WOMEN’S STUDIES PROGRAM COURSES

WOST 187

Introduction to Women’s Studies (ID)

Karen Garcia

Monday, Wednesday 10:10 a.m., Friday discussion

Lecture, discussion. Placing women’s experiences at the center of interpretation, course introduces basic concepts and perspectives in Women’s Studies. Focusing on women’s lives with a particular emphasis on the ways in which gender interacts with race, class, sexual orientation and ethnicity. Central aim is to foster critical reading and thinking about women’s lives, the ways in which the interlocking systems of colonialism, racism, sexism, ethnocentrism and heterosexism shape women’s lives, and how women have resisted them.

WOST 187O

Introduction to Women’s Studies

Alexandrina Deschamps

Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.

Orchard Hill residential education course. Same description as WOST 187.

WOST 201

Critical Perspectives in Women’s Studies

Arlene Avakian

Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.

Leila Ahmed

Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

Introduction to the fundamental questions and concepts of Women's Studies and to the basic intellectual tools of analysis integrating gender, class, race, and sexual orientation. Also addresses the multifaceted dimensions of women's lived experiences primarily in North America, with some comparative connections to women globally.

WOST 291A

Japanese Women Writers

Doris Bargen

Tuesday 2:30-5:15 p.m.

This seminar is designed to engage students in the fabulous achievements of Japanese women writers. Murasaki Shikibu wrote The Tale of Genji (ca.1010), the supreme masterpiece of Japanese literature and the only world classic written by a woman. Many other outstanding women writers left their mark on the cultural fabric of Japan. The course is organized into a classical and modern unit, separated by an astonishing 500-year hiatus in women's literary productivity, from the early fourteenth to the early nineteenth century. This provocative gap cannot remain undiscussed. What caused women to fall silent and why did they suddenly take up their writing brush again? Among the topics of discussion for the classical and modern periods of excellence will be the place of women writers and their largely female audience in Japanese society; female eroticism, women's marital and reproductive problems, and their gendered mode of self-expression. Class participation and oral presentations (40%), term research paper (60%). No prerequisites. Honors colloquium upon request. FULFILLS WOMEN OF COLOR REQUIREMENT.

WOST 297D

Women and Health Care

Janice Raymond

Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

Survey course examining five areas: women and the professionalization of medicine emphasizing critical medieval and modern case histories; environmental health and cancer; violence against women; menstruation and menopause; and women, health and development with a focus on global women's health issues. Course locates women's health issues within a larger context of basic health science, feminist theory, medical ethics and the sociology of the professions. Key questions are: what has produced, and continues to produce women's current health status in different parts of the world? What are the political, economic and cultural values and structures that mediate women's health? How do these combine to structure medicine as an institution? What is the impact of gender, race and culture on women's health and disease and on institutions and practices of medicine? What are strategies for change? Active class participation; journal on readings; 4 short papers on each area of study; final take-home exam.

WOST 301

Theorizing Women’s Issues

Jana Evans-Braziel

Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.

The objective of this course is to introduce ways of analyzing and reflecting on current issues and controversies in feminist thought within an international context. Main subject areas are: feminism and nationalism; culture as revolution and reaction; the construction of gender, race and sexuality; perspectives on pornography and racial hatred propaganda/speech/acts; and international sex trafficking and prostitution. Questions addressed are: What constitutes theory in Women's Studies? How does theory reflect, critique, challenge and change dominant sex/race/class power structures? What is theory's relationship to practice? What are the contemporary issues important to feminist/womanist theory? The common thread of this course is to provide students with some tools for analysis for addressing these issues. Oral class presentations, two short papers and one take-home exam.

WOST391E  Political Economy of Women  Lisa Saunders
ECON 348  Tuesday, Thursday  1:00-2:15 p.m.

This course uses a wide range of women's issues to teach varied economic principles and theories. Popular women's topics in past semesters include women's increasing labor force participation; gender differences in hiring, promotions, and earnings; the growing poverty rate for female headed households; trade policy effects on women in the US and other countries; and race and class differences in the economic opportunities of women. Empirical assessment of women's work in the market and in the home in the US and other countries. Reconsideration of traditional issues of political economy, comparative economic history, and labor economics.

WOST 393G  Changing Family Structures in China  Yuping Zhang
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

This course will encompass a feminist analysis of the evolution of family systems in China from eastern and western perspectives. We will examine gender roles in different historical periods that reflect the political, economic and cultural changes China has experienced in the process of modernization. The feudal family model was the foundation of patriarchal thought. Around the turn of the century, people began to think critically about the notion of gender equality, the emancipation of women, and the need for changes in family systems. This marked the beginning of feminist thought in China. A century later, however, the family is still the site of ongoing conflicts between traditional ideas and the need for deeper, broader social changes, demanding a redefinition of women's place within and beyond the home. We will discuss many global feminist concerns; women's status and identity, the mother-daughter relationship, gender roles, the social conditioning of girls and boys, courtship customs, marriage and divorce, family planning (birth control and abortion), special issues concerning reproduction and health among ethnic groups, caring for children and elderly family members, generation gaps, and men's roles as fathers, brothers, partners and sons. FULFILLS WOMEN OF COLOR REQUIREMENT.

WOST 394E  The Intersection of Gender, Sexuality and Ethnicity in modern Middle Eastern History  Sima Fahid
Wednesday 2:30-5:00 p.m.

The aim of this course is to analyze the intersection of gender, sexuality and ethnicity in modern Middle Eastern history. The following issues will be dealt with in this course: the impact of the articulation of modern state in different countries of the Middle East, the impact of the articulation of modern state on the lives of the subaltern groups such as women and gypsies in different countries of the Middle East, the replacement of subsistence production with cash crop as a result of the rise of domestic and foreign capital and its repercussion in women's lives, and the process through which gypsies remained outside the state apparatus and became an outcast group. FULFILLS WOMEN OF COLOR REQUIREMENT.

WOST 397L  The Social Construction of Whiteness and Women  Arlene Avakian
Tuesday, Thursday 2:30-3:45 p.m.

Exploration of the social construction of whiteness, its interaction with gender, and the historical and contemporary political resistance to white privilege focusing primarily on the US. Course goals: (1) understanding of the historical, economic and political forces responsible for the construction and maintenance of whiteness; (2) exploration of the mechanisms which insure that whiteness is experienced as the norm and not as a race; (3) exploration of the critical role of gender in the construction of whiteness; (4) foster students' ability to position themselves on the multiple axes of race, gender and class and to help them gain an understanding of the role they play in maintaining the privileges they have; (5) exploration of effective action to challenge white privilege. Prerequisites: Course work in race and gender or permission of instructor. STUDENTS MUST ALSO ENROLL IN A MANDATORY 1-CREDIT P/F PRACTICUM. Register for practicum in the first class.

WOST 493I  Latinas in the U.S.        Karen Garcia
Monday 3:35 p.m.

We will review the experiences of the principal Latino groups in this country (Mexican, Puerto Rican and Cuban) in terms of their similarities and differences; with a focus on the experience of Puerto Rican women. The course will provide an interdisciplinary review of social science theories about Latinas, integrating class, ethnicity, race, and gender as forces serving to promote and/or hinder their social participation. Economic and psychosocial factors generally used to explain oppression and cultural inequity will be reviewed, as well as how these forces influence Latinas inter-personal experiences of ethnic differentiation and group strength within the women's movement. FULFILLS WOMEN OF COLOR REQUIREMENT.

WOST 496B  Resources in Women's Studies Research  Emily Silverman
Wednesday 3:35-5:00 p.m.

In this two credit independent study, we will focus on research methods and resources in Women's Studies, with opportunities to explore primary and secondary sources from Web sites to CD-ROMS, from printed materials to microfilm. Class meetings will permit time for demonstration and hands-on practice with both electronic and paper resources. Recommended for juniors and seniors. Please contact Emily Silverman to sign up at 545-0995 or essilverman@library.umass.edu

WOST 691B  Feminist Reseat Seminar  Marta Calas
Wednesday 11:15-1:45 p.m.

This seminar is organized around graduate student presentations of their own research and will include some readings on general questions of feminist methodology and ethics of research. The seminar will include a public lecture series where research will be presented and discussion will include issues of feminist research. Enrolled students will be expected to do the reading, present their research and discuss others, and keep an intellectual journal recording their reactions to the research presented in the lecture series.

WOST 692A  Arab & Muslim Women  Leila Ahmed
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

We will be reading a combination of literary and theoretical texts (the former mainly autobiographical, and chiefly by women of Arab and Muslim background among them Mernissi, Djebbar, Ba, Suleri, and Saadawi) and also viewing some films such as the Battle of Algiers and exploring issues of identity, gender, class, colonialism and post-colonialism. Upper-level undergraduates may take this class with permission of the instructor. FULFILLS WOMEN OF COLOR REQUIREMENT.

ENGL 491B
Modernist Women Writers
Laura Doyle
Monday, Wednesday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

This course offers the opportunity to read many of the important and sometimes overlooked women writers of the early twentieth century in the US and Britain. Between 1900 and 1940, authors such as Gertrude Stein, Nella Larsen, Virginia Woolf, and Mina Loy played formative roles in the experiments of modernism. When attention is given to women's as well as men's modernist writing, how does our picture of the period change? Restricted to English majors. Prerequisite: ENGL 112 or equivalent.

ENGL 491D
Narrating Prostitution/Prostituting Narrative
Christine Cooper
Mondays 1:25-3:55 p.m.

In this course we will interrogate cultural assumptions about prostitution as we explore the various forms prostitution takes in short stories, poems, novels, and plays in different historical and social contexts. Beginning with 'stories' of prostitution that we know [i.e. stereotypes], we will move through a variety of narratives of prostitution and ask what it means for sex to be work and whether work in other forms [physical labor, intellectual labor, finding a spouse, writing a novel, etc.] can be sexualized. English majors only.

Wednesday 7:00-10:00 p.m.
See department for course description.

HIST 697D  State and Sexuality  Katherine Bliss
Monday 2:30-5:30 p.m.
This graduate seminar will examine the historical intersection of politics and human sexuality from a variety of theoretical and disciplinary perspectives. Asking how and why states have historically intervened in popular private life and sought to restrict, define or promote particular kinds of sexual activity and expression, the seminar will address the following issues and more: What are the different relationships between government, politics and sexual activity? How do conceptualizations of sexuality and national identity shape particular state ideologies of authority and power relations? In what ways are political and popular ideas about class, gender and race important to these relationships? Students will read various theoretical perspectives on politics and sexuality before focusing on several case studies of the ways in which struggles over politics and sexuality have played out in Latin America.

A survey of some recent works on Jewish women, analyzing them in terms of historiographic approaches. Primary focus on women as historical actors. Special attention to how acknowledging women’s experiences might change traditional periodizations of Jewish history. Emphasis on how historians have used methods from other disciplines to uncover the role of women. Students are encouraged to compare works on the roles of women in Jewish history to works on women in other specific subject areas.

POLITICAL SCIENCE DEPARTMENT
318 THOMPSON HALL 545-2438

POLSCI 375 Feminist Theory Barbara Cruikshank
Monday, Wednesday 2:30 p.m., Friday discussion

A theoretical consideration of different feminisms including liberal-feminism, socialist feminism, anarcha-feminism, radical feminism, and eco-feminism. Also examines: the relation between feminist theory and practice; the historical development of feminism; feminist issues within the canon of political theory; the problem of identity and difference(s) as related to race, class, and gender. [This course is not an alternative to the WOST 301 requirement for UMass WOST majors.]

PSYCHOLOGY
403 TOBIN HALL 545-0377

PSYCH 308 Psychology of Women (SBD) Carole Beale
Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.

This course is designed to provide an introduction to the psychology of women, including a review and evaluation of psychological theories and research about female development and the life experiences that primarily affect girls and women. We will consider the diversity of female experience, as well as common themes that are shared by most women. PRIORITY TO PSYCHOLOGY MAJORS.

PSYCH 391E Topics in the Psychology of Women Ronnie Janoff-Bulman
Wednesday 1:00-4:00 p.m.

SOCIOL 106 Race, Sex, and Social Class (SBD) Dan Clawson
Monday, Wednesday 12:20 plus discussion
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15 plus discussion Pamela Quiroz

All Departmental courses except 100-level automatically count for Women’s Studies credit. For additional courses covering applied areas of Women’s Studies, consult the Component Course section, Pages 17-23.
An overview of sociological approach to race, class and gender inequalities—especially economic inequalities—in the contemporary United States. Some attention will also be devoted to the presidential election and its potential impact on the future of race, class and gender inequalities. Within the segment devoted to race, African Americans receive most emphasis. Readings consist of one book and selection of copied articles.

WAGS 20   Sex, Gender and the Family       Margaret Hunt
HIST 93   Wednesday 2:00-4:00 p.m.

Focuses on the history of sexuality in the West from approximately 1600 to the present. Alternates between close readings of key theoretical texts (e.g., Jewish and Christian scripture, Michel Foucault, Sigmund Freud, Gayle Rubin, theorists from the contemporary Christian Right) and case studies of debates around sexuality within specific historical contexts. The latter will include Renaissance European conceptions of homosexuality; late nineteenth-century British debates about prostitution and sexually transmitted diseases; controversies about abortion, birth control and women's rights in Weimar and Nazi Germany; and modern Conservatives' much-contested efforts to roll back the so-called "sexual revolution."

WAGS 22   Age of Chivalry                   Frederic Cheyette
EUR 23    Monday, Wednesday 2:00pm          Howell Chickering

Although "chivalry" is now considered a quaint term describing male conduct in love and war, the concept was originally shaped in part by women, not only as the objects of male desire but also as patrons of poets and musicians. Focuses on the literature and music produced for the courts of two twelfth-century rulers: Ermengard of Narbonne, patron of the troubadours and Marie de Champagne, patron of the romance writer Chretien de Troyes. To explore the power structures and ideologies of chivalric culture, we will also read chronicles, charters, and other documents; analyze the iconography of manuscript images; and sing troubadour songs (no prior knowledge of music is expected). All texts will be read in translation, and in dual-language editions where possible.

WAGS 30   Autobiographies of Women          Rose Olver
           Tuesday, Thursday 10:00am            Susan Snively

How does the writing of autobiography help a woman affirm, construct, or reconstruct an authentic self? How does she resolve the conflict between telling the truth and distorting it in making her life into art? Is the making of art, indeed, her chief preoccupation; or is her goal to record her life in the context of her times, her religion, or her relationship to others? Reading autobiographies of women writers helps us raise, if not resolve, these questions. We shall also consider how women write about experiences particular to women as shown in their struggles to survive adversity; their sense of themselves as authorities or challengers of authority, as well as their sense of what simply gives them pain or joy. Readings from recent work in the psychology of woman will provide models for describing women's development, as writing of women in turn will show how these models emerge from real lives. The syllabus will include traditional autobiography, historical memoir, poetry, journals and personal narratives, psychological studies, criticism and theory: Maxine Hong Kingston's The Woman Warrior, Maya Angelou's I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, poetry and prose by Elizabeth Bishop, Shirley Abbot's Womenfolks, Charlotte Bronte's Jane Eyre, Jamaica Kincaid's Annie John, Carol Gilligan's In a Different Voice, Mary Field-Belenky, et al., Women's Ways of Knowing, and recent work by Janet Surrey, as well as selections from works by Paule Marshall, Virginia Woolf, Toni Morrison, Alice Walker, Lorene Cary, and, of course, Anonymous. Writing Requirements will include several short papers and an autobiographical essay.

WAGS 32   Sex, Self, and Fear               Stephanie Sandler
           Monday 2:00-4:00pm

Freud located identity formation in the emotion of fear—a boy's fear of castration, a girl's terror at lack. Later theories have agreed that worries about exposure, ridicule, and confession shape the sexual self.
Our course will explore the gendered origins and effects of fear, asking how fear of the other sex, and fear about the self, ground identity. We will try to differentiate among forms of fear, comparing anxiety, obsession, trauma, and phobia. Course material will be studied for the ways in which it condenses and substitutes various forms of dread. The course material will include fiction (Pat Barker, Regeneration; Lydia Chukovskaya, Sofia Petrovna; Toni Morrison, Jazz; Mary Shelley, Frankenstein), poetry (by Ana Akhmatova, Rita Dove, Thom Gunn, Elizabeth Macklin), theory (Freud, Torok and Abraham); quasi-autobiography (Kenzaburo Oe, A Quiet Life; Nathalie Sarraute, Childhood), and film (Carrie, M, Perfect World, Psycho, Vertigo). We will ask what cultural and psychological work fear performs: what fears are required for liberation from social taboos? How do adults contain (and repeat) the fears that ruled childhood? Why do we like to be frightened?

WAGS 56  Islamic Construction of Gender  Jamal Elias
REL 56  Tuesday, Thursday 10:00 a.m.

The focus of this course is on the lives of contemporary Muslim women, the factors informing constructions of gender in the Islamic world, and the role played by questions of women's status in modern Islamic religion and society. Begins by briefly examining the status and images of women in classical Islamic thought, including themes relating to scripture, tradition, law, theology, philosophy and literature. Also focuses on contemporary Muslim women in a number of different cultural contexts from Morocco to Bangladesh and the United States in order to highlight a variety of issues significant for contemporary Muslim women; veiling and seclusion, kinship structures, violence, health feminist activism, literary expression, etc. Deals with an exploration of Muslim feminist thought, which we will attempt to place in dialog with western feminism with the hope of arriving at a better understanding of issues related to gender, ethics and cultural relativism. Weekly readings will include original religious texts in translation, secondary interpretations, ethnographic descriptions and literary works by Muslim women authors. These will be supplemented by feature films and documentaries to provide a visual complement to the textual materials.

WAGS 64  Women's History: 1865-1997  Martha Saxton
HIST 49  Tuesday, Thursday 2:00pm

This course begins with an examination of the experience of women from different racial, ethnic and economic backgrounds during Reconstruction. It will look at changes in family life as a result of increasing industrialization and the westward movement of settler families, and will also look at the settlers' impact on Native American women and families. Topics will include the work and familial experiences of immigrant women (including Irish, German, and Italian), women's reform movements (particularly suffrage, temperance and anti-lynching), the expansion of educational opportunities, and the origins and programs of the Progressives. The course will examine the agitation for suffrage and the subsequent split among feminists, women's experience in the labor force, and participation in the world wars. Finally, we will look at the origins of the Second Wave and its struggles to transcend its middle-class origins.

WAGS 65  States of Poverty  Kristin Bumiller
POLSCI 65  Tuesday 2:00-4:00pm

Examines the role of the modern welfare state in people's everyday lives. Studies the historical growth and retrenchment of the modern welfare state in the United States and other Western democracies. Critically examines the ideologies of "dependency" and the role of the state as an agent of social control. In particular, we will study the ways in which state action has implications for gender identities. Analyzes the construction of social problems linked to states of poverty, including hunger, homelessness, health care, disability, discrimination, and violence. Asks how these conditions disproportionately affect the lives of women and children. Takes a broad view of the interventions of the welfare state by considering not only the impact of public assistance and social service programs, but the role of the police, family courts, therapeutic professionals, and schools in creating and responding to the conditions of impoverishment. Work of the seminar will culminate in the production of a research paper and students will be given the option of incorporating field work into the independent project.
This course will look at women’s experience through the lenses of religion, family and literary culture from the beginning of the nineteenth century through the Gilded Age. Using a mix of primary and secondary sources, students will trace the changing moral values guiding female education as well as the varieties of Christianity that gave shape to different forms of activism. It will also track changing family ideologies, the responsibilities of mothers and constructions of childhood. The course will include women’s texts reflecting on their experiences as daughters, mothers, reformers, slaves, Christians and professionals. It will look at the development of various strands of feminist thought and the production of a class of educated middle-class women interested in blunting the brutalities of capitalism.

ENGL 75 #1
Creating a Self: Black Women’s Testimonies, Andrea Rushing
BLCKST 27
Memoirs and Autobiographies

Pioneering feminist critic Barbara Smith says, “All the men are Black, all the women are White, but some of us are brave.” This cross-cultural course focuses on “brave” women from Africa and its New World Diaspora who dare to tell their own stories and, in doing so, invent themselves. Begins with a discussion of the problematics of writing and reading autobiographical works by those usually defined as “other,” and proceed to a careful study of such varied voices as escaped slave Linda Brent/Harriet Jacobs, political activists Eda B. Wells, and feminist, lesbian poet Audre Lorde – all from the U.S.; Lucille Clifton, the Sistren Collective (Jamaica), Caroline Maria deJesus (Brazil); Buchi Emecheta (Nigeria), and Nafissatou Diallo (Senegal).

ENGL 75 #2
Issues of Gender in African Literature, Rhonda Cobhan-Sanders
BLCKST 44

Explores the ways in which issues of gender are presented by African writers and perceived by readers and critics of African writing. Examines the insights and limitations of selected feminist, post-structural and post-colonial theories when they are applied to African texts. Also looks at the difference over time in the ways that female and male African writers have manipulated socially acceptable ideas about gender in their work. Texts will be selected from the oeuvres of established writers like Soyinka, Acheve, Ngugi and Head, as well as from more recent works by writers like Farah, Aidoo, and Dangaremba. Preference will be given to students who have completed a previous course on African literature, history, or society.

HIST 20
Seminar on Gender and Fascism, Kenneth Holston

What were the gendered components of fascist ideology? Through an examination of a series of related themes - the cult of masculinity, women and the vote, the cult of motherhood, racial hygiene, women as victims and perpetrators, and women in the fascist state and society - this seminar seeks to illuminate the crucial role of gender in the ideological formations and political structures of both Nazi Germany and Mussolini’s Italy.

POLSCT 39
Re-Imagining Law: Feminist Interpretations, Kristin Bumiller
LJST 39

Feminist theory raises questions about the compatibility of the legal order with women’s experience and understandings and calls for a reevaluation of the role of law in promoting social change. It invites us to inquire about the possibilities of a “feminist jurisprudence” and the adequacy of other critical theories which promise to make forms of legal authority more responsive. Considers women as victims and users of legal power. Asks how particular practices constitute genders subjects in legal discourse. How can we imagine a legal system more reflective of women’s realities? The nature of legal authority will be considered in the context of women’s ordinary lives and reproductive roles, their active participation in political and professional change, their experiences with violence and pornography as well as the way they confront race, class and ethnic barriers.
What is it to be a woman? Is there something that can be called the nature of woman? In this course, we will begin by critically examining what exactly we mean by 'woman'. We will do so by tracing the idea of female nature through the history of philosophy and up through the 20th century. We will then consider the way in which one conceives of womankind affects the way one thinks about issues that impact on women, issues that are often of concern to feminists. These issues might include: reproductive freedom, pornography, prostitution, equal rights, family, sexuality and gender, and beauty, or any other relevant topic of interest to students in the class.

Our purpose in this class will not be narrowly comparative but rather to read intensively and extensively in each of these master practitioners of the modern novel, thinking particularly about how they each frame issues of personal identity, think about family, history and memory, and confront the American twentieth century dilemma of "the color line."

This course will explore the history of the trans-Mississippi West during the 19th and 20th centuries. Traditional interpretations have focused on the impact of European and American settlement and the extension of the frontier in the creation of a democratic and individualistic society. We will contrast this tradition with newer scholarship which focuses on the West as a distinctive region characterized by a history of colonialism and conquest, by its multiracial and multicultural origins, by the dominant power of the federal government throughout its history, by its aridity and other environmental features, and by the powerful role played by corporate capitalism in its development.

This course approaches the history of US race and ethnicity as a history of popular sound-- a dissonant conglomeration of noises, songs, mixes, beats, verses, and collages that tell revealing stories about the way identities are formed and de-formed and nations are imagined and transgressed. Though we will take a general interest in the often neglected relationship between race, nation, and popular music, we will focus on the sounds of the twentieth century US. Beginning with blackface minstrelsy and Tin Pan Alley and ending with hip hop, breakbeat club cultures, and the Latin/o American rock of "the new world border" (with stops in blues, jazz, salsa, conjunto, and R&B along the way), we will concentrate on cultural exchanges, appropriations, and sound clashes between African-Americans, Latinos, Asian-Americans, and Jewish-Americans. The course is not designed to offer a linear and comprehensive history of American music, nor is it meant to be an introduction to the technical, formalist study of music. Rather, the course asks students to interrogate the role of music in the formation of inter-American identities, in the imagining of "America" as both place and idea, and in the making and unmaking of the "American" self.

This course examines the role of women in film and videomaking as auteurs, artists, activists, theorists, critics, and entrepreneurs, from the twenties in Hollywood, when there were more women directing films than at any time since, to the burst of collective creative power in virtually every form engendered by the sixties and seventies women’s movement. We will examine the differences in context for work proposed by the dominant cinema and television industries, on the one hand, and the various national, political and alternative aesthetic spaces that have brought the “feminine sensibility” behind the camera as well as in front of it. The teens and twenties films of Weber, Shub, Dulac; of Arzner and Deren, Sagan, Riefenstahl in the thirties and forties; then Varda, Chytilova, Duras, Maldoror, Gomez Riechert, Von Trotta, Rainer, Ackerman, Export, Friedrich, Savoco and Bigelow. Contemporary video artists and producers such as Rosler, Birnbaum, Jonas, and Halleck will be examined in their own specific economic, political, and aesthetic contexts. The major critical and theoretical contributions by feminist writers in the seventies like Rich, Mulvey, Lesage, and deLauretis will be examined in relation to work by women. In a field as capital intensive as media production, power for women has often been hard won. This course serves as an alternative view of the film and video making process as it traces the movement of women into it.

HACU 253 History of Photography by Women
Sandra Matthews
Tuesday, Thursday 9:00-10:20 a.m.

Since the invention of photography in 1839, women have played an active role in every stage of the medium’s history. While early historic accounts did not acknowledge their contributions, several recent books have begun to remedy the situation. In this course, we will survey the major periods of photographic history, concentrating on the work of women photographers worldwide. We will examine women’s role primarily in art photography, but also in commercial and vernacular venue. Students will complete individual research projects and dependent on funding, we hope to produce a collaborative CD ROM based on interviews with contemporary photographers and critics.

HACU 256 U.S. Women's Auto/Biography
Susan Tracy
Tuesday, Thursday 2:00-3:20 p.m.

This course begins where the proseminar, "Women's Lives, Women's Stories" ends in considering biography as well as autobiography as a form. We will study women who are activists and artists in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. We will consider various theoretical aspects of writing about women’s lives and will in some cases discuss a woman’s work, her autobiography and her biography. By mid-semester students should have settled on a person to research for a final research paper based on primary and archival sources. There may be a chance for students to participate in a Valley project on documenting local feminist activity in the sixties, seventies and eighties.

HACU 269 Gendered Identities in Music
Jayendram Pillay
Monday, Wednesday 1:00-2:20
Monday 6:30-9:30 p.m.

This course centers on how gender is articulated and crafted through music and narratives. Our approach will be inter textual and interdisciplinary, drawing on a number of fields including ethnomusicology, literary and film studies, anthropology, women’s studies, ethnic studies, queer theory and dance studies. We will examine the ways in which male and female identities and sexualities are culturally negotiated and contested in case studies from various parts of the globe, including the Caribbean, African American and Native American cultures, South Asia and its Diaspora, and South Africa.
critical theorists. As part of the final project, students will collaborate on the writing and performance of a one-act play based on their own creative efforts, their research, and surviving fragments from the period.

IA 216  Black Literature and Drama  Robert Coles
Component Monday, Wednesday  10:30-1:50 a.m.  Kym Moore

This course examines various forms of Black Literature from a twentieth century perspective, particularly the ways in which the "story" is transformed as it moves from one medium to another. What is lost, misrepresented, de-emphasized or reinforced in the translation? What is the impact on the audience? Literary works by James Baldwin, Richard Wright, Ntozake Shange, Adrienne Kennedy, August Wilson, Pearl Cleage, Paul Carter Harrison and Lorraine Hansberry will be included. In addition, we will also take a brief look at the Black Exploitation film and its impact on contemporary literary production.

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL SCIENCE  559-5548
Franklin Patterson Hall

SS 264  Children/Families  Stephanie Scharness
Tuesday, Thursday  10:30-11:50 a.m.

What do parents need to provide for their children to grow up as healthy, functioning adults in society? This course approaches child development as an interaction between the biological/social imperatives of children's developmental needs, and the socioeconomic, psychological, and cultural circumstances that affect how families and communities interpret and meet those needs. For the first part of the semester we will focus on Bowlby's theory of attachment, read cross-cultural studies on parents' child-rearing strategies, and explore research on the processes by which children become socialized into the larger society. Following that, we will focus on case studies of children reared in settings ranging from extreme poverty in Brazil to inner-city neighborhoods and to "mainstream" middle-class America, centering in each case on particular aspects of the child's social milieu: for example, parental belief systems, the socialization "messages" of preschools, or the effects of exposure to violence. Background in child development is helpful although not required.

SS 266  Democracy/Workplace/Community  Laurie Nisonoff
Tuesday, Thursday  10:30-11:50 a.m.  Stanley Warner

Why isn't work more democratic? Is it possible to increase democratic participation, reduce hierarchy, and recognize differing abilities without losing efficiency? We will explore a range of experiments from corporate "Quality-of-Worklife" programs to worker managed enterprises, from Polaroid, Avis, and Honda, to Weirton Steel and local workers collectives. Throughout the course we will look beyond democracy as simply the political act of voting to develop a stronger theoretical understanding of democracy as a more fundamental principle for organizing both work and community. At the core of this inquiry is the question of whether democracy can be fully realized in the face of persistent inequality and discrimination. Differences rooted in class, race, and gender raise difficult questions for concepts of democracy that assume a universal, abstract person. Are small democratic communities possible or are they essentially utopian and countercultural? We will consider case studies that range from intentional communities to urban initiatives to redefine the meaning of neighborhood. Field research, potluck suppers, and guest speakers will keep reality in touch with theory.

SS 279  Race, Gender, & Power in Brazil  Helen Quan
Wednesday, Friday  10:30-11:50 a.m.

In the mid-1960s, the famous Brazilian Marxist historian, Caio Prado Junior maintained that contemporary economic, racial and political problems (in Brazil) stem from settlement patterns based upon colonial commerce of Brazil's past. Yet, until recently Brazil was seen as having a non racist national culture in which democracia racial flourished. How much do we really know about racial formation and power in Brazil? Similarly, what do we really know about gender relations in Brazil? This seminar investigates the material and intellectual structures and processes of race, gender and class in Brazil. In addition, we will examine social, political and cultural movements in the last century to interrogate questions of power and the mappings of Brazil’s social stratification. Therefore, our focus will be on 1) social, economic and political inequalities along the lines of race and gender, and the popular mobilizations for social justice as a result of such inequalities; and 2) the meaning and logic of race and gender as articulated and contested in Brazil. Special emphasis will be placed on the centrality of African heritage in Brazilian culture and history and the role that Afro-Brazilians may or may not play in the African Diaspora.

SS 290 Postmodernity and Politics
Component Wednesday, Friday 1:00-2:20 p.m.
Carollee Bengelsdorf
Margaret Cerullo

In this course we will examine and problematize "politics" and "postmodernity" together. We assume that postmodernism is defined in part by the collapse or exhaustion of the political project of the left (including various "New Lefts"). One key line of exploration in the course will be the affinities between postmodernism and the revival or renovation of the political imagination of the Left. On the further assumption that a key characteristic of postmodernism is the breakdown of the center/periphery model of the world system, we will examine the debates about the politics of postmodernism in both the contemporary U.S. and Latin America. We will read works by the following authors: Marshall Berman, Zygmunt Bauman, Arturo Escobar, Jean Franco, Nestor Garcia Canclini, Lyotard, Habermas, Nietzsche, Foucault, Judith Butler, Wendy Brown, Stuart Hall, Jean Baudrillard and Jacques Derrida.

SS 311 Women and Work
Wednesday 1:00-3:50 p.m.

This research workshop examines case studies of the interrelationships of gender and capital, some located in specific practice, time and place, others directed toward theoretical critique and construction. We examine issues such as: the work lives of women in the home and workplace; the relationships between "paid" and "unpaid" work; the "feminization of poverty" and of policy; the growth of new professions, the service sector, and the global assembly line. This course is organized as a seminar with students assuming substantial responsibility for discussion. Some background in feminist studies, political economy, history, or politics is expected. By permission of the instructor only.

SS 397I Writing about the Third World
Component Tuesday, Thursday 12:30-3:20 p.m.
Carollee Bengelsdorf

This seminar is designed for Division III students who are writing their independent study projects on some aspect of theory and/or the Third World. The course will center around colonial and postcolonial discourse and modernism/postmodernism in the Third World context. Within these broad framework, it is intended to facilitate interchange between students working on aspects of the various paradigms for Third World development/underdevelopment, in a range of disciplines. The course will focus upon this interchange. After we read key texts to help us develop a common vocabulary, the projects themselves, along with what students suggest in the way of additional reading, will constitute the syllabus. By permission of the instructor only.

WS 101
Introduction to Women's Studies
Kathleen Zane
Tuesday, Thursday 1:10-2:25pm

This course offers an overview of women's position in society and culture by examining women's lives from a variety of experiential and theoretical perspectives. The first section examines works by women that illuminate both the shared and the diverse social, psychological, political, and economic realities of their experience; the second section introduces analyses of sexism and oppression, with a focus on different frameworks for making and evaluating feminist arguments. The course concludes with visionary feminist views of women recreating their lives.

WS 203
Feminist Approaches to Literature
Marian Mollin
TBA

This course studies the works of women writers who represent a variety of cultural, national, linguistic, and historical backgrounds. It explores the connections in these writings between women's lives and the author's representations of female experience. Questions include the following: What does it mean to read and write as a woman? How does gender intersect with race, class, sexuality, and culture, and how do those intersections inform women's stories? Is there evidence of consistency of theme, form, imagery, or voice in women's fiction? How do specific literary forms and techniques reflect particular cultural contexts? Topics and readings vary depending on the interest of the instructor and the availability of translations.

WS 203
Race and Gender in Twentieth Century
Elizabeth Young

ENGL 272
American Women's Writing
Tuesday, Thursday 1:10-2:25

This course examines the work of a variety of twentieth-century women writers located in the United States, focusing on the genre of prose fiction and the period from 1900 to 1970. Particular attention will be paid to developments in African American women's writing and to lesbian literary representation in this period. Writers may include Djuna Barnes, Gwendolyn Brooks, Willa Cather, Kate Chopin, Zora Neale Hurston, Nella Larsen, Carson McCullers, Toni Morrison, Tillie Olsen, Ann Petry, Gertrude Stein, Edith Wharton, and Hisaye Yamamoto.

WS 250
Global Feminism
Jean Grossholtz
Monday, Wednesday 1:00-2:25

This course is an examination of the political economy of Third World countries concentrating on the interlinked impact of colonialism, capitalism, and patriarchy on women's lives; the organizational base of women's political activity in those countries and the relationship of that activity to women in industrial capitalist countries. The course aims to examine the possibilities of global feminism as an international movement of political and economic transformation. Prerequisite: Women's Studies 101 or permission of instructor.

WS 290
Research Methods in Women's Studies
Jean Grossholtz, Susan Perry, Kathleen Norton
Monday 7:00-10:00 p.m.

This course will teach the basic skills of research formation and design; the examination and assessment of evidence and its use in argument. The course will provide conceptual and working knowledge of bibliographic tools and information sources for accessing information on women and gender within both the national and international framework. Students will pursue some common projects (for example, a search for their family's history, or written documentation supplementing oral family histories) and a project of their own design and imagination. Prerequisite: WS major or minor, or eight credits in the department.

WS 333 (01) Feminist Theory and Film Elizabeth Young
ENGL 372 Wednesday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

This seminar investigates contemporary feminist theory—including but not limited to feminist film theory—in relation to film. It examines the influential formulations of the cinematic "male gaze" and "women's film"; recent theorizations of race and sexuality in cinema and in culture; gender complexities in popular Hollywood genres; and critical issues emerging from films made by women. Students undertake extensive theoretical readings and attend mandatory weekly film screenings.

WS 333 (02) Gender and Domestic Labor Fran Deutsch
PSYCH 319 Tuesdays 1:00-2:50 p.m.

Social, psychological, and sociological theories and research addressed to why women do more housework and childcare than men are examined. Special attention is paid to the situation of dual-earner families. Class and ethnic differences on the nature of this inequality are considered, and the barriers to full equality at home explored. Prerequisite: Permission of instructor.

WS 333 (03) Feminist Theologies Jane Crosthwaite
Tuesday, Thursday 10:50-12:05 p.m.

Mary Daly, Elisabeth Schussler Fiorenza, Phyllis Trible, and Naomi Goldenberg, among others, have argued that traditional Jewish and Christian theological systems have overlooked the needs, concerns, histories, and contributions of women. Their challenges range from the historical modification of a presumably unbiased religious system to the outright rejection of a so-called patriarchal establishment. Whatever their approach, feminist theologies offer diverse and incisive tools for understanding how a theological system operates, how transitory cultural assumptions become embedded in ongoing doctrines, and how apparently minor adjustments can have significant ripple effects. Prerequisite: 8 credits in department or permission of instructor.

WS333 (04) World Views of Uncommon Women Holly Hansen
HIST 381 Wednesday 1:00-4:00pm

In this research seminar we explore the place of individuals in a culture using the collections of personal papers in the Mount Holyoke College Archives. How did women in late nineteenth century New England perceive themselves and their world? Were they products of their time, creators of their time, or both? How can we understand their aspirations and efforts towards social transformation? We will find tools for analyzing people's thoughts and lives in the works of Bourdieu, Gramsci, Said, and others. Each student will produce a research paper using archival sources, and assist in the production of a web site. Prerequisite: Written permission of instructor.

CLASSICS 228 Women in Antiquity Sumi TBA

Women in the ancient world experienced varying degrees of oppression and devaluation, or of freedom and higher status, depending on their social class, the prosperity of the community, and the predominant philosophical, religious, and scientific thought of a given period in antiquity. Paradoxically, they frequently managed to carve out meaningful and powerful lives within a system that appeared certain to deny them just this. In this course we will examine women's lives in antiquity in the context of the interplay of these various factors.

ENGL 252 Women Writers—Nineteenth-Century Brown
Monday, Wednesday 9:25 a.m.

In this cross-cultural examination of nineteenth century American women writers, we will compare a number of works of fiction, prose, poetry, and autobiography. We will discuss how writers created sophisticated and insightful critiques of American culture, and imagined or re-presented new American identities and histories. We will also consider tensions between "sentimental" idealism and political pragmatism, restrictive domesticity and dangerous autonomy, and passionless femininity and expressed sexuality. Authors may include Alcott, Child, Fuller, Harper, Hopkins, Stowe, Taylor, and Wilson.

Prerequisite: Sophomore, second-semester first year student with permission of instructor.

ENGL 304

Reading/Writing Late Medieval and Early Modern Women

Diamond

Monday 2:30-5:00 (meeting at UMass)

This course explores a variety of literary forms produced by and for women during the culturally and politically transformative years of the late fourteenth to the early seventeenth centuries. Focusing on the writing of such figures as Julian of Norwich, Margery Kempe, Anne Askew, Mary Sidney, and Mary Wroth, the course will examine the contexts—literary and historical—in which their works were produced. Some of the questions this course will ask include how did rising rates of literacy and education, expanding audiences, and the advent of print shape women's access to books? What social and ideological movements enabled or hindered their participation in public discourse? What kinds of continuities can we discern between "medieval" and "renaissance" women writers? What continental literary and religious traditions influenced English women writers? How are women writers to be positioned within the traditional definitions of literary periods, and of the English canon? Prerequisite: Jr, Sr, 8 credits in the department above the 100 level, including 241 or permission of instructor.

ENGL 374

Jane Austin: Readings in Fiction and Film

Lemly

Monday 1:00-3:50 p.m.

A study of Austen's six novels through the lenses of Regency culture and of twentieth century filmmakers. How do these modest volumes reflect and speak to England at the end of world war, on the troubled verge of Pax Britannica? What do the recent films say to and about Anglo-American culture at the millennium? What visions of women's lives, romance, and English society are constructed through the prose and the cinema?

WST 100b Issues in Queer Studies (Director for Spring 1999) with other Women’s Studies faculty and invited guest lecturers
Thursday 7:30-8:45 p.m.

This course introduces students to issues raised by and in the emerging interdisciplinary field of queer studies. Through a series of lectures by Smith faculty members and invited guests, supplemented by film viewings, students will learn about subject areas, methodological issues and resources in queer studies. Two credits.

WST 150b Introduction to Women’s Studies
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 11:00 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

An introduction to the interdisciplinary field of women’s studies through a critical examination of feminist histories, issues and practices. Focus on the U.S. with some attention to the global context. Primarily for first and second year students.

WST 300b Contemporary Latina Theater
LAS 301b Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

From the shoestring budgets of their collective theatre pieces of the 1960’s to their high-tech multimedia performance art of the 1990’s, U.S. Latinas have moved from their marginal positions backstage to become the central protagonists of the efflorescent, hybrid, multicultural art form that is Latina theatre today. In this course, we will read a variety of plays, performance pieces, puppet shows, and other art forms that define U.S. Latina theatre from the early seventies to the present. Critical readings will accompany the texts. Every effort will be made to actually see a performance of some manifestation of Latina theatre. Knowledge of Spanish is not required, but will be useful. Prerequisite: WST 150 or permission of the instructor. FULFILLS WOMEN OF COLOR REQUIREMENT FOR UMASS WOMEN’S STUDIES MAJORS AND MINORS.

WST 350b Gender, Culture and Representation
Monday, Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

Examines how gender is structured and represented in a variety of arenas, including art, politics, law and popular culture. Through the critical reading of key contemporary works of feminist theory, we will study the variety and ambiguities of political and symbolic representation.
AAS 248b  Gender in the Afro-American Literary Tradition  Emily Bernard
Monday, Wednesday  1:10-2:30 p.m.

AAS 326b  The Sociocultural Development of the Afro-American Women  Ann Ferguson
Thursday 3:00-4:50 p.m.

In this seminar we examine the unique historical and social experience of African-American women. We explore the specific issues and concerns that black women have voiced through a close reading of the speeches, writings, and political manifestos of African American women from the 19th century to the contemporary period. Our goal is to understand how African American women's social and political consciousness has been shaped by race, sex, and class position and to gain an understanding of their individual as well as collective, organized responses. FULFILLS WOMEN OF COLOR REQUIREMENT FOR UMASS WOMEN'S STUDIES MAJORS AND MINORS.

ANT 243b  Colloquium in Political Ecology:  Gender, Knowledge, Culture  Frederique Apffel-Marglin
Tuesday, Thursday  10:00-11:30 a.m.

The study of ecology in the natural sciences focuses on nature as an ecological system. The current escalating ecological crisis has been brought about and is being perpetuated by social, cultural and knowledge practices which require study by social scientists if we are going to be able to address the current situation. This course is an introduction to the study of those factors implicated in the creation and perpetuation of the current ecological crisis. The course is structured around three categories: gender, knowledge, and culture. These have been chosen as promising entry points into the study of those practices inimical or favorable to ecological health. The course will begin by taking stock of the situation ecologically and will end with a suggestion of what an ecological way of life might look like. This course will be offered alternately with ANT 244. Prerequisites: ANT 130a or b, or permission of the instructor.

CLT 230b  "Unnatural" Women: Mothers Who Kill Their Children  Thalia Pandiri
Tuesday, Thursday  1:00-2:50 p.m

Some cultures give the murdering mother a central place in myth and literature while others treat the subject as taboo. How is such a woman depicted-as monster, lunatic, victim, savior? What do the motives attributed to her reveal about a society’s assumptions and values? What difference does it make if the author is a woman? Authors to be studied include Euripides, Seneca, Ovid, Anouilh, Papad diamandis, Atwood, Walker, Morrison. Prerequisite: at least one college level course in literature. Offered in alternate years.

CLT 268b  Latina and Latin American Women Writers  Nancy Saporta Sternbach
Monday, Wednesday, Friday  11:00-12:10 p.m.

This course examines the last twenty years of Latina writing in this country while tracing the Latin American roots of many of the writers. Constructions of ethnic identity, gender, Latinidad, “race,” class, sexuality, and political consciousness are analyzed in light of the writers’ coming to feminism. Texts by Esmeralda Santiago, Gloria Anzaldúa, Sandra Cisneros, Demetria Martinez, Carmelita Tropicana, and many others are included in readings that range from poetry and fiction to essay and theatre. Knowledge of Spanish is not required, but will be useful. First-year students must seek permission of the instructor.
