WOMENSST 290A  Biology of Difference                Mary Elizabeth Strunk

WOMENSST 391W  Writing for Majors                   Alix Paschkowiak

Stay tuned to Spire to add this class. This class replaces WOMENSST 392A, Gender and Sexuality Seminar.

WOMENSST 297P  Hormones, Body Languages and the Politics of Life                Mary Elizabeth Strunk

How did hormones become the cause — and proof — of sex and gender differences? How have ideas of "healthy" and "sick" bodies been changed by various hormone therapies and why have women so often been the recipients of those therapies? As hormone technologies enable some people to exert control over their fertility, aging, and gender expression, how do these technologies revive (or revise) long-standing debates over biological essentialism? This interdisciplinary course will examine the cultural politics of hormones and the major and ongoing debates over hormones’ meaning, purpose, and application. Focusing on hormones both inside and outside of the body, we will study how hormones have been commodified (especially in this Age of Genes) and how hormones affect the environment and the food we eat.
WOMENSST 187 | Introduction to Women’s Studies
Banu Subramaniam
Monday, Wednesday 10:10-11:00 a.m.
discs F 9:05, 10:10, 11:00 a.m.

Placing women’s experiences at the center of interpretation, this class introduces basic concepts and key areas of women’s lives both historically and contemporaneously. It is an inter-disciplinary, trans-disciplinary, and cross cultural study of women’s roles and relations but it is also an overview of theoretical perspectives on gender and its intersection with other social constructs of difference (race/ethnicity, class, sexuality, and age). The central aim is to foster critical reading and thinking about these interlocking systems which have shaped and influenced the historical, cultural, social, political, and economical contexts of our lives. Specific attention will be given to women’s resistance of those gendered inequalities, and the various ways they have worked to create new systems of change by engaging in national and global transformational politics.

WOMENSST 187H | Introduction to Women’s Studies – Honors
Alex Deschamps
Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 #78004

Honors course with collaborative/research/community project. Same general description as WOMENSST 187. Culture and Society: Webster RAP. Taught in Orchard Hill. Gen Ed IU

WOMENSST 201 | Critical Perspectives
Miliann Kang
#1 Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.  #76301
#2 Tuesday, Thursday 11:15 – 12:30 p.m.  #76281

Introduction to fundamental questions and concepts of feminist thought and to the basic intellectual tools of analysis integrating economic and cultural imperialism, gender, class, race, and sexual orientation. Also addresses the multifaceted dimensions of women’s lived experiences within a global context.

WOMENSST 290A | Introduction to Biology of Difference
Mary Elizabeth Strunk
Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.  #76302

The course centrally examines our understanding of the “body”. While humans have many similarities and differences, we are organized around certain axes of “difference” that have profound consequences – sex, gender, race, class, sexuality, religion, nationality etc. These differences can shape not only group affiliation and identity, but also claims about intellectual and behavioral capacities. This course will explore popular claims, critiques and understandings of “difference” as well as academic research, its claims, debates and critiques. This is an interdisciplinary course that will draw from the biological and social sciences and the humanities. We will explore principles of human biology – anatomy, physiology, sex/gender/sexuality, reproductive biology, genetics, as well as the scientific method(s) and experimental designs. The course will give students the tools to analyze scientific studies, to understand the relationship of nature and culture, science and society, biology and politics. Gen Ed U, SI.

WOMENSST 295C | Career and Life Choices
Karen Lederer
Monday 2:30-4:10 p.m.  #76306

Women’s Studies teaches critical thinking skills. How can students use these skills to make informed career choices? How is it possible to engage in planning one’s career while conscious of the realities of race, sex, and class in today’s corporate economy? What are career options for students whose values include working for a better society? Is it possible to put together a balanced life and pay the bills besides? How can pressured college seniors, particularly activists, get all the career tasks they need to do done (resume writing, budgeting, researching career opportunities, networking, informational interviews) while finishing out their college degree? Students will formulate their own career questions and choices. The first part of the semester is self awareness, articulating interests, skills and values. The 2nd part of the semester focuses on workforce information and practical job search skills. Assignments include: self awareness exercises, informational interviews, budget, resume, cover letter and more.

WOMENSST 297P Hormones, Body Languages and the Politics of Life
Mary Elizabeth Strunk
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

How did hormones become the cause — and proof — of sex and gender differences? How have ideas of "healthy" and "sick" bodies been changed by various hormone therapies and why have women so often been the recipients of those therapies? As hormone technologies enable some people to exert control over their fertility, aging, and gender expression, how do these technologies revive (or revise) long-standing debates over biological essentialism? WOMENSST 301 Theorizing Women's Issues
Dayo Gore
Tues, Thurs. 11:15-12:30 p.m. #76258

This course provides a historical overview and critical analysis of controversies and current issues in feminist theory. In particular the course will explore the ways intersections of race, gender, class, nation and sexuality, as well as the politics of difference and power, have shaped feminist thought. In addition, the course will take into account the ways such theories address practical questions and debates regarding gender relations, women's lived experiences and strategies for social change. Topics may include work and international economic development, violence against women, racism, class and poverty, heterosexism, the social construction of gender, race and sexuality, nationalism and the state, reproductive issues, pornography and media representations of women.

WOMENSST 391M African-American Women and the Civil Rights/Black Power Movement
Dayo Gore
Tues, Thurs 2:30-3:45 p.m. #77987

This course examines black women’s participation in and influence on the U.S. Civil Rights/Black Power movements from the 1940s to the 1980s as well as the impact of these movements and struggles on black women’s daily lives, status and politics in the United States. Centering black women’s experiences as grassroots organizers, political leadership and civil rights activists this course explores significant events, organizations and political theories that helped to form and transform the black freedom struggle during the latter part of the Twentieth Century. In addition we will examine debates over leadership styles and political goals as well as the dynamics of class, sexuality, race, gender and region that shaped social activism and the cultural politics of the movements. From this vantage point we will begin the process of addressing a range of longstanding issues that have plagued activists and theorists alike including building solidarity, sustaining political commitments, creating viable organizations and developing strategies for long-term social change.
This course fulfills the Women of Color inside the US requirement for Women’s Studies majors and minors.

WOMENSST 391W  Junior Year Writing  Alix Paschkowiak
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 10:10-11:00 a.m. #76298

Course acquaints students with the many genres of writing within Women’s Studies and is structured around a set of readings selected to represent a large variety of stylist approaches including scholarly writings in a number of fields, book and film reviews, journal writing, letters to the editor, zines, web pages, personal and self-reflexive prose, newsletter prose, and conference reports. The readings will be short, and each will be intended to serve as a model of its kind to be analyzed, emulated, and/or critiqued. The course allows students to hone skills on modes of expository writing and argumentation useful for research and writing in a variety of fields. Fulfills University’s Junior Year Writing Requirement. Offered fall semester only.

WOMENSST 393C  Caribbean Women Writing Resistance  Alex Deschamps

The intent of this course is to use literature, fiction, the novel, poetry, performance, music, and art, as vehicles to reading and analyzing how Caribbean women write and speak culture, resistance, identity, and politics. Selected readings will demonstrate how these wide range of writings can be a powerful means of communication for education, influence, resistance, and protest. These writings will be used inter-alia (1) to discuss alternative forms of resistance against women’s status in the Caribbean, (2) to engage with the cause of advancing women’s rights and to continue the struggle towards equity, (3) to theorize and validate the work of Caribbean women writers. This alternative means of education fits into the Caribbean feminist agenda of Development in which women play a central role in that process. Selected works will be drawn from women in the Caribbean Diaspora, Anglophone, Francophone, and Latin America. Writers and authors will include, among others, Merle Hodge, Merle Collins, Paule Marshall, Edwidge Dandicat, Olive Senior, Maryse Conde, Jean Rhys, Carol Boyce Davies, Jamaica Kincaid, Michelle Cliff, Lorna Goodson, Phyllis Shand Alfrey, Marlene Nourbese Phillip, Miriam Da Costa Willis, Opal Palmer Adisa, Audre Lorde, Majorie Agosin, Norma Alarcon, Elizabeth Nunez. Fulfills the Women of Color inside or outside the U.S. requirement for Women’s Studies majors and minors.

WOMENSST 591E  Foundations of Feminist Theory  Ann Ferguson
Wednesday  3:35-6:00 p.m. #78009

This course is designed for upper level undergraduates with some background in feminist theory and for graduate students who want a foundation in social theory on which contemporary US feminist theory is based. We will read some basic selections from the key currents in social theory from which different paradigms in feminist theory in the 1960s emerged. These will include Marxism, Existentialism, Freudian thought, Classical Liberal thought (Wollstonecraft), Poststructuralist thought
Women's Studies Program Courses

(Foucault), Postcolonial thought (Said), and Racial Formation theory (Omi and Winant). We will read feminists who extend each paradigm to try to answer feminist questions, including Jónasdóttir and Federici, Beauvoir and Mackinnon, Chodorow and Irigaray, Friedan and Steinem, Butler and Feder, Mohanty and hooks. Books will include Tong Feminist Thought, 2nd edition, Foucault History of Sexuality, vol. 1, Butler The Psychic Life of Power; hooks Feminist theory from margin to center, and a course packet of readings. There will be a short paper due the middle of the semester, a term paper, short homework questions and a group presentation.

COMMUNICATIONS
407 Machmer Hall 545-4314

COMM 397NN  Race, Gender and the SitCom  Demetria Shabazz
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

Lecture, discussion. This course examines the situation comedy from sociological and artistic perspectives. We will seek, first of all, to understand how situation-comedy is a rich and dynamic meaning-producing genre within the medium of television. Secondly we will work to dissect narrative structures, and the genre’s uses of mise-en-scene, cinematography/videography, editing, and sound to create specific images of the family through social constructions of race, class, and gender. In addition we will use various critical methods such as semiotics, genre study, ideological criticism, cultural studies, and so on to interrogate why the sitcom form since its inception in the 1950s has remained one of the most popular genres for audiences and industry personnel alike and assess what the genre might offer us in terms of a larger commentary on notions of difference and identity in the US and beyond. Open to Senior & Junior Communication majors only.

COMM 397UU  Women in Documentary Film  Lisa Ades
Thursday 4:00-6:55 p.m.

This course examines women in documentary film—as subjects and as storytellers. How does gender influence filmmaking? How and why are particular stories told? Why are women drawn to non-fiction filmmaking? How does documentary film provide a voice for marginalized topics? With these questions in mind, we explore the history of women in non-fiction film, methods and approaches to documentary filmmaking, and how social, political and cultural movements have shaped and been shaped by women’s storytelling. Among the issues and themes addressed by the films screened in this course are: health and environment, beauty and body image, sexuality, popular culture, coming of age, mothers and daughters, war and human rights. Film selections range from Leni Riefenstahl’s Olympiad to Kate Davis’s Southern Comfort to Barbara Kopple’s Dixie Chicks: Shut Up and Sing.

COMM 491A  Media & Construction of Gender  Lynn Phillips
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

This course draws on research and theory in psychology, sociology, gender and cultural studies, and related fields to examine how various forms of media shape our understandings of ourselves and others as gendered beings. We will discuss how media messages not only influence our behaviors, but also permeate our very senses of who we are from early childhood. Through a critical examination of fairy tales, text books, advertisements, magazines, television, movies, and music, students will explore the meanings and impacts of gendered messages as they weave with cultural discourses about race, class, sexuality, disability, age, and culture.

ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT
1004 Thompson Hall  545-2590

ECON 397S  Gender & Economic Development  Melissa Gonzalez-Brenes
Tuesday, Thursday 2:30-3:45 p.m.
This course explores the relationship between gender and economic development in less developed countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America. We use economic tools to examine the role that gender plays in a range of development issues including poverty, inequality, credit, law and labor markets. We also discuss the implications for public policy and analyze policy interventions designed to address these issues. Prerequisites: Economics 103 or Resource Economics 102, Economics 203 recommended.

ENGLISH 300 Junior Year Writing Seminar R. Jennison
We of the Streets: Class, Race, and Gender in Modern American Poetry

This course explores the intersections of class, race and gender in Modern American Poetry. We will trace the emergence of various poetic tendencies that cohere around collective and individual struggles against capitalism, racism and sexism in the late 19th and 20th Centuries. Alongside primary texts, we will also read current critical scholarship that examines the relationship between poetic traditions and social movements and formations. Students will also gain an introduction to 19th and 20th century thinkers central to theorizing structural and psychical formations of class, race and gender; the writings of Karl Marx, Sigmund Freud and W.E.B. DuBois will provide critical touchstones for our discussions of poetic texts. Frequent quizzes will ensure a democracy of informed participants. Prospective students should be aware that this course demands vocal engagement; seminar-like collective discussions will structure many of our readings. Junior and Senior Majors only. Prerequisite: English 200 with a grad eof “B-“ or better.

ENG 491H The Irish Female Imagination Margaret O’Brien Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.
The purpose of this course will be to read the work of a number of contemporary, women poets from Ireland. The syllabus will include not just the established voices of Eavan Boland, Eilean Ni Chuilleanain, Medbh McGuckian and Nuala NiDhomhnaill but also of the less well known Rita Ann Higgins, Paula Meehan, Mary O'Malley, Kerry Hardie and Moya Cannon. We will also consider the work of newcomers Catriona O'Reilly and Sinead Morrissey, and the posthumously published poems of Dorothy Molloy. Our first and abiding aim will be to read the work of each poet closely. We will pay detailed attention to language, noting the choices these writers make with regard to diction and form in order to accommodate unique, often subversive visions. While each one of these voices is distinctive, they all share certain cultural concerns and inherit a history. The second part of our job, therefore, will be to establish that context. Regular, selected reading will be required from the recently published and ground-breaking Field Day Anthology of Irish Women's Writing and Traditions, a work in two volumes which will be on reserve in the library. Two essays will be required.

Witches: Myth & Reality

Tuesday, Thursday 4:00-5:15 p.m.

Susan Cocalis

This course focuses on various aspects of witches/witchcraft in order to examine the historical construction of the witch in the context of the social realities of women (and men) labeled as witches. The main areas covered are: European pagan religions and the spread of Christianity; the "Burning Times" in early modern Europe, with an emphasis on the German situation; 17th-century New England and the Salem witch trials; the images of witches in folklore and fairy tales in the context of the historical persecutions; and contemporary Wiccan/witch practices in their historical context. The goal of the course is to deconstruct the stereotypes that many of us have about witches/witchcraft, especially concerning sexuality, gender, age, physical appearance, occult powers, and Satanism. Readings are drawn from documentary records of the witch persecutions and witch trials, literary representations, scholarly analyses of witch-related phenomena, and essays examining witches, witchcraft, and the witch persecutions from a contemporary feminist or neo-pagan perspective. The lectures will be supplemented by related material taken from current events in addition to visual material (videos, slides) drawn from art history, early modern witch literature, popular culture, and documentary sources. Conducted in English.

HISTORY 388  U.S. Women’s History I (H SU)  Joyce Berkman
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-1:50 p.m. with Friday discs 9:05/10:10/12:20

Lecture and Discussion. This course broadly outlines the major political, social, economic and cultural patterns of change and continuity that characterize the lives of American women from the colonial era to 1890. Topics covered include: European, African, and Native American women’s experiences; religious conformity and dissent; the witchcraft scare; impact of the American Revolution; developments in women’s education, impact of ruling scientific and medical ideas on women’s bodies and sexuality; women’s movements for social reform, women’s rights, redefining citizenship and an end to slavery; shifting family structures and gender roles; the impact of the Civil War and Reconstruction. Course Requirements: a variety of readings, debates and panel discussions, reflection papers and one position paper. Extra credit and Honors credit are options.

HISTORY 391F  Women and Slavery  B. Krauthamern
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

This class examines the history of African and African American women’s enslavement in the United States and the West Indies in the 18th and 19th centuries. Readings and lectures examine women’s experiences in the Trans-Atlantic slave trade; women’s labor patterns; reproduction and family life; resistance and rebellion; abolitionist movements; and slave narratives written by African American women.

HISTORY 697I  Topics in U.S. Women’s History  Joyce Berkman
Monday 6:30-9:00 p.m.

This graduate topics course spans women and gender history from the colonial era to the present. It prepares students for a research seminar and graduate exams in the field of women and gender history. The study of historiography on key questions in the field features recent scholarship combined with pathbreaking earlier writings. Although the role of gender and gender relations is critical to understanding both female and male experience, the emphasis of this course is on the way gender intersects with other major societal and cultural influence in shaping women’s lives. This, of course, includes gender relations in the context of how men are gendered. The aims of the course, then, are to deepen understanding of the array of and interconnections among time and place-specific influences that shape women’s consciousness and behavior; to compare and contrast women’s experience across the axes of social class, race, ethnicity, religion, and sexuality; to explore what we know with how we know it through our attention to a variety of kinds of historical sources and scholarly modes of presentation; and to grapple with some of the central debates within the field of women and gender history. Course requirements include informed participation in discussion, three papers (each 7-10 pages), and one in-class oral presentation.

This is an upper-level seminar on a hotly contested topic. The class will engage readings and other materials which explore questions of gender, women's activism, local and international politics, as well as Islamic law, family law, constitutional law and international law. How does Islamic law affect Muslim women, and how do Muslim women work to change both Islamic and state law? How do state governments and international bodies handle questions of gender in the Muslim world? What historical paths has the relationship between Muslim women and the law taken, and what kind of possibilities does the future hold?

Advanced peers serve as mentors to the first semester peer health educators, and may elect to continue in the program through independent study credits. Consent of instructor required. Prerequisite: EDUC/PUBHLTH 213.

CENTER for PUBLIC POLICY & ADMINISTRATION
Thompson Hall 545-3940

PUBP&ADM 697G Public Policy, Gender & Care Nancy Folbre
Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.

This course will explore public policy issues relevant to the care sector of the economy—the provision of paid and unpaid services to dependents. Drawing from the emerging feminist discourse of care work, we will develop an interdisciplinary analysis of the common features—and common problems—of health care, elder care, child care with particular attention to the impact of inequalities based on gender, race/ethnicity, and class. Comparative analysis of international, national, and state-level policies will be included, with particular attention to current policy debates within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

SOCIIOLOGY DEPARTMENT 545-0577

SOCIOL 106 Race, Gender, Class and Ethnicity (SBU) Dan Clawson
Monday, Wednesday 2:30-3:20 p.m.
Discussions: Friday 9:05, 10:10, 11:15, 12:20, 1:25 p.m.

Introduction to sociology. Analysis of how the intersections of race/ethnicity, gender, and social class affect people's lives in relation to political power, social status, economic mobility, interactions with various subgroups in American society, etc. Emphasis on the role of social institutions and structural-level dynamics in maintaining these identities and areas of inequality.

All departmental courses except 100-level automatically count towards the Women’s Studies major. All departmental, including 100-level automatically count towards the Women’s Studies minor. For additional courses covering applied areas of Women’s Studies, consult the component course section, pages 15-21.

SOCIOL 222
The Family (SBU)
Naomi Gerstel
Lecture: Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:05 p.m.
Discussions Friday

Using lectures and discussion groups, we will explore how we define family, the ways we construct families, and the relationship between our families and larger social forces. Beginning with an examination of the history of families, we will look at changes in seemingly impersonal forces that are associated with changes in personal relations—between partners and spouses, between parents and children, among extended kin. Then we will turn to contemporary families across the life course, looking at the choice of a partner and experiences in marriage, parenting and childhood, and marital dissolution. Throughout, we will discuss differences—by gender, by race, and by class. Throughout we will attend to the social forces that shape these personal experiences.

SOCIOL 383
Gender and Society
Michelle Budig
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 10:10-11:00 a.m.

SOCIOL 383H
Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.
Barbara Tomaskovic-Devey

Sociological analyses of women’s and men's gendered experiences, through examination of: 1) historical and cross-cultural variations in gender systems; 2) contemporary interactional and institutional creation and internalization of gender and maintenance of gender differences; 3) how gender experiences vary by race/ethnicity, social class and other differences. Biological, psychological, sociological and feminist theories are examined.

SOCIOL 387
Sexuality & Society
Amy Schalet
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 11:15-12:05 p.m.
Tuesday, Thursday 2:30-3:45 p.m.

The many ways in which social factors shape sexuality. Focus on cultural diversity, including such factors as race/ethnicity, gender, and sexual identity in organizing sexuality in both individuals and social groups. Also includes adolescent sexuality; the invention of heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality; the medicalization of sexuality; and social theories about how people become sexual. Prerequisite: 100-level Sociology course. (Gen.Ed. SB, U)

SOCIOL 388
Gender & Globalization
Millie Thayer
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

Examines how globalization impacts gender relations, as well as how beliefs about femininity and masculinity influence globalization. Focuses on particularly important contexts, including: global production, international debt, migration, sex, tourism and war.
To earn Women's Studies credit for component courses, students must focus their paper or project on Women's Studies. See the Program Office for more information. Note: 100 level only count towards the Women's Studies minor and do not count towards the major.

This course will study some of the arguments that structure our thinking about four contemporary concerns—punishment, censorship, animal rights, the right to die—and how those concerns are inextricably shaped by gender and race, class and sexuality. While we might have strong opinions about these topics, it is nonetheless the case that all of our judgments about the "rightness" of our ideas, feelings, and behaviors can be (and undoubtedly will be) questioned by someone else with very different opinions. The goal of this course is not to discover the "right" way to think about, for example, euthanasia or vegetarianism. Instead, we will examine the kinds of evidence and authority, logic and structure that produce strong arguments in favor of thinking one way or another. Readings will include such authors as Kazuo Ishigura, Toni Morrison, George Orwell, Peter Singer, and Charles Johnson.

This course will explore the construction of the monstrous, over cultures, centuries and disciplines. With the greatest possible historical and cultural specificity, we will investigate the varied forms of monstrous creatures, their putative powers, and the explanations given for their existence—as we attempt to articulate the kindred qualities they share. Among the artists to be considered are Bosch, Valdes Leal, Velazquez, Goya, Munch, Ensor, Redon, Nolde, Picasso, Dali, Kiki Smith, and Cindy Sherman.

The course will deal with the world of romance in traditional Chinese culture. Following the thematic arrangement found in the seventeenth-century text Qingshi, A History of Love, an encyclopedic work about the various forms love can take, we will read and analyze stories, novels, poetry and plays (in their English translation) from different historical periods. Our aim shall be to try and draw together all of the discourses circulating about the experience of passion, love and lust from the Tang dynasty up until the early twentieth century. If time allows, we will engage in comparisons with other East Asian traditions as well as with the Western traditions of romance, with the goal to generate meaningful cross-cultural exchanges.
ANTH 35  Gender: Anthropological Perspective  Deborah Gewertz
Wednesday 2:00-5:00 p.m.

This seminar provides an analysis of male-female relationships from a cross-cultural perspective, focusing upon the ways in which cultural factors modify and exaggerate the biological differences between men and women. Consideration will be given to the positions of men and women in the evolution of society, and in different contemporary social, political, and economic systems, including those of the industrialized nations.

ARHA 91  City/Court/County  Nicola Courtright
EURO 45  Wednesday 12:30-3:30 p.m.

This seminar treats the art and architecture of courts within their urban or rural fabric in Renaissance and Baroque Italy and France. Cities of particular importance are Florence, Mantua, Rome and Paris; the ideal of retreat from civilization into the country is represented by aristocratic and royal domiciles outside of those centers, such as Versailles. Topics include imagery of rule in painting, sculpture, architecture, and landscape gardens; the distinction between public and private realms in the city and country and its political meaning; and the expression of political and religious ideology through architectural and urban planning. Special emphasis this fall is given to the developing imagery of women from ruling families in Florence, female aristocrats such as Isabella d'Este, and mistresses and queens in their French residences during the 15th through 17th centuries.

BLST 27  Creating a Self  Andrea Rushing
Tuesday, Thursday 2:00-3:20 p.m.

Pioneering feminist critic Barbara Smith says, "All the men are Black, all the women are White, but some of us are brave." This cross-cultural course focuses on "brave" women from Africa and its New World diaspora who dare to tell their own stories and, in doing so, invent themselves. We will begin with a discussion of the problematics of writing and reading autobiographical works by women. The works vary from year to year. This year will focus on women writers such as Edwidge Danicat, Lucille Clifton, Buchi Emecheta, and Rita Dove.

BLST 57/HIST 41 Slave Trade – Reconstruction  Hilary Moss
component  Tuesday, Thursday 2:00-3:20 p.m.

This course is a survey of the history of African American men and women from the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries through the Civil War and Reconstruction. The content is a mixture of the social, cultural, and political history of blacks during two and a half centuries of slavery with the story of the black freedom struggle and its role in America's national development. Among the major topics addressed: the slave trade in its moral and economic dimensions; African retentions in African American culture; origins of racism in colonial America; how blacks used the rhetoric and reality of the American and Haitian Revolutions to their advancement; antebellum slavery; black religion and family under slavery and freedom; the free black experience in the North and South; the crises of the 1850s; the role of race and slavery in the causes, course, and consequences of the Civil War; and the meaning of emancipation and Reconstruction for blacks. Readings include historical monographs, slave narratives by men and women, and one work of fiction.

English

ENGL 59 Queer Fictions

John Cameron
Tuesday, Thursday  2:00-3:20 p.m.

The period 1880 to 1920 appears to have been the moment of the emergence of modern sexuality in American and European culture and literature. The representation of proliferating forms of erotic desire, often veiled or coded, found rich and complex articulation in the discourse of literary modernism. The course will take advantage of recent historical and theoretical work (Foucault, Sedgwick, Butler and others) to approach writing by Melville, Cather, Henry James, R.L. Stevenson, Wilde, Forster, Lawrence, Woolf, Gide, Mann, Colette, and others. Attention will be paid to the work of Sigmund Freud in this period as being perhaps the queerest fiction of all.

History

HIST 80 Affirmative Action Empire

Sergey Glebov
component Tuesday, Thursday  11:30-12:50 p.m.

This course introduces students to the history of the Soviet state and society through a variety of topics, all of which touch on the problem of dealing with diversity under a Communist regime. We will begin with a discussion of recent theories of nationalism and empire, and read Joseph Stalin's and Vladimir Lenin's texts on revolution and nationalism. Later, we shall discuss how the Communist regime envisioned socialist transformations in various parts of the Soviet Union, focusing in particular on the Soviet campaign for the modernization of Islamic Central Asia and the unveiling of Central Asian women. We will also explore the meaning of the Great Terror that swept the country as Stalin's grip on power hardened, and look at World War II and its legacies. Using a range of historical sources, from animated films to novels and rock songs, we shall explore the culture of the late Soviet Union and discuss social forces that predetermined its demise as the only grand alternative to Western-style liberal democracy. It is expected that by the end of the class students will be familiar with the assumptions and the language of Soviet-style Marxism, and understand the evolution of the economic, cultural and social policies of the Soviet regime. Assignments include three response papers, and a final 20-page research paper.

Psychology

PSYC 43 Gender, Brain, Behavior

Sarah Turgeon
Tuesday, Thursday  10:00-11:20 a.m.
This course will explore a number of interrelated questions regarding gender and science. We will start by describing gender stereotypes: beliefs about the characteristics, abilities, traits, and behaviors that distinguish women and men. We will then examine the empirical investigations and scientific theories from the fields of biology and psychology that purport to define and explain gender differences. We will consider, for example, gender identity, sexual orientation, cognitive abilities and preferences, parenting, and communication styles. We will draw on scientific literature from the fields of evolutionary psychology, behavioral endocrinology, developmental biology, genetics, and developmental psychology. We will look closely at the nature of the evidence from both human and animal research as well as consider the political and social contexts in which gender differences and similarities are studied. We will conclude by questioning whether the doing of science is itself a gendered activity. This course will pay particular attention to the development of the students’ skills in both writing and oral presentation.

Sociology/Anthropology
205 Morgan Hall
542-2193

SOCI Social Class
Ronald Lembo
component Tuesday, Thursday 10:00-11:20 a.m.

This course will consider various ways that class matters in the United States. Historical accounts will be used in conjunction with sociological theories to discuss the formation of classes, including the formation of discourses and myths of class, in American society. Class will then serve as a lens to examine the origins and characteristics of social stratification and inequality in the U.S. The bulk of the course will focus on more contemporary issues of class formation, class structure, class relations, and class culture, paying particular attention to how social class is actually lived out in American culture. Emphasis will be placed on the role class plays in the formation of identity and the ways class cultures give coherence to daily life. In this regard, the following will figure importantly in the course: the formation of upper class culture and the role it plays in the reproduction of power and privilege; the formation of working class culture and the role it plays in leading people to both accept and challenge class power and privilege; the formation of the professional middle class and the importance that status anxiety carries for those who compose it. Wherever possible, attention will be paid to the intersection of class relations and practices with those of other social characteristics, such as race, gender and ethnicity. The course will use sociological and anthropological studies, literature, autobiographies, and films, among other kinds of accounts, to discuss these issues.

Spanish
5 Barrett Hall
542-2317

SPAN 23 Titulo: Caribbean Women’s Literature
Lucia Suarez
Tuesday, Thursday 2:00-3:20 p.m.

This course will explore the works of 19th- and 20th-century women writers, who through homesickness, and political commitment, passionately re-wrote the histories of their islands based on their personal stories of love and belonging. We will focus on the Spanish Caribbean and its diverse diasporic experiences in Paris, Madrid, and New York. Conducted in Spanish.

Contemporary feminist philosophers, postcolonial theorists, and critical race theorists have formulated novel theories of subjectivity and sense making. This course introduces you to fundamental concepts that help you to think critically about race, gender, sexuality, and the transnational. Course themes include: language as racialized and sexed; commodification and the market; postcoloniality and the aesthetics of embodiment; global feminisms; narrativity and experience; theories of transformation and critique.

The representation of the human body is central to the history of art. This course will explore this crucial subject in art. The course begins with the shift from Jacques-Louis David’s virile masculinity to a more androgynous and even feminized male as rendered by his followers. It then will explore the spectacle of a modern city in which prostitutes/Venus/femme fatales/other kinds of working women often were favored over the domestic sphere. It ends with the period of World War I where various assaults on traditional mimesis took place among avant-garde artists.

"Lovers and mad men have such shaping phantasies, that apprehend more than cool reason ever comprehends." (A Midsummer Night's Dream) In the first part of the course we will read Shakespeare (five plays) and in the latter part Virginia Woolf (four novels and selected essays). Our main focus will be on the texts, reading them from several perspectives and with some attention to their widely different literary and cultural assumptions. However, one thread tying together our work on these two authors will be their common interest in the ways human beings lose their frames of reference and their sense of themselves in madness, lose and find themselves in love or in sexuality, and find or make both self and world in the shaping act of the imagination. The method of the course will include directed close reading, discussion, and periodic lectures. Three to four pieces of student writing are expected.

<td>Identity Beyond Identity Politics</td>

<td>Wednesday 1:00-3:50 p.m.</td>

How can we understand the importance of identity politics and what are its limitations? What grounds do philosophy, literary theory and the arts provide for thinking identity and imagining beyond it? What do conceptions of sex-specific, racialized processes of becoming imply for the question of subjectivity? How important is the idea of identity to the life of categories such as race, gender, class, ethnicity, sexuality, age, the nation, and culture within and outside the arts? What ideas about reading, subjectivity, community and action are at stake? We will study literature, films, images, and writings by theorists such as Benjamin, Adorno, Kristeva, Irigaray, Braidotti, Lugones, Alcoff, Chow, Agamben, Ahmed.
What happens to women when societies "modernize" and industrialize their economies? Is capitalist economic development a step forward or a step backward for women in industrialized and developing countries? In this seminar we look at debates about how some trends in worldwide capitalist development affect women's status, roles and access to resources, and locate the debates in historical context. In the "global assembly line" debate we look at women's changing work roles. We ask whether women workers in textile and electronics factories gain valuable skills, power and resources through these jobs, or whether they are super-exploited by multinational corporations. In the population control debate, we ask whether population policies improve the health and living standards of women and their families or whether the main effect of these policies is to control women, reinforcing their subordinate positions in society. Other topics include the effects of economic change on family forms, the nature of women's work in the so-called "informal sector," and what's happening to women in the current worldwide economic crisis. We will use journal articles, short fiction, videos, and The Women Gender & Development Reader to explore these issues.

Land Stories, Land Rights: Humans have long identified with the land on which they live. Yet different people tell different stories of themselves, their histories, their relations with the land and the land itself. Whose stories are heard while others are silenced? How do told and untold stories affect access and rights to land or decisions about land use? This course will explore cases from around the world, examining debates surrounding U.S. national parks, conflicts involving religion, gender and land rights, and questions of indigenous rights versus economic development. Theories from anthropology, history, human rights and agrarian studies will inform our explorations of these controversies.

The purpose of this course is to critically analyze and discuss the historical, political and social origins of empire and its impact on the racial formation of particular U.S. Communities: Latinas, Native Americans, Asian Americans and African Americans. We will interrogate the history and politics of ethnicity, race, and gender, while learning about domestic work, red-lining, one-drop laws, immigration (legal and "illegal"), affirmative action, reverse discrimination, welfare, low-wage work, and miscegenation. We aim to highlight the various ways in which racializing and class-distinctions develop and operate within particular historical periods and communities.

Political Economy of Pleasure: Is one person's pleasure at the expense of another? This course examines the social relations behind the production, marketing, and consumption of enjoyment that may be photographic, culinary, sexual, cinematic, musical, or televisual. Through anthropological modes of inquiry, students will be introduced to concepts of political economy, commodities, and the construction of desire and pleasure. The course will closely examine how an economy of pleasure crosses and often reinforces hierarchies of class, race, gender, and ethnicity.

SS-0224 The Battle Between Science, and Religion in Sexuality and Reproduction Marlene Fried
Tuesday, Thursday 2:00-03:20 p.m.

This course will explore contemporary debates over religion v. science as they are occurring in the areas of sexuality and reproduction. Questions asked will include: What is "junk" science and is it in the eye of the beholder? How does one identify and counter pseudo scientific claims? Can science be distinguished from ideology? Issues to be investigated include: the FDA's refusal to approve over the counter distribution of Emergency Contraception; claims that abortion is linked to breast cancer and post-traumatic-stress disorder; the removal of information about condoms and HIV/AIDS prevention from the CDC website; the effectiveness of abstinence-only sexuality education; objections to stem cell research. We will look at these issues in the context of broader societal debates such as that over creationism v. intelligent design and challenges to claims about the objectivity of science. Finally, we will examine viewpoints which offer alternatives to the polarization.

SS 254 Making Landmarks, Doing History James Wald component Monday 2:30-5:20 p.m.

Amherst marks its 250th anniversary. Our town has been home to such famous poets as Emily Dickinson and Robert Frost, and to Noah Webster (of dictionary fame), but also to lesser-known writers such as Lilian Garis, who wrote The Bobbsey Twins and fought for women's right to vote; Helen Hunt Jackson, who highlighted the plight of Native Americans; and Mabel Loomis Todd, who edited Dickinson's poetry and wrote on subjects from witchcraft to Japan. In collaboration with the Amherst Historical Commission and Massachusetts Center for the Book, students will research this rich literary heritage in local libraries, archives, and museums, and help to design a series of commemorative plaques for placement at historic sites. In the process, they will gain an understanding both of New England history and culture, and of the theoretical and practical aspects of public history and historic preservation.

SS-0311 Women and Work Laurie Nisonoff
Wednesday 1:00-03:50 p.m.

This research workshop examines case studies of the interrelationships of gender and capital, some located in specific practice, time and place, others directed toward theoretical critique and construction. We examine issues such as: the work lives of women in the home and workplace; the relationships between "paid" and "unpaid" work; the "feminization of poverty" and of policy; the growth of new professions, the service sector, and the global assembly line. This course is organized as a seminar with students assuming substantial responsibility for discussion. This course is designed for advanced Division II and Division III students. Prerequisite: Some background in feminist studies, political economy, history, or politics is expected.
In this course we will examine the work of American women writers with an emphasis on the themes of protest and pleasure. Material will range from the overtly political to the intensely personal, will often merge the two, and will date from the late-nineteenth century to today. Despite our long-standing reputation for being "emotional," both outrage and ecstasy have oft been considered taboo for women. Yet women have been motivated by each to pick up the pen and have proved influential as writers on these themes. Authors will range from Emma Goldman, Ida B. Wells and Kate Chopin to Audre Lorde, Adrienne Rich and Dorothy Allison.

Introduction to major themes in U.S. history through the lens of women's history. Located both near the centers of power in American society and at its margins, the history of women as a social group is one of conflict and diversity. While women do not make up a coherent group, all share the unique experience of being "women" in class, racial, and religiously specific ways. Themes include Native American and Hispanic women during European contact and settlement; the impact of the American Revolution; benevolent women and the "fallen" women they hoped to help; enslaved women and the plantation mistress; women in the multicultural west; women's involvement in the Civil War and Reconstruction.

An exploration of the roles and values of Chinese women in traditional and modern times. Topics will include the structure of the family and women's productive work, rules for female behavior, women's literature, and the relationship between feminism and other political and social movements in revolutionary China. Readings from biographies, classical literature, feminist scholarship, and modern fiction.

This course is a critical study of significant women (Anne Hutchinson, Mother Ann Lee, Mary Baker Eddy, Ellen Gould White, Aimee Semple McPherson, Dorothy Day, and others) and their roles in the pluralistic character of American religion. It raises central questions concerning leadership, marginality, deviant behavior, and criticism of women. Students are expected to contribute to the course by their participation and individual research.
This course explores the overlapping dualities of the feminine and the masculine, the private and the public, the home and the world. We examine different forms of power over the body; the ways gender and sexual identities reinforce or challenge the established order; and the cultural determinants of "women's emancipation." We emphasize the politics of feminism, dealing with themes that include culture, democracy, and the particularly political role of theory and on theoretical attempts to grasp the complex ties and tensions between sex, gender, and power.

GNDST 250 Gender and Power in Global Contexts  Chaia Heller
ANTHR 216 Land, Transnational Markets and Democracy in Women’s Lives and Activism
Monday, Wednesday  11:00-12:15 p.m.

This course will address the predicaments of women who must negotiate local contexts shaped by transnational markets, changing patterns of agriculture and agro-forestry, and struggles over indigenous land rights. How have arguments about democracy shaped the struggles women take up locally, nationally, and transnationally in opposition to corporate power, national policies, and supranational agencies such as the World Trade Organization?

GNDST 333-01 Anthropology and Sexualities  Lynn Morgan
ANTHR 331 Tuesday  1:15-4:05 p.m.

This seminar focuses on contemporary anthropological scholarship concerned with the varieties of sexual expression in diverse cultural settings. We will read ethnographic accounts of sexual ideologies and the politics and practices of sexuality in Brazil, Japan, Native North America, India, and elsewhere. We will examine anthropological theories of sexuality with an emphasis on contemporary issues, including performance theory, "third gender" theories, sexual identity formulation, and techniques used by various societies to discipline the body.

GNDST 333-02 Bodily Desires:  Jane Gerhard
HIST 301 Reading in the History of Sexuality in the US
Wednesday  1:15-4:05 p.m.

In this seminar, we will study the history of sexuality, desire, and bodies. The premise of this interdisciplinary seminar is that sexuality is both historically constructed (fluid and changing over time and culture) and embodied and lived (experienced for many as essential and unchanging). We will study experts who set out terms and frameworks for understanding modern sexuality; how in different ways and in different times communities of sexual minorities strategically used selected elements of expert discourse to forge their own narratives of self and desire. Students will examine sexual classifications--mainstream and "normal" or subcultural and "deviant"--as mutually constructed.

GNDST 333-03 Skin of a Woman Afro-Latina  Dorothy Mosby
SPAN 361 and Afro-Latin American Women Writers
Wednesday  1:15-4:05 p.m.

With the growth of Afro-Latin American literary studies, there has been a growing interest in the recovery and the study of works by women of African descent. This course will examine the intersections of ethnic, cultural, national, class, sexual and gender identities in representative texts (poems, short stories, essays, testimonios, and film) by Afro-Latina and Afro-Latin American women. We will discuss the construction and meaning of "race," color, and racialized gender roles. Secondary objectives include the development of research and writing skills and rudimentary orientation on various regional ethnic and feminist, cultural, and post/neocolonial theories. Taught in Spanish – speaking and writing intensive.

GNDST 333-04  Gender, Terror, and Trauma
AFRAM 320  in African American Culture
Kristin Elliott Hood
Monday  7:00-10:00 p.m.

This course will explore representations of violence in African American culture, with special consideration given to literary depictions of rape and lynching. After examining the historical function of violence within the United States, students will perform a comparative analysis of texts authored by black women and men. We will also explore cultural, social, and political movements (abolition, civil rights, black power, black feminism, hip-hop) that have emerged in response to the violent policing of black bodies. How has violence been used to terrorize blacks? What role has violence played in the African American struggle for liberation and equality?

GNDST 333-05  Gender and War
ENGL 373  in African American Culture
Leah Glasser
Tuesday  1:15-4:05 p.m.

This seminar will focus on depictions of war in the context of gender. When asked how we might prevent war, Virginia Woolf suggested that we must invent new language and methods rather than follow the path of the traditional "procession of educated men." What language emerges in works about the effects of war? Texts will include essays and films as well as selected works by writers such as Alcott, Whitman, Crane, Twain, Hemingway, Woolf, Silko, Morrison, and O'Brien.

GNDST 333-06  Mothers and Daughters
FREN 351  in African American Culture
Elissa Gelfand
Wednesday  1:15-4:05 p.m.

Taught in French. Study of this crucial and problematic relationship in novels, films, and paintings by French-speaking women representing diverse cultures and historical periods. Exploration of the mother-daughter bond as literary theme, social institution, psychological dynamic, and metaphor for female creativity. Preliminary readings include founding myths and influential theories of family arrangements (Rousseau, Freud, Chodorow, Rich, irigaray, Mernissi, Nnaemeka). Major authors and films will be grouped cross-culturally by theme and may include: LaFayette, Charrière, Sand, Colette, Beauvoir, Ernaux, Hébert, Chen, Schwarz-Bart, Beyala, Bouraoui; La maternelle; Indochine; Les silences du palais.

Iyko Day

Tuesday 1:15-4:05 p.m.

In Ridley Scott's 1982 science fiction film, Blade Runner, Los Angeles is a beleaguered metropolis overrun by immigrant 'hordes' and menacing replicants, presenting a dystopic forecast of multiculturalism. Surveying major genres in relation to the racialized and gendered contexts of migration, labour, and urban redevelopment, this course focuses on alternative constructions of Los Angeles in African American, Asian American, and Chicana/o short stories, novels, and film. Works will include Southland, Tropic of Orange, Twilight: Los Angeles 1992, Their Dogs Came with Them, Devil in a Blue Dress, We Should Never Meet, and Kindred.

In addition, the course will explore the concept of "cultural trauma."
SWG 200  Queer Theories/Queer Cultures  Daniel Rivers
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:20 p.m.

This course will offer an introduction to the central historical and contemporary issues, concerns, and debates in lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer (LGBTQ) studies. Using the course readings, film screenings, and class discussions, we will challenge ourselves to complicate our understandings of seemingly natural ideas such as sex/gender, man/woman or homosexual/heterosexual, as we experience them in our own daily lives and perceive them in the world around us. Through an interdisciplinary approach, we will explore the history, critical theory, cultural production, and politics of queer life in the United States, as well as queer identities in a transnational diasporic context. We will pay particular attention to how ideas of gender and sexuality intersect with social understandings of race, class, and citizenship.

SWG 222  Gender, Law and Society  Carrie Baker
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 9:00-10:20 a.m.

This course is an interdisciplinary exploration of the legal status of women and men in the United States historically and today, particularly focusing in the areas of employment, education, reproduction, sexuality, the family, and violence. This course will examine U.S. constitutional and statutory laws affecting women’s legal rights and gender equality. Through a close reading of judicial opinions, we will consider how the law historically has officiated gender relations; how the law has responded to women’s gender-based claims for equality; and how inequalities based on class/race/sexuality inform (or not) feminist law reform. Readings and lectures will emphasize: 1) constitutional and statutory frameworks for equality; 2) fundamental rights and intimate life; and 3) legal remedies for inequality.

SWG 223 (C)  Sexual Harassment in History, Law, and Culture  Carrie Baker
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

This course is an interdisciplinary exploration of sexual harassment in the United States. We will examine the history and incidence of sexual harassment, the social movement opposing sexual harassment, and the development of law and public policy on the issue. We will study sexual harassment in a variety of contexts, including the workplace, primary and secondary schools, higher education, the military and prisons, housing, and on the street. Finally, we will consider the significance of gender, race, and sexuality for sexual harassment. Readings include first person accounts, feminist theory, legal cases, social science research, and primary and secondary sources.

SWG 230  Feminisms and the Fate of the Planet  Elisabeth Armstrong
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 11:00-12:10 p.m.

We begin this course by sifting the earth between our fingers as part of a community learning partnership with area farms in Holyoke, Hadley, and other neighboring towns. Using women’s movements and feminisms across the globe as our lens, this course develops an understanding of current trends in globalization. This lens also allows us to map the history of transnational connections between people, ideas and movements from the mid-twentieth century to the present. Through films, memoirs, fiction, ethnography, witty diatribes and graphic novels, this course explores women’s activism on the land of laborers, and in their lives. Students will develop research projects in consultation with area farms, link their local research with global agricultural movements, write papers and give one oral presentation.

SWG 312 Queer Resistances: Nancy Whittier
Identities, Communities, and Social Movements
Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

How do we know what it means to identify as lesbian, gay, queer, bisexual, or transgender? Why do these terms mean different things to different people and in different contexts? How does claiming or refusing to claim a sexual identity affect community formation or social change? This seminar will explore constructions of queer collective identities, communities, and social protest. We will pay explicit attention to how queer identities, communities, and movements are racialized, shaped by class, gendered, and contextual. Drawing on historical, theoretical, narrative, and ethnographic sources, we will examine multiple sites of queer resistance including local communities, academic institutions, media, the state, social movement organizations, and the Internet. We will examine the consequences of various theories of gender, sexuality, and resistance for how we interpret the shapes that queer, lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender identity, community, and social movements take.

AAS 366 Contemporary Topics in Riché Barnes
Afro-American Studies: Black Feminist Theories
Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

This course will examine historical, critical and theoretical perspectives on the development of Black feminist theory/praxis. The course will draw from the 19th century to the present, but will focus on the contemporary Black feminist intellectual tradition that achieved notoriety in the 1970s and initiated a global debate on “western” and global feminisms. Central to our exploration will be the analysis of the intersectional relationship between theory and practice and between race, gender and class. We will conclude the course with the exploration of various expressions of contemporary Black feminist thought around the globe as a way of broadening our knowledge of feminist theory.

AMS 120 Scribbling Women Sherry Marker
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

With the help of the Sophia Smith Collection and the Smith College Archives, this writing intensive course looks at a number of 19th and 20th century American women writers. All wrestled with specific issues that confronted them as women; each wrote about important issues in American society. Priority given to first year students.
EAL 238  Literature from Taiwan  Sabina Knight
Tuesday, Thursday 1:20-2:50 p.m.

How do works from Taiwan contend with legacies of political trauma and the social consequences of modernization and democratization? In the face of dislocation, marginality, and materialism, how does writing nurture memory, belonging, social repair or change? Close readings of stories and, some semesters, essays, poetry, novels or films will explore traditional aesthetics, the modernist, nativist and localist movements of the 1960s to 1980s, and the pluralism of the 1990s and since, with special attention to feminist and queer fiction. Class participation will include student-centered contemplative and collaborative exercises, including short written meditations and dramatizations. No background in Chinese required.

EAL 244  Construction of Gender in Modern Japanese Women’s Writing  Kimberly Kono
Monday, Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

This course will focus on the construction of gender in the writings of Japanese women from the mid-19th century until the present. How does the existence of a “feminine literary tradition” in premodern Japan influence the writing of women during the modern period? How do these texts reflect, resist, and reconfigure conventional representations of gender? We will explore the possibilities and limits of the articulation of feminine and feminist subjectivities, as well as investigate the production of such categories as race, class, and sexuality in relation to gender and each other. Taught in English, with no knowledge of Japanese required.

ENG 277  Postcolonial Women Writers  Ambreen Hai
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

A comparative study of primarily twentieth-century women writers in English from Africa, the Caribbean, South Asia and Australia. We will read novels, short stories, poetry, plays, and autobiography in their historical, cultural and political contexts as well as theoretical essays to address questions such as: how have women writers challenged both colonial and postcolonial assumptions about gender, identity or nationhood, diaspora? How do they call attention to or address issues often ignored by their male contemporaries or forebears, such as sexuality, desire, motherhood, childhood, sickness, poverty, relations among women? Writers may include Attia Hosain, Anita Desai, Kamala Das, Thrity Umrigar, Ama Ata Aidoo, Bessie Head, Nawal-el-Saadawi, Jamaica Kincaid, Michelle Cliff, Shani Mootoo, Zadie Smith, Sally Morgan.

ENG 279  American Women Poets  Susan Van Dyne
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

A selection of poets from the last 50 years, including Sylvia Plath, Diane Gilliam Fisher, Elizabeth
Bishop, Adrienne Rich, Audre Lorde, Sharon Olds, Cathy Song, Louise Glück, and Rita Dove. An exploration of each poet's chosen themes and distinctive voice, with attention to the intersection of gender and ethnicity in the poet's materials and in the creative process. Not open to first-year students.

ENG 284 Victorian Sexualities

Cornelia Pearsall
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

The Victorians have long been viewed as sexually repressed, but close attention reveals a culture whose inventiveness regarding sexual identity, practice, and discourse knew few bounds. This course explores a range of literary, visual, and scientific representations of Victorian sexuality. We read novels, nonfiction prose, and poetry by authors such as Darwin, Dickens, H. Rider Haggard, Christina Rossetti and Oscar Wilde. Literary readings are informed by Victorian sexologists such as Freud, Krafft-Ebing, and Havelock Ellis, as well as contemporary historical and theoretical writings. We also make use of visual materials, including Pre-Raphaelite paintings, Aubrey Beardsley illustrations, and photographs.

ENG 292 Crafting the Memoir

Ann Boutelle
Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

In this workshop, we will explore, through reading and through writing, the presentation of self in the memoir. A major focus will be on the interweaving of voice, structure, style, and content. As we read the work of ourselves and of others, we will be searching for strategies, devices, rhythms, patterns, and approaches that we might adapt in future writings. The reading list will consist of writings by 20th and 21st century women writers. Admission by permission of the instructor.

Erika Laquer
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 9:00-10:20 a.m.

While most births worldwide are still attended by midwives, and almost all births before 1900 occurred at home in the presence of friends and midwives, the midwife in the U.S. today is a rare attendant. This course will examine the history of midwives and midwifery in the European and American traditions, with particular attention to the manuals written by midwives to instruct other women about birth and women’s health. Alternately feared and revered, the midwife has often served as a bellwether to how a society values its women and children. The course will also examine the varieties of birth experiences possible from cross-cultural perspectives. Because the Pioneer Valley is an area with particularly active groups of professional and direct-entry (lay) midwives, there will be opportunities to meet and discuss these issues with current practitioners.

What’s in a Recipe?
Nancy Saporta Sternbach
Tuesday, Thursday 9:00-10:20 a.m.

What stories do recipes tell? What cultural and familial information is embedded in a recipe? Who wrote the recipe? Why? How does it reflect her (or his) life and times? What do we learn about the geography, history and political economy of a location through recipes? Are recipes a way for an underrepresented group to tell its story? Does a recipe bolster or undermine national cooking? This seminar will look at recipes and cookbooks from the Spanish-speaking world (in English) and theories of recipes from a variety of different sources. Our reading will inform our writing as we try to establish such connections as the politics of chocolate, olive oil cooperatives, avocado farms, the traveling tomato, potatoes, and the cultural milieu from which each recipe emerged. Knowledge of Spanish is useful but not required. Writing intensive. Enrollment limited to 16 first-year students.

Women and Politics in Africa
Catharine Newbury
Monday, Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

This course will explore the genesis and effects of political activism by women in Africa, which some believe represents a new African feminism, and its implications for state/civil society relations in contemporary Africa. Topics will include the historical effects of colonialism on the economic, social, and political roles of African women, the nature of urban/rural distinctions, and the diverse responses by women to the economic and political crises of postcolonial African polities. Case studies of specific African countries, with readings of novels and women's life histories as well as analyses by social scientists.

Seminar in International Politics and Comparative Politics: North Africa in the International System
Gregory White
Thursday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

This seminar examines the history and political economy of Morocco, Tunisia, and Algeria.
Maghreb - focusing on the post-independence era. Where relevant, Mauritania and Libya will be treated. The seminar sets Maghrebi politics in the broader context of its regional situation within the Mediterranean (Europe and the Middle East), as well as its relationship to sub-Saharan Africa and North America. Study is devoted to: 1) the independence struggle; 2) the colonial legacy; 3) contemporary political economy; and 4) post-colonial politics and society. Special attention will be devoted to the politics of Islam, the “status” of women, and democratization.

GOV 367 Queer Theory
Gary Lehring
Thursday 3:00-4:50 p.m.

This course introduces students to the emerging interdisciplinary field of queer theory. This is often a perplexing task as there is no real consensus on the definitional limits of queer. Indeed, many scholars believe the inability to define these limits is one of queer theory's greatest strengths. "Queer" can function as a noun, an adjective or a verb, but in each case it is defined against the 'normal' or normalizing. Queer theory is not a singular or systematic conceptual or methodological framework. Rather it is a collection of intellectual engagements with the relations between sex, gender and sexual desire. As such, it is hard to call queer theory a school of thought, as it has a very unorthodox and often disrespectful view of "discipline." Queer theory, then, describes a diverse range of critical practices and priorities: analyses of same-sex sexual desire in literary texts, film or music; exploration of the social and political power relations of sexuality; critiques of the sex-gender system; studies of transgender identification, or sadomasochism and of transgressive desire.

The history of Chinese women from early classical texts to the present: their places and behaviors in society and culture, their relationships with one another and with men, and the evolution of gender roles and attitudes in China's long and complex story. Topics include ideals of femininity and beauty, sexuality, women's place in family life, life-cycles and rites of passage, the participation of women in the revolutions of the 20th century, and contemporary women's lives.

HST 252 Women and Gender in Modern Europe, 1789-1918 | Darcy Buerkle | Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m. |

A survey of European women’s experiences and constructions of gender from the French Revolution through World War I, focusing on Western Europe. Gendered relationships to work, family, politics, society, religion, and the body, as well as shifting conceptions of femininity and masculinity, as revealed in novels, films, treatises, letters, paintings, plays, and various secondary sources.

HST 278 Women in the United States, 1865-present | Jennifer Guglielmo | Wednesday, Friday 1:10-2:30 p.m. |

Survey of women’s and gender history with focus on race, class, and sexuality. Draws on feminist methodologies to consider how study of women’s lives changes our understanding of history, knowledge, culture, and the politics of resistance. Topics include labor, racial formation, empire, im/migration, popular culture, citizenship, education, religion, science, war, consumerism, feminism, queer cultures, and globalizing capitalism. How have women contested and contributed to systems of inequality? Emphasis on class discussion and analysis of original documents, with short lectures.

HST 355  Topics in Social History: Jennifer Hall-Witt
Women and World War I: The Smith College Relief Unit
Tuesday  3:00-4:50 p.m.

Students undertake archival research in the papers of the Smith College Relief Unit to explore relationships between women and the Great War. Between 1917 and the late 1920s, forty-seven Smith alumnae led reconstruction efforts in the Somme valley in France, one of the areas most devastated by the war. Drawing on materials in the Sophia Smith Collection—diaries, letters, photograph albums, newspaper clippings, and financial records—the class compares this first women's college relief unit with other Americans and Europeans who contributed to the war effort.

HST 372  Problems in American History: Kelly Anderson
Women's Activism and Oral History
Tuesday 1:00-2:50  p.m.

Women's activism over the past fifty years, with an emphasis on second-wave feminisms. Texts include secondary literature as well as primary sources from the Sophia Smith Collection, including oral histories. Students are introduced to the techniques of oral history, and conduct, transcribe, edit and analyze their own interviews for their final projects.

REL 238  Mary: Images and Cults Vera Shevzov
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

Whether revered as the Birth-Giver of God or remembered as a simple Jewish woman, Mary has both inspired and challenged generations of Christian women and men. This course focuses on key developments in the “history of Mary” since Christian times to the present. How has her image shaped Christianity? What does her image in any given age tell us about personal and collective Christian identity? Topics include Mary’s “life”; rise of the Marian cult; differences among Protestant, Catholic and Orthodox Christians; apparitions (e.g., Guadalupe and Lourdes); miracle-working icons; Mary, liberation and feminism. Liturgical, devotional, and theological texts, art, and film.

SOC 323  Seminar: Gender and Social Change   Nancy Whittier
Tuesday 3:00-4:50 p.m.

Theory and research on the construction of and change in gender categories in the United States, with particular attention to social movements that seek to change gender definitions and stratification, including both feminist and anti-feminist movements. Theoretical frameworks are drawn from feminist theory and social movement theory. Readings examine historical shifts in gender relations and norms, changing definitions of gender in contemporary everyday life, and politicized struggles over gender definitions. Themes throughout the course include the social construction of both femininity and masculinity, the intersection of race, class, and sexual orientation with gender, and the growth of a politics of identity. Case studies include feminist, lesbian and gay, right-wing, self help, anti-abortion, and pro-choice movements.

SPN 230  Topics in Latin American and Peninsular Literature: A Transatlantic Search for Identity   Maria Estela Harretche
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

A quest for the self and its relation to otherness through a one-poem per class approach. Readings in Modern and Contemporary works by poets from both sides of the ocean, complemented by the study of related music and visual art. We will examine the consequences of political exile as a journey to the unknown (Jiménez, Cernuda, Cortázar, Neruda, Alberti), as well as the voluntary exile of the artist in search of a new aesthetic identity (Darío, Lorca, Vallejo). Special attention will be given to the problems of subjectivity, gender and sexuality, as poets searched within themselves: Agustini, Storni, Parra and Pizarnik, four women. Students will have the option of composing an original poem to supplement their final grade.

This course explores the intersection of race, theatre, film, and performance in America. We consider the history and legacy of minstrel shows from the 1820s to the present. Reading plays by Alice Childress, Loften Mitchell, Lorraine Hansberry, Douglas Turner Ward, Ntozake Shange, George Wolfe, Pearl Cleage, Carlyle Brown, and Suzan Lori Parks, we investigate the impact of the minstrel performance of blackness on the American imagination. What is the legacy of this most popular of forms in the current entertainment world? How have monumental works such as Uncle Tom’s Cabin shaped American performance traditions and identity? How have historical and contemporary films incorporated minstrel images and performances? How have artists and audiences responded to the comedic power of minstrel images? Is a contemporary audience entertained in the same way by Martin Lawrence as they were by say Stepin Fetchit?
