methodology (physical and vocal exploration; research; textual analysis; character work and improvisation) we explore stereotype and identity, power dynamics around body-image, and the impact of culture and media on the female body Enrollment limited to 16. Permission of the instructor required.
