WOMENSST 290A  Biology of Difference  Mary Elizabeth Strunk

WOMENSST 391W  Writing for Majors  Alix Paschkowiak

Stay tuned to Spire to add this class. This class replaces WOMENSST 392A, Gender and Sexuality Seminar.

WOMENSST 297P  Hormones, Body Languages and the Politics of Life  Mary Elizabeth Strunk

How did hormones become the cause — and proof — of sex and gender differences? How have ideas of "healthy" and "sick" bodies been changed by various hormone therapies and why have women so often been the recipients of those therapies? As hormone technologies enable some people to exert control over their fertility, aging, and gender expression, how do these technologies revive (or revise) long-standing debates over biological essentialism? This interdisciplinary course will examine the cultural politics of hormones and the major and ongoing debates over hormones’ meaning, purpose, and application. Focusing on hormones both inside and outside of the body, we will study how hormones have been commodified (especially in this Age of Genes) and how hormones affect the environment and the food we eat.
WOMENSST 187 Intro to Women's Studies
Mon, Wed 10:10-11:00 a.m.
Friday discussions 9:05, 10:10, 11:15 a.m.

Placing women’s experiences at the center of interpretation, this class introduces basic concepts and key areas of women’s lives both historically and contemporaneously. It is an inter-disciplinary, trans-disciplinary, and cross cultural study of women’s roles and relations but it is also an overview of theoretical perspectives on gender and its intersection with other social constructs of difference (race/ethnicity, class, sexuality, and age). The central aim is to foster critical reading and thinking about these interlocking systems which have shaped and influenced the historical, cultural, social, political, and economical contexts of our lives. Specific attention will be given to women’s resistance of those gendered inequalities, and the various ways they have worked to create new systems of change by engaging in national and global transformational politics. Lecture, discussion. Gen Ed IU

WOMENSST 187H Intro to Women’s Studies-Honors
Tues, Thurs 9:30-10:45 a.m.

See above description. Class meets in Orchard Hill.

WOMENSST 201 Critical Perspectives
Section 1: Tues, Thurs 11:15-12:30 p.m.
Section 2: Tues, Thurs 9:30-10:45 a.m.

Introduction to fundamental questions and concepts of feminist thought and to the basic intellectual tools of analysis integrating economic and cultural imperialism, gender, class, race, and sexual orientation. Also addresses the multifaceted dimensions of women’s lived experiences within a global context.

WOMENSST 291B Black Women Writers: Zetta Elliott
Feminist Visions from the African Diaspora
Tues, Thurs 9:30-10:45 a.m.

This course will introduce students to literature written by and about black women. By exploring the different cultural, political, and historical contexts in which these writers work, we will attempt to define the continuities and conflicts that exist within the vast field of black women’s writing. Why, when, and how did a black feminist consciousness emerge? How did racial tensions within the predominantly white feminist movement lead to the development of a separate “womanist”/Third World agenda? How have black men responded to the writing of black women? How does literature by black women challenge negative stereotypes and misrepresentations of black women’s realities?

WOMENSST 294M Pictures of Health: Mary Elizabeth Strunk
Gender, Medicine and Film
Tuesday 2:30-4:30 p.m.
Thursday 2:30-3:45 p.m.

This course explores the ways that movies have influenced both medicine’s public image and the ways that we imagine our own bodies. How has a century of filmmaking helped define the “normal” body and the categories of health and illness? How have films shaped ideas about “natural” ways of living, aging, and dying? How have gender, race, class, and sexuality affected how medical science and medical practitioners are portrayed on-screen — and, by extension, how they are regarded in real life? Our films and readings will consider a wide spectrum of topics, including the politics of illness; pregnancy/birth; intersexuality/transsexuality; death/dying; aging; disability; mental illness; food politics; public health; disease/disaster management; environmental health/activism; pandemics; pharmaceuticals; and health care reform.

WOMENSST 391/
ECON 348
Political Economy of Women
Lisa Saunders
Tues, Thurs 11:15-12:30 p.m.

This course is a critical review of neoclassical, Marxist, and feminist economic theories pertaining to inequality between men and women in both the family and the firm.

WOMENSST 691
Issues in Feminist Research Methods
Miliann Kang
Wednesday 4:00-6:30 p.m.

This seminar will include readings on general questions of feminist methodology and ethics of research. Open to Certificate in Advanced Feminist Studies students only. Register with program coordinator, Nancy Campbell Patteson, in the Women’s Studies office.

WOMENSST 793A
Final Research Projects
Miliann Kang
By arrangement

Graduate students in the Certificate for Advanced Feminist Studies must register for this class to complete the final research project requirements. Register with program coordinator, Nancy Campbell Patteson, in the Women’s Studies office.

ANTHRO 297O Gender in Hip Hop Culture
Whitney Battle-Baptiste
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

This course will critically examine issues of race, representation and the sexual politics of hip-hop culture. We will trace the historical implications of race and gender in US culture from slavery onwards and connect how past images of African Americans continue to influence contemporary notions of Black identity. We will trace the early historical moments of the hip-hop movement in order to understand how the culture became synonymous with male dominated spaces and silent women. This course will also explore the role of misogyny, sexual exploitation, and hypermasculinity in current rap music and contrast this with the rise of independent artists challenging and reshaping hip-hop music today. Ultimately, we will look at the role of the internet and alternative forms of media as a means of how hip-hop has moved from the board room to the global stage, giving the power back to the people.

ANTHRO 697D Reproductive Ecology
Lynette Sievert
Wednesday 12:20-3:20 p.m.

Using a workshop format of cross-species and cross-population comparisons, this course examines life history and reproductive events within specific environmental contexts. We will compare and contrast information from populations around the world to identify similarities and differences in proximate determinants of fertility. We will also discuss “hot” issues related to reproductive ecology, such as whether human females have concealed ovulation, whether menstruation is adaptive, whether morning sickness is adaptive, whether humans evolved “obligate midwifery,” and why males die young.

JAPANESE 197N Asian Homosexualities in Film & Literature
Stephen Miller
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

COMM 297X Gender, Sex and Representation
Sut Jhally
Monday, Wednesday 3:35-4:50 p.m.
This course will examine the relationship between commercialized systems of representation and the way that gender and sexuality are thought of and organized in the culture. In particular, we will look at how commercial imagery impacts upon gender identity and the process of gender socialization. Central to this discussion will be the related issues of sexuality and sexual representation (and the key role played by advertising).

COMM 397LL  Sexuality & Film  Lisa Ades
Tuesday 4:00-7:00 p.m.

Since the inception of the moving picture, the most controversial, titillating and complex subject on film has been sex. From Mae West style innuendo to the sexual liberation of the sixties to ever more graphic sexuality on film today, we have been shocked and mesmerized by sex in the movies for more than a century. This course will explore the problems and possibilities of depicting sex in the cinema. From the earliest depiction of sexuality in motion pictures to the latest trend of unsimulated sex in mainstream film, this course will ask: do we learn anything from sex on screen? Who controls what we see and why? And is there such a thing as going too far? We will look at a variety of genres that have treated sex and sexuality in the cinema including horror films, sexploitation, queer cinema, youth films and European films. In addition, we will examine the history of the ratings system and censorship in the United States, the depiction of sex in Hollywood vs. the independent film world, the difference between art and pornography, the male and female gaze, and how shifting social and political climates influence what we see on screen. Film selections range from Elia Kazan’s Splendor in the Grass to Catherine Breillat’s Fat Girl to Ang Lee’s Brokeback Mountain.

COMM 397NN  Race, Gender & the Sitcom  Demetria Shabazz
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

Lecture, discussion. This course examines the situation comedy from sociological and artistic perspectives. We will seek, first of all, to understand how situation-comedy is a rich and dynamic meaning-producing genre within the medium of television. Secondly we will work to dissect narrative structures, and the genre’s uses of mise-en-scene, cinematography/videography, editing, and sound to create specific images of the family through social constructions of race, class, and gender. In addition we will use various critical methods such as semiotics, genre study, ideological criticism, cultural studies, and so on to interrogate why the sitcom form since its inception in the 1950s has remained one of the most popular genres for audiences and industry personnel alike and assess what the genre might offer us in terms of a larger commentary on notions of difference and identity in the US and beyond.
Open to Senior & Junior Communication majors only.

COMM 397VV  Women in Cinemas of the African Diaspora  Demetria Shabazz
Tuesday, Thursday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

What is an Afrocentric vision of woman and what does a woman’s vision of Africa say about being African and Black around the world? These are some of the questions explored in this course on women, identity, and Afrocentric film practices. An objective of the course is to introduce students to the evolution of African women in all aspects of the cinema as image and as image makers. This course not only explores depictions of women, but especially women of color who direct, produce, and write films within the African Diasporic world. Specifically we look at discourses about women and works by filmmakers on and off the continent of Africa that take both an historical and global approach, in terms of issues of representation and film practice. We will look at the various political, social and cultural roles of African women in the visual media of film, video, and television and engage in critical perspectives that examine how Black and African women explore subjectivity, the body, and positionality within the Diaspora. Some of the films we will study include films from Nigeria, Algeria, France, Great Britain, and the U.S. such as Tsitsi Dangarembga’s Everyone’s Child; These Hands by Flora Mbugu-Schelling; Ngozi Onwurah’s Monday’s Girls; Euzhan Palcy’s Rue cases nègres or Sugar Cane Alley; Daughter’s of the Dust by Julie Dash; Compensation by Zeinabu irene Davis. This course includes an evening lab and some of the films will be screened during the Massachusetts Multicultural Film Festival as a part of the Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies at the University of Massachusetts.

COMM 491A Media & the Construction of Gender  Lynn Phillips
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

Seminar. This course draws on research and theory in psychology, sociology, gender and cultural studies, and related fields to examine how various forms of media shape our understandings of ourselves and others as gendered beings. We will discuss how media messages not only influence our behaviors, but also permeate our very senses of who we are from early childhood. Through a critical examination of fairy tales, text books, advertisements, magazines, television, movies, and music, students will explore the meanings and impacts of gendered messages as they weave with cultural discourses about race, class, sexuality, disability, age, and culture. Open to Senior & Junior Communication majors

ECON 348 The Political Economy of Women  Lisa Saunders
Tuesday, Thursday 9:30-10:45 a.m.

A critical review of neoclassical, Marxist, and feminist economic theories pertaining to inequality between men and women in both the family and the firm.

ECON 397S Gender & Economic Development  Melissa Gonzalez-Brenes
Monday, Wednesday 1:25-2:40 p.m.

This course explores the relationship between gender and economic development in less developed countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America. We use economic tools to examine the role that gender plays in a range of development issues including poverty, inequality, credit, law and labor markets. We also discuss the implications for public policy and analyze policy interventions designed to address these issues. Pre Requisite: Economics 103 OR Resource Economics 102 ECON 203 strongly recommended.

Christine Maksimowicz
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 2:30-3:20 p.m.

This course investigates images of men and women in poetry, drama, and fiction. It aims at appreciating the literature itself, with increasing awareness of the ways in which men and women grow up, seek identity, mature, love, marry, and during different historical times, relate in families, classes, races, ethnic groups, societies, cultures. What are the conventional perspectives and relationships of “Man” and “Woman”? How does literature accept or question these conventions? What alternative perspectives and relationships are imagined in literature? (Gen Ed. AL, G)

Tuesday 4:00-6:30 p.m.

Mandatory Pass/Fail course. This course will allow students — both queer-identified and not — to use writing to express queer experiences and identities. Using creative and theoretical texts, we will examine the ways in which queer experience is often implicitly or explicitly “written out” of dominant discourse, and investigate how writers have subverted, spoken back to, or otherwise counteracted this exclusion. We’ll then go on to write in various genres about personal and cultural experiences of queerness.

ENGLISH 891DA Transnational Feminism
Asha Nadkami

Wednesday 1:00-3:30 p.m.

This course surveys contemporary transnational feminist theory to ask how it transforms feminist theory and practice. We begin by critiquing the exclusions engendered by a “global sisterhood” model. What issues must a feminism that locates gender as the only site of oppression ignore? How is it complicated by intersections of race, sexuality and class? Finally, how do the perspectives of feminists of color in the U.S. and postcolonial world radically reshape feminist politics? In asking these questions the aim of this course is not simply comparative: we will not look at different feminist movements as representative of the national contexts from which they emerge. Rather, this course understands feminisms in different parts of the globe as mutually constitutive and informing. As such, the “transnational” in the course title signals that we will theorize feminism as a global phenomenon that challenges and complicates the bounded nature of the nation-state itself. Readings may include essays by Gayatri Spivak, Chandra Mohanty, Rey Chow, Saidiya Hartman, and Kumari Jayawardena, as well as novels by Jessica Hagedorn, Michelle Cliff, Audre Lorde, Arundhati Roy and Shani Mootoo. Books for this course will be available from Food for Thought Books Collective (106 N. Pleasant Street, Amherst, MA 01002).

such developments were themselves influenced by ideas about masculinity and femininity. We will explore topics such as revolutionary definitions of citizenship; changing patterns of work and family life; fin-de-siècle links between crime, madness, and sexual perversion; the fascist cult of the body; battle grounds and home fronts during the world wars; gendered aspects of nationalism and European colonialism, and the sexual revolution of the post-war era. As an honors course, the class will include a lot of reading, independent research, and oral presentations.

HISTORY 389  US Women's History Since 1890 (HSU)  Laura Lovett
Lec. TuTH 1:00-1:50 p.m.
Disc. Fri 9:05, 10:10, 12:20 p.m.

Explores the relationship of women to the social, cultural, economic and political developments shaping American society from 1890 to the present. Examines women's paid and unpaid labor, family life and sexuality, feminist movements and women's consciousness; emphasis on how class, race, ethnicity, and sexual choice have affected women's historical experience. Sophomore level and above. (Gen.Ed. HS, U)

HISTORY 594W  Race, Class & Gender in American Sport  Christian Appy
Wednesday 12:20-2:50 p.m.

Writing seminar. Through readings, discussion, and frequent writing assignments, this course explores the history and meaning of modern sports in the United States. What can sports teach us about the changing realities of race, class, and gender in American society. What so various sports mean to participants and spectators? Have sports enriched democracy or merely owners and superstars.

HISTORY 791B  U.S. Women & Gender History (4 credits)  Laura Lovett
Monday 6:00-8:30 p.m.

This research seminar encourages research and writing on the history of women and/or gender in America from 1600 to the present. The course requires the completion of a potentially publishable paper or project, e.g. oral history project. During the first half of the semester, our focus will be on historical methods, varieties or modes of historical writing, and writing techniques. A few scholarly essays and other types of historical writing will be examined. The second half of the semester is devoted to the first draft of your paper or project including class discussion of your first draft and the revision process, culminating with your submission of a final draft by the end of the semester. We will also meet with UMASS and Smith College archivists concerning your research.

All Departmental courses except 100-level automatically count towards the Women's Studies major. All departmental, including 100-level automatically count towards the Women's Studies minor. For additional courses covering applied areas of Women's Studies, consult the Component Course section, Pages 17-23.
This is the second part of a two-semester sequential capstone course that fulfills the Commonwealth College Capstone Experience requirement. A study of feminist thinkers, theologians, and both literary and art critics will inform our close reading of selected works of art, myth and poetry and an extended examination of the theological and cultural treatment of women in the works of James Joyce. The material is the base from which students will engage in intense intellectual exploration; in the first semester through the texts we examine in common; in the second, through individual in-depth pursuit of interests generated in the first semester. Students will coordinate their work to create a conference for a professional presentation of their work, and to engage in a collective endeavor that results in the archival product, the publication of the conference proceedings. Both semesters emphasize critical thinking, the organization of ideas, refinement of several writing forms, integration of interdisciplinary research and incorporation of visual arts. Women typically fill two-thirds of the slots in American journalism schools, but men still hold two-thirds of the jobs in most newsrooms. Less than one-fourth of news stories have women as their subjects, yet in advertising more than half of the images are of scantily-clad women, while one-fourth of the images of men represent them in a similar manner. What does this tell us about gender, journalism, the media, and cultural context? Let's view it, read it, observe and discuss this phenomenon. In Gender, Journalism, and Cultural Context we will examine video clips, news stories, advertising, sports journalism, and other media from the perspective of journalists, citizens, and consumers. Students will participate in collaborative projects using journalistic and media texts and images, keep a media log, write essays and a research paper.

Students' intellectual and artistic creativity will be called upon in this class, team taught by a Jewish educator and a locally renowned art teacher. We will learn about intriguing women from the bible using various traditional texts and discuss their personae. We will bring what we have learned to themed art projects for each of the characters.
JUDAIC 391F  Jewish Women Writers  Jyl Felman
Wednesday 1:15-3:45 p.m.

Jewish Women Writers is a literature/cultural and Judaic Studies course that is designed to interrogate questions of voice, ethnicity, agency, gender, and sexuality in the work of Jewish women writers. By studying Jewish women writers in all genres: fiction, short stories, plays, poetry, and memoir, students will be asked to locate their own, individual narrative identities. We will also pay close attention to the craft of writing. Such as narrative form and structure, use of language, metaphor, and textual construction. There will be creative writing exercises to go along with the readings.

LEGAL 391G  Women and the Law  Bernie Jones
Monday, Wednesday 11:15-12:30 p.m.

How have legal scholars addressed the status of women in society? We will consider different approaches to thinking about women and the law, discussing the significance of law with respect to topics such as reproductive health issues, education and the workplace. Prerequisite: LEGAL 250

PSYCH 308  Psychology of Women  Ronnie Janoff-Bulman
Tuesday, Thursday 4:00-5:15 p.m.

A general introduction. Two sections: a) the issue of sex differences, including evidence for and explanation of such differences; b) "women’s issues," topics of particular interest to women in contemporary society (e.g., violence against women, work and achievement). Prerequisite: introductory psychology. (Gen.Ed. SB, U)
PSYCH 391VV  Pregnancy, Parturition & Postpartum Depression  Unja Hayes
Tuesday 5:00-7:30 p.m.

The purpose of this course is to examine the psychosocial and neurobiological factors characteristic of pregnancy and parturition and how they can protect against stress or contribute to an increased vulnerability to changes in mood (e.g., depression and anxiety) after delivery. We will review literature using both human and animal models. Course requirements include class participation, mini-writing assignments, presentations, a term paper, and a community outreach project.

PSYCH 391ZZ  Psych of the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Experience  John Bickford
Tuesday, Thursday 1:00-2:15 p.m.

Students in this course will explore psychological theory and research pertaining to gay, lesbian, and bisexual people. Topics include sexual orientation, sexual identity development, stigma management, heterosexism & homonegativity, gender roles, same-sex relationships, LGB families, LGB diversity, and LGB mental health.

Using lectures and discussion groups, we will explore how we define family, the ways we construct families, and the relationship between our families and larger social forces. Beginning with an examination of the history of families, we will look at changes in seemingly impersonal forces that are associated with changes in personal relations—between partners and spouses, between parents and children, among extended kin. Then we will turn to contemporary families across the life course, looking at the choice of a partner and experiences in marriage, parenting and childhood, and marital dissolution. Throughout, we will discuss differences—by gender, by race, and by class. Throughout we will attend to the social forces that shape these personal experiences.

DEPARTMENTAL COURSES

ENGLISH 132  Gender, Sexuality, Literature, and Culture
2 Online Sessions

Literature treating the relationship between man and woman. Topics may include: the nature of love, the image of the hero and heroine, and definitions, past and present, of the masculine and feminine.

SOCIOL 222  The Family
W 6-9 p.m.

First part: historical transformations in family life (relationships between husbands and wives, position and treatment of children, importance of kinship ties); second part: the contemporary family through life course (choice of a mate, relations in marriage, parenthood, breakup of the family unit).

SOCIOL 344  Gender and Crime
Tuesday, 5-8 p.m.

The extent and causes of gender differences in crime, from the “streets” to the “suites.” Topics include problems in the general measurement of crime, historical and cross-cultural differences in the gender gap, the utility of general theories of the causes of crime in explaining the continuing gender gap, and a detailed look at the question and magnitude of gender discrimination in the American criminal justice system. Prerequisite: SOCIOL 241. Elective course in Criminal Justice/Sociology track and in Criminal Justice Studies Certificate Online Program but open to all.

SOCIOL 395K  Domestic Violence
Online

Prior to the 1970s, domestic violence in America was widely viewed as a private matter in which public intervention was inappropriate except under the most extreme circumstances. Over the past several decades, however, domestic violence has been increasingly perceived and responded to by the public as a criminal matter. Take a detailed look at patterns and trends in domestic violence in contemporary America, explore theoretical perspectives about its causes, and examine the domestic violence reform movement, paying special attention to research that tries to assess the actual effectiveness of criminal justice reforms in reducing domestic violence. Elective for Criminal Justice Studies Certificate Online Program but open to all.

COMPONENT COURSES

COMP-LIT 141  Good and Evil: East/West
Online

The imaginative representation of good and evil in Western and Eastern classics, folktales, children’s stories, and 20th-century literature. Cross-cultural comparison of ethical approaches to moral problems such as the suffering of the innocent, the existence of evil, the development of a moral consciousness and social responsibility, and the role of faith in a broken world. Contemporary issues of nuclear war, holocaust, AIDS, abortion, marginal persons, anawim, unwanted children.

ENGLISH 270  American Identities
Monday 4:30-7 p.m.

Explores the ways literature participates in the definition of national identity. Readings focus on ways American issues of creed, class, status, gender, self and community, possession and dispossession, nationhood and ethnicity, and language have contributed to American identities.

EDUC 391L  Recognizing Family Values and Initiating Interventions
Online

Violence: The word can make one think of many different kinds, ranging from war and terrorism to senseless assaults and homicides in local towns and cities across the United States. Family violence involves people that are closely related or connected in one way or another, people that are claiming to care about one another. As professionals or students looking to become social workers, probation officers or victim-witness advocates (just to mention a few), we are seeing family violence every day, most often at its worst stages when the anger and tension are most hostile. Understanding the ramifications of family violence will enhance our ability to intervene and hopefully curtail it. This course will examine: the effects of family violence on the criminal justice system, offenders and the community; the causes and effects of family violence as well as some intervention methods being used in the field today; and the sociological and criminogenic effects on society. Taught in a format that involves student participation. Students will be expected to complete homework assignments. Each student will be required to write a paper, take a midterm examination and cumulative final. Meets with EDUC 591W. Part of the School Counseling Series but open to all.

SOCIOL 392A Race, Class, and Crime Online

Theoretical, empirical, and ethical issues raised by linkages of race and class to crime and responses to crime. Basic concepts and issues; suggestions and claims of racial and social class bias within and outside of the system of justice and their impact on crime data. Review of factual information centered on reports of the racial and income characteristics of victims of crime, the race and sex characteristics of offenders as suggested by arrests, and the characteristics of those incarcerated or punished in other ways. Midterm, final exam, and a short research paper. Prerequisite: A 100 or 200-level SOCIOL course. Elective for Criminal Justice Studies Certificate Online Program but open to all.

SOCIOL 394F Crime and Forensics M 5-7:30 p.m.

An overview of the uses of forensic science in criminal prosecution. For upper level, non-science majors, with priority given to criminal justice students. Focus on a core of four well-known contemporary murder cases: the prosecutions of O.J. Simpson, Pamela Smart, the Menendez brothers and Suzanne D'Amour. Key forensic evidence used in each case will be identified and discussed, along with the major social issues surrounding the case, including domestic violence, child abuse, sexual assault, and race and community-police relations. A basic understanding of chemistry, biology and physics may prove helpful, but is not required. Elective for Criminal Justice Studies Certificate Online Program but is open to all.

Literature treating the relationship between man and woman. Topics may include: the nature of love, the image of the hero and heroine, and definitions, past and present, of the masculine and feminine. Enrollment limited.

HISTORY 297F History of Sexuality
Babette Faehmel
M-Tu-W-Th-F 9-11:30

Introducing students to the study of gender and sexuality as historical categories. Rather than thinking of a person’s gender and erotic longings as simply biological facts or expressions of instinctual drives, we will ask to what extent social, cultural and political developments have influenced the ways in which we define masculine/feminine, normal or abnormal sexuality, and what we consider sexy, erotic, or queer. We will approach the topic from multiple perspectives. In examining how historical forces influence notions of gender/sexuality, we will look at relatively open and straightforward ways of control and regulation such as religious dogma or civil laws. We will also examine the more subtle workings of power. For that we will try to understand how ideas about what is “normal” or “appropriate” gender or sexual behavior were disseminated in society, how historical actors internalized or resisted these ideas, and how they at times even deployed them strategically to advance agendas of their very own. We will look at men and women of different races, classes, ethnicities, ages, and sexual proclivities, to illuminate the extent of diversity in U.S. gender and sexual relations.

SOCIOL 222 The Family
M-Tu-W-Th 12:30-3:30 p.m.

First part: historical transformations in family life (relationships between husbands and wives, position and treatment of children, importance of kinship ties); second part: the contemporary family through life course (choice of a mate, relations in marriage, parenthood, breakup of the family unit).

SPRING 2008 GRADUATE LEVEL COURSES

WOMENSST 691 - Issues in Feminist Research Methods
Miliann Kang
Wednesday 4:00-6:30 p.m.

This seminar will include readings on general questions of feminist methodology and ethics of research. Open to Certificate in Advanced Feminist Studies students only.

These classes count towards the open elective (formerly intracultural perspective) for the Certificate in Advanced Feminist Studies students.

ANTHRO 697D - Reproductive Ecology
Lynette Sievert
Wednesday 12:20-3:20 p.m.

Using a workshop format of cross-species and cross-population comparisons, this course examines life history and reproductive events within specific environmental contexts. We will compare and contrast information from populations around the world to identify similarities and differences in proximate determinants of fertility. We will also discuss "hot" issues related to reproductive ecology, such as whether human females have concealed ovulation, whether menstruation is adaptive, whether morning sickness is adaptive, whether humans evolved "obligate midwifery," and why males die young.

ARTHIS 701 – Seminar in Roman Art: Representing Girls and Women
Laetitia La Follette
Thursday 2:30-5:15

EXPLORE 648 - Oppression & Education
Maurianne Adams
Wednesday 7:00-9:30 p.m.

Explores historical and sociocultural contexts of the specific manifestations of oppression and social liberation movements. Examines the disciplinary underpinnings of core concepts in social justice education: content roots in cognitive, developmental and social psychology, anthropology and sociology; and pedagogical roots in experiential education, feminist pedagogy, group dynamics, critical pedagogy. Develops social justice education teaching materials and/or interventions. Prerequisites - Educ 691E/F or can be taken concurrently.

HISTORY 594W - Race, Class & Gender in American Sport
Christian Appy
Wednesday 12:20-2:50 p.m.
Through readings, discussion, and frequent writing assignments, this course explores the history and meaning of modern sports in the United States. What can sports teach us about the changing realities of race, class, and gender in American society. What so various sports mean to participants and spectators? Have sports enriched democracy or merely owners and superstars.

HISTORY 791B - U.S. Women & Gender History (4 credits)
Laura Lovett
Monday 6:00-8:30 p.m.

This research seminar encourages research and writing on the history of women and/or gender in America from 1600 to the present. The course requires the completion of a potentially publishable paper or project, e.g. oral history project. During the first half of the semester, our focus will be on historical methods, varieties or modes of historical writing, and writing techniques. A few scholarly essays and other types of historical writing will be examined. The second half of the semester is devoted to the first draft of your paper or project including class discussion of your first draft and the revision process, culminating with your submission of a final draft by the end of the semester. We will also meet with UMASS and Smith College archivists concerning your research.

PHIL 593R - Renaissance and Enlightenment Feminist Philosophers
Eileen O’Neil
Wednesday 3:35-6:05 p.m.

See department for description.

These classes count towards the transnational/critical race feminisms elective for the Certificate in Advanced Feminist Studies students.

ENGLISH 891DA - Transnational Feminism
Asha Nadkarni
Wednesday 1:00-3:30 p.m.

This course surveys contemporary transnational feminist theory to ask how it transforms feminist theory and practice. We begin by critiquing the exclusions engendered by a “global sisterhood” model. What issues must a feminism that locates gender as the only site of oppression ignore? How is it complicated by intersections of race, sexuality and class? Finally, how do the perspectives of feminists of color in the U.S. and postcolonial world radically reshape feminist politics? In asking these questions the aim of this course is not simply comparative: we will not look at different feminist movements as representative of the national contexts from which they emerge. Rather, this course understands feminisms in different parts of the globe as mutually constitutive and informing. As such, the “transnational” in the course title signals that we will theorize feminism as a global phenomenon that challenges and complicates the bounded nature of the nation-state itself. Readings may include essays by Gayatri Spivak, Chandra Mohanty, Rey Chow, Saidiya Hartman, and Kumari Jayawardena, as well as novels by Jessica Hagedorn, Michelle Cliff, Audre Lorde, Arundhati Roy and Shani Mootoo. Books for this course will be available from Food for Thought Books Collective (106 N. Pleasant Street, Amherst, MA 01002).
The following courses don’t count towards a requirement but would be of interested to Certificate students.

AFROAM 697C – Black Politics in the Americas
Agustin Lao-Montes
John Bracey

ARTHIS 303/603 – Roman Art: Power, Politics and Society
Laetitia La Follette

RES-ECON – Consumer and Family Economics
M.J. Alhabeeb
This course will examine the ways in which prevailing ideas about women and gender shaped visual imagery, and how these images influenced ideas concerning women from the Renaissance to the Enlightenment. It will adopt a comparative perspective, both by identifying regional differences among European nations and tracing changes over time. In addition to considering patronage of art by women and works by women artists, we will look at the depiction of women heroes such as Judith; the portrayal of women rulers, including Elizabeth I and Marie de’ Medici; and the imagery of rape. Topics emerging from these categories of art include biological theories about women; humanist defenses of women; the relationship between the exercise of political power and sexuality; differing attitudes toward women in Catholic and Protestant art; and feminine ideals of beauty.

In this course we will explore the intimate relations of gender and labor: both the necessary labor of genders’ production as well as the gendered organization of labor itself. In general the course will use gender to focus on contemporary concerns in the American workplace-class, ethnicity, sexuality, and race—but will also make critical comparisons with developments in other nations. The biological labor of reproduction and its intersection with the labor of production will necessarily be a constant concern in our discussions. We shall have to become familiar with certain terms: glass ceiling, glass escalator, mommy-track, affirmative action, child care, sexual harassment, welfare to workfare. We certainly might want to ask what constitutes work? But we also might need to wonder if work is done for love, is it still work?

This course will focus on both the historical and cultural development of fashion, clothing and consumption in East Asia, with a special focus on China and Japan. Using a variety of sources, from fiction to art, from legal codes to advertisements, we will study both actual garments created and worn in society throughout history, as well as the ways in which they inform the social characterization of class, ethnicity, nationality, and gender attributed to fashion. Among the topics we will analyze in this sense will be hairstyle, foot-binding and, in a deeper sense, bodily practices that inform most fashion-related discourses in East Asia. We will also think through the issue of fashion consumption as an often-contested site of modernity, especially in relationship to the issue of globalization and world-market. Thus we will also include a discussion of international fashion designers, along with analysis of phenomena such as sweatshops.

The design and aim of this course is to examine how contemporary literature written by women critiques categories of gender, sexuality, race and class. You will be asked to think and write about cultural meanings which have become naturalized in practice and ideology and how our texts think through/beyond those taxonomies of power, coercion and abridgement in order to neutralize them. Topics to be discussed include: violence, colonialism and the politics of identity, embodiment and the creative voice and the meanings of gender in a transnational world. Authors will include Edwidge Danticat, Jhumpa Lahiri, Nora Okja Keller, Michelle Cliff, Maryse Conde and Arundhati Roy.

WAGS 20-01  Sex, Gender & the Family  Margaret Hunt
HIST 74-01  Thursday 2:00-4:00 p.m.

The topic changes from year to year. In spring 2008 this seminar will focus on sexuality and reproduction mostly in Europe and America from approximately 1700 to the present. We will read a few key theoretical texts (e.g., Jewish and Christian scripture, Thomas Malthus, some feminist sociobiologists) but most of the class will be divided as follows: First half: the experience of sex and reproduction in times past including childbirth in the pre-modern age; infanticide; the Demographic Revolution; and birth control and abortion from the eighteenth century to Roe v. Wade. Second half: modern debates about sexuality and the family including reproductive technologies; gay and “Third World” adoption; polygamy; and internet sex.

WAGS 32-01  Human Rights Activism  Amrita Basu
Monday, Wednesday 2:00-3:20 p.m.  Martha Saxton

This course is intended to give students a sense of the challenges and satisfactions involved in the practice of human rights work as well as a critical sense of how the discourses calling it forth developed and continue to evolve. We intend to provide specific historical and cultural context to selected areas in which human rights abuses of women and men have occurred, and to explore how differing traditions facilitate and inhibit activism within these areas. The semester will begin by exploring the historical growth of human rights discourse in Europe and the United States, culminating in the emergence of the post-World War II Universal Declaration. We will then turn to the proliferation of these discourses since the 1970s, including the growing importance of non-governmental organizations, many of them internationally based, the use of human rights discourse by a wide range of groups, and expanding meanings of human rights including new conceptions of women’s human rights. The third part of the course will explore criticisms of human rights discourses, particularly the charge that for all their claims to universalism, these discourses reflect the values of European Enlightenment traditions which are inimical to conceptions of rights and justice that are grounded in culture and religion. Throughout the course, rights' workers will discuss their own experiences, abroad and in the U.S., and reflect on the relationship between their work and formal human rights discourse.

WAGS 85-01  States of Poverty  Kristen Bumiller
Tuesday 2:00-4:30 p.m.

In this course the students will examine the role of the modern welfare state in people’s everyday lives. We will study the historical growth and retrenchment of the modern welfare state in the United States and other Western democracies. The course will critically examine the ideologies of “dependency” and the role of the state as an agent of social control. In particular, we will study the ways in which state action has implications for gender identities. In this course we will analyze the construction of social problems linked to states of poverty, including hunger, homelessness, health care, disability, discrimination, and violence. We will ask how these conditions disproportionately affect the lives of women and children. We will take a broad view of the interventions of the welfare state by considering not only the impact of public assistance and social service programs, but the role of the police, family courts, therapeutic professionals, and schools in creating and responding to the conditions of impoverishment. The work of the seminar will culminate in the production of a research paper and students will be given the option of incorporating field work into the independent project. This course fulfills the requirement for an advanced seminar in Political Science. Requisite: Some previous exposure to background material.

AMST 30 Screening Asian Americans

component Monday, Friday 12:30-1:50 p.m.

Karen Cardozo

Emphasizing contemporary issues, this course introduces students to various forms of visual media by and about Asian Americans. Using a chronological and thematic approach, various genres in advertising, television and film (including narrative dramas, documentaries, and experimental films) will be analyzed within the context of transnational Asian/American histories, cultures, and identities. Some of the issues we will address include: Orientalist stereotypes of Asians; the re/creation of history and memory; the intersections of race, class, and gender/sexuality; and interracial relations. Students will be expected to apply the critical languages of film and narrative theory to their analysis of visual texts—that is, to understand how form and content relate. Along with its broad survey of the panethnic category of “Asian Americans,” the course will feature an in-depth case study of media representations of South Asian Americans (e.g., people from Bhutan, India, Pakistan). Among other assignments, students will independently review a text not covered by the syllabus and generate a final research paper.

Black Studies 108 Cooper 542-5800

BLST 25-01 Women & Politics in Africa

POSC 29-01 Monday, Wednesday 12:30-1:50 p.m.

Catharine Newbury

This course will explore the genesis and effects of political activism by women in Africa, which some believe represents a new African feminism, and its implications for state/civil society relations in contemporary Africa. Topics will include the historical effects of colonialism on the economic, social, and political roles of African women, the nature of urban/rural distinctions, and the diverse responses by women to the economic and political crises of postcolonial African policies. This course will also explore case studies of specific African countries, with readings of novels and women’s life histories as well as analyses by social scientists.

History 11 Chapin 542-2229

HIST 46-01 Women's History 1865-Present

Tuesday, Thursday 10:00-11:20 p.m.

Martha Saxton

This course begins with an examination of the experience of women from different racial, ethnic and economic backgrounds during Reconstruction. It will look at changes in family life as a result of increasing industrialization and the westward movement of settler families, and will also look at the settlers’ impact on Native American women and families. Topics will include the work and familial experiences of immigrant women (including Irish, Polish, and Italian), women’s reform movements (particularly suffrage, temperance, and anti-lynching), the expansion of educational opportunities, and the origins and programs of the Progressives. The course will examine the agitation for suffrage and the subsequent splits among feminists, women’s experiences in the labor force, and participation in the world wars. Finally, we will look at the origins of the Second Wave and its struggles to transcend its white middle-class origins.
At the beginning of Joy Kogawa's Obasan, the narrator wonders, "If I could follow the stream down and down to the hidden voice, would I come at last to the freeing word?" This class takes as its topic the many ways American female authors have written about memory—memories of the past as well as of other places, about memories that refuse to be surfaced and memories that are at times not even of their protagonists' own lives. How, for instance, do writers portray the ways painful pasts have influenced their characters' identities? Or what it means to suffer for a past whose details one does not even know? Is the "truth" freeing, or does overcoming the hidden and silent increase memory's burdens? What are some of the possibilities and limitations of portraying what are often traumatic experiences in the novel form? And can "trauma" even mean the same thing across ethnic experiences? With such questions in mind, we will look specifically at novels concerned with two of the foundational experiences of American civilization, slavery and migration, and at the pervasive problems of longing, disjuncture, and displacement endemic to such experiences. Authors we may read in this cross-cultural course include Maxine Hong Kingston, Edwidge Danticat, Alesia Perry, and Cristina Garcia.

This course is designed to examine sex, gender, and sexuality in multiple contexts. The primary aim of this course is to develop an understanding of the biology and neuropsychology of sex, gender, and sexuality. Additionally, the course will examine how biological and environmental factors influence sex, gender, and sexuality across development and how these factors influence differences in brain and behavior. Course requirements will include reading primary research articles in the fields of psychology, neuroscience, sociology, anthropology, and women’s studies. Students will also be asked to conduct library research, write several short response and review papers, and conduct a larger research project. Students are not required to have a scientific background but they are asked to be open to reading and evaluating scientific research. This is a core course in the Culture, Brain, and Development Program.

This course addresses the development of the United States economy and society from the colonial period to the present. Focusing on the development of capitalism, it provides students with an introduction to economic and historical analysis. Students study the interrelationship among society, economy, and the state, the transformation of agriculture, and the response of workers to capitalism. Issues of gender, race, class, and ethnicity figure prominently in this course. This is designed to be a core course for students concentrating in economics, politics, and history. Students work on developing research skills in economics and historical methodologies.

In this course, we will analyze a number of female "types" found in Victorian fiction, poetry, and criticism -- the governess, the fallen woman, the shopgirl, and the 'new woman', to name just a few -- who figure centrally in debates over marriage, work, and the changing position of women in nineteenth-century Britain. Although our reading will range from the late 1840s to the beginning of the twentieth century, we will focus primarily on two historical periods, the 1850s-1860s and the 1890s, during which the "woman question" was hotly debated in the press and in fiction. Topics for discussion will include the convergence of gender, sexuality, and politics in late-Victorian feminist and socialist reform movements; the role of class in defining female experience; and women's conflicted participation in British imperialism. Students will be encouraged to conduct primary research on nineteenth-century women's history in local archives in conjunction with course papers and divisional work.

This seminar will explore the interface of technology with gender and race, how the concepts of gender, race, and sexuality are embodied in technologies, and conversely, how technologies shape our notions of gender, race, and sexuality. It will examine how contemporary products -- such as film, video games, science fiction, plastic surgery, blogs, and biotechnologies -- reflect and mediate long-standing but ever-shifting anxieties about race, gender, and sexuality. The course will consider the following questions: How do cybertechnologies enter into our personal, social, and work lives? Do these technologies offer new perspectives on cultural difference? How does cyberspace reinscribe or rewrite gender, racial, and sexual dichotomies? Does it open up room for alternative identities, cultures, and communities? Does it offer the possibility of transcending the sociocultural limits of the body? Finally, what are the political implications of these digital technologies?

HACU 0292-1 Fem Phil & Perf-based Media
Monique Roelofs
Tuesday 9:00-11:50 p.m.
Wednesday 6:30-9:30 p.m.

This is an advanced production/theory class for philosophy and film/video students. Through readings, screenings, and discussion we will question the visual and performative epistemologies of a range of filmmakers in the context of feminist philosophical writings by among others, Kristeva, Irigaray, Spivak, Braidotti, Butler, Lugones, and Ahmed. We will consider the works of Mona Hatoum, Ximena Cuevas, Apichatpong Weerasethakul, Florence Ayisi, Kim Longinotto and Marguerite Duras among others, and examine the diverse performative strategies these video and filmmakers use to confront questions of gender, race, class, sexuality and transnationality. We will examine how these films cut across performative codes in movies that question the act and meaning of performance in relation to media; how they reflect the artists’ drive to create visual and physical languages that embody the questions and ideas that inspire them; and how these films speak with and/or against the feminisms envisaged in the philosophical literature. Students will complete a paper, two short collaborative videos and one longer performance-based project on film or video. Prerequisites: Video I, Film I, or another 100 or 200 level production/theory class or a 100 or 200 level class in philosophy, Literature, feminist theory, or postcolonial theory. Instructor permission required.

HACU 0355-1 Gender/Race & Class
Laurie Nisonoff
SS 0355 Tuesday 12:30-3:30 p.m.

This course will examine the social structures and ideologies of gender, race, and class. For instance, when we consider the situation of battered women, we see that all women confront gendered social structures and prejudice. Yet, the experiences of those women and their options vary depending on their race and class. Through the use of examples as the one above, drawn from both history and public policy, we will work to hone our critical skills in analyzing gender, race, and class in American society. This course is designed for advanced Division II and Division III students. Students will have the opportunity to develop comprehensive research projects and to present their own work for class discussion.

School of Natural Science
311 Cole Science Building
SS 0259-1 International Nutrition
Fatemeh Giahi
component Tuesday, Thursday 12:30-1:50 p.m.

In this course, the students will learn about several major issues in international nutrition that impact health, survival, and development capacity of societies. The topics will include household food security, child malnutrition and growth retardation, micronutrient deficiencies, and the nutrition transition. To better understand the socio-economic and political root causes of the nutritional problems, we will look at the impact of rural and urban population growth, agriculture and globalization on the nutrition of individuals, households, communities and nations. In addition we will look at the social and economic situation of women in relation to food and nutrition. The students will be required to complete reading and writing assignments as well as an independent final research project.
This course examines the cultural contexts of science and technology, especially as they relate to issues of gender and the law. In what ways does the powerful framework of the law intersect with technoscience? How are these intersections gendered, and conversely, how are gendered subjects constituted by the institutional realms of technoscience and law? To explore these questions, we examine a variety of topics including legal and scientific understandings of intersex; gendered and racialized aspects of biomedical research; and the gendered dynamics of pharmaceutical marketing.

Early Christianity had a tremendous appeal to women and slaves. Early Christian spirituality and practices of devotion were part of a broader cultural revolution aimed at subverting both Jewish and pagan Roman patriarchal family structures, slavery, and the political structures in which they were embedded. The high numbers of female converts, martyrs, and donors testify to the extent to which the church in its formative phase relied on women -- slaves as well as high-ranking Roman ladies -- and their spiritual and material contributions. In medieval Catholicism, women mystics formulated a theology according to which Christ in his human nature could be thought of as entirely female. In the early modern period, female religious rallied to withstand the onslaught of the tridentine movement, which was aimed at purging the religious "public sphere" from its many female protagonists. Female imagery, and the orchestration of cults devoted to the Virgin Mary, for example, played a key role in converting Native Americans. In this course, we will be reading original sources written by or about women in their roles as followers of the apostles, founders of convents, mystics, nuns, "real" as well as "fake" saints, but also secondary literature in this rapidly expanding field of historial studies.

This course will introduce students to a broad range of reproductive rights issues and the history of feminist activism surrounding them. Among the topics we will address are: the distinction between population control and birth control; abortion and maternal mortality; the pros and cons of contraceptive technologies; old and new eugenics; HIV/AIDS and reproductive and sexual health; new frameworks including reproductive justice; fundamentalist assaults on reproductive rights; and controversies in feminist organizing at the national and transnational levels.
This course examines a range of methodologies from the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences and provides a foundation for advanced work in the major. It considers the specific advantages of diverse disciplinary approaches for feminist inquiry as well as their limitations for considering issues that do not divide neatly along disciplinary lines. The course encourages students to begin to think about the challenges of doing rigorous interdisciplinary research.

Critical study of women's writing in India, in genres ranging from classical and medieval poems, tales and songs (e.g., Tiruppavai) to novels, plays and personal narratives by modern women writers (e.g., Rokeya Hossain's Sultana's Dream, Arundhati Roy's The God of Small Things), in translation from Indian languages and in the original English. We will focus on women's perspectives and voices, women's agency, and resistance to dominant discourses. Attention is paid to historical contexts, the socio-religious constructions of women and gender, and the role of ideologies such as colonialism and nationalism in the production and reception of women's writing.

This course will explore the influence of feminist politics on the writing of women throughout the African Diaspora. By exploring the different cultural, political, and historical contexts in which these writers work, we will attempt to define the continuities and conflicts that exist within the vast field of black women's writing. Why, when, and how did a black feminist consciousness emerge? How did racial tensions within the predominantly white feminist movement lead to the development of a separate black "womanist"/Third World agenda? How does feminist literature of the African Diaspora challenge negative stereotypes and misrepresentations of black women's realities?

The course examines Buddhist representations of women and women's representations of Buddhism. We will study materials by and about Buddhist women from Thailand, India, China, Tibet, Japan, and the U.S. Some of the questions we will ask are: How are women portrayed in Buddhist literature? How do they portray themselves? How have Buddhist women responded to sexism in their communities? How have Buddhist women contributed to the development of new Buddhist institutions?

This course examines the representations and roles of women in Jewish culture, from the literature of the Hebrew Bible to the contemporary period. What were the distinctive ways in which women's religious life expressed itself by way of prayer and ritual practice? Were there women mystics and visionaries? How did women exert their influence as mothers and wives? There will be significant focus on the dramatic developments taking place among contemporary Jewish women: innovative rituals and experimental liturgies; opportunities to become rabbis; new approaches to God, theology, and social issues; the Jewish lesbian movement; women's writing and documentary filmmaking.

GNDST 210-03 Women & Philosophy M. Matso
PHIL 249 Tuesday, Thursday 1:15-2:30 p.m.

Some say that philosophers pursue objective knowledge. Feminist philosophy is a body of scholarship that questions the extent to which traditional philosophy has pursued or can pursue knowledge in an objective way. This course is an introduction to issues in feminist philosophy, including its critique of traditional Western philosophy and its contributions to major areas of philosophy such as metaphysics, ethics, epistemology, social and political philosophy, and the philosophy of language.

GNDST 250-01 Gender and Power in Global Context TBA
Monday, Wednesday 11:00-12:15 p.m.

Critical reflections on the dynamics of gendered power relations from global politics to the micro-politics of everyday life, with a primary focus on women. We will explore key concepts in the field and then turn to analysis of gender and power in concrete settings of institutional practice and social structure, with an emphasis on questions of social change and resistance. Topics include: colonization and militarization; violence against women (including physical and economic violence); culture, religion and politics; transnational feminisms; women's bodies and sexualities.

GNDST 333-01 Feminist Theory and History Mary Renda
HIST 301-05 Monday 1:15-4:05 p.m.

Feminist theory asks about the nature of gender and its relation to racism, capitalism, state power, institutions of cultural production, and diverse patterns of intimacy, identity, and embodiment. How have historians built upon the work of feminist theorists to explore our gendered pasts? And how has feminist theory drawn on historical scholarship? In what senses are the work of theorizing and the practices of history distinct? Where do they converge? And how do they, separately and together, contribute to the production of knowledge in gender studies scholarship?

GNDST 333-02 Hitchcock and After E. Young
ENGL 274 Thursday 1:15-4:05 p.m.
FILM 380

This course will examine the films of Alfred Hitchcock and the afterlife of Hitchcock in contemporary U.S. culture. We will interpret Hitchcock films in a variety of theoretical frames, including feminist and queer theories, and in historical contexts including the Cold War. We will also devote substantial attention to the legacy of Hitchcock in remakes, imitations, and parodies. Hitchcock films may include Spellbound, Strangers on a Train, Rear Window, Vertigo, North by Northwest, Psycho, The Man Who Knew Too Much, M amie, and The Birds; additional works by Brooks, Craven, De Palma, and Sherman.

GNDST 333-03 Queer Theory and Film C. Gunderman
SPANISH 320 Wednesday 1:15-4:05 p.m.
FILM 390 Thursday 7:40-10:00 p.m.

In the 1990s GLBT liberation entered the public sphere as a major political force. Simultaneously, American academia produced and exported a new academic discipline: queer studies. As a consequence, the North American liberational model displaced cultural and theoretical models of sexuality of other countries. We will consider some of the key U.S. texts that have consecrated queer studies as a discipline and juxtapose them with theories and cinematic texts from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, and Mexico in order to recuperate cultural models under erasure in the wake of the U.S. model's identity-focused and consumer-driven triumphalism.

GNDST 333-04  Postmodern Feminist Philosophy  Jami Weinstein
PHIL 350  Monday 7:00-10:00 p.m.

This course examines the work of key feminist theorists of, or informed by, the French/Continental tradition. We focus on the issues of materialism, psychoanalysis, language, materiality, performativity, subjectivity, post-structuralism, and postmodern philosophy. We read works of the following: Helene Cixous, Luce Irigaray, Jula Kristeva, Rosi Braidotti, Judith Butler, and Elizabeth Grosz.

GNDST 333-05  Assault, Rape and Murder  M. Romero-Diaz
SPANISH 332  Gendered Violence from Medieval to Contemporary Spain
Tuesday 1:15-4:05 p.m.

This course will examine the complex interaction of gender and violence as a personal and institutional issue in Spain from medieval times to the present. We will study both the ideological and sociocultural constructs that sustain and perpetuate violence against women as well as different forms of resistance. From a feminist perspective, we will approach topics such as: private/public, honor, jealousy, masculinity, etc. Some of the texts are: Lucanor's La mujer brava; Zayas's Desengaños amorosos; Bebé's song, Malo; Boyain's movie Te doy mis ojos; and the Ley orgánica contra la Violencia de Género from 2004.

GNDST 333-06  Women & American Pop Culture  J. Gerhard
HIST 301-01  since 1945
Wednesday 1:15-4:05 p.m.

This reading seminar looks at the representation of women in popular culture and the place of women in the creation of popular culture. We will look at romance novels and their readers, talk shows and their hosts, television, pornography, Hollywood movies, women's magazines, and music. Special attention will be paid to the role of popular culture in the rise and dissemination of feminism and antifeminism and in the creation of multiculturalism.

GNDST 333-07  Gender/Class in the Victorian Novel  A. Martin
ENGL 323  Tuesday, Thursday 11:00-12:15 p.m.

This course will investigate how representations of gender and class serve as a structuring principle in the development of the genre of the Victorian novel in Britain. We will devote significant attention to the construction of Victorian femininity and masculinity in relation to class identity, marriage as a sexual contract, and the gendering of labor. The texts chosen for this course also reveal how gender and class are constructed in relation to other axes of identity in the period, such as race, sexuality, and national character. Novelists will include Dickens, Eliot, Gaskell, C.
Bronte, and Hardy.

GNDST 333-08  Gender and Domestic Labor  F. Deutsch
PSYCH 319  Wednesday 1:15-3:05 p.m.
This course examines social psychology and sociological theories and research addressing why women do more housework and child care than men. It pays special attention to the situation of dual-earner families and considers class and ethnic differences on the nature of this inequality and the barriers to full equality at home.

GNDST 333-09  Sex, Love and Gender  Kristin Elliott Hood
AFRAM 340-01  Contemporary African American Film  Tuesday 1:15-5:05 p.m.

This course will explore the representation in film of intimate relationships among African Americans. Confronting an ongoing history of racist, sexist, and homophobic images, films produced by and featuring blacks can offer alternate interpretations of love, romance, and sexuality. Coupled with literature and theoretical readings by feminists and black cultural critics, students will consider the function of--and challenges to--intimacy in interpersonal relationships among African Americans. Directors under consideration include Spike Lee, Kasi Lemmons, Marlon Riggs, and Sanaa Hamri.

GNDST 333-10  Women & Gender in the Middle East  N. Sbaiti
HIST 301-03  Tuesday 1:15-4:05 p.m.

This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced historical understanding of issues related to women and gender in the region defined as the area from Morocco to Iran. After an introduction to the main themes and approaches in the study of women and gender, we will examine the development of discourses on gender and the lived experiences of women from the rise of Islam, through the Ottoman Empire, and up to the twentieth century. Topics: the politics of marriage, divorce, and reproduction; women's political and economic participation; Islamist movements; the new field of masculinity studies; and the highly contested topics of homosexuality and transsexuality in the Middle East.

GNDST 333-11  Gender & the State  M. Madera
HIST 301-06  in Latin American History  Thursday 1:15-4:05 p.m.

This seminar examines the history of gender in Latin America, with an emphasis on its relation to nation building and state formation. How has gender, along with race, ethnicity, and class, shaped the ways that Latin American men and women have imagined their relation to state and nation? How have imperialism, revolution, dictatorship, poverty, and programs for modernization shaped acceptable gender behavior and sexual norms? And how have Latin American states wielded gender and sexuality to consolidate their power? We will pay particular attention to everyday struggles over gender politics, citizenship, political action, the exercise of state power, and human rights.

GNDST 333-12  Queer Henry James  M. Snediker
ENGL 355  Monday 1:15 – 4:05 p.m.

This seminar will engage the challenging, intellectually adventurous work of Henry James as it intersects with and articulates diverse forms of queerness. We shall investigate Jamesian desire as embedded in questions of precocity and knowingness, passivity and patience, stylishness and estrangement. Novels will include Roderick Hudson, The Bostonians, and What Maisie Knew. Shorter fiction will include “The Author of Beltraffio” and “The Beast in the Jungle.”

GNDST 333-13  Inside-Out Hampden Jail  S. Davis
AMST 301  Friday 9:30-12:00 p.m.
ENGL 348
This course will bring together Five College students with women incarcerated in Hampden County, to work together as peers for a semester-long exploration combining literary analysis and creative writing. Building such a collaborative classroom community proves transformative for all participants. Texts include Patricia McConnel's Sing Soft, Sing Loud and Jimmy Santiago Baca's A Place to Stand. Professor Davis will be joined by award-winning co-facilitator Lysette Navarro of Voices from Inside. STUDENTS SELECTED BY INTERVIEW, TO BE CONDUCTED IN NOVEMBER 2007.

GNDST 333-14 Framing Youth Culture
AMST 301-02 Monday 1:15 – 4:05 p.m.
A. Tiongson

This course provides a rigorous theoretical and historical understanding of youth culture incorporating insights from the fields of cultural studies, feminist theory, queer theory, ethnic studies, and diaspora studies. We will study a variety of youth expressive forms including teen magazines, high school proms, riot grrrl culture, Chicano/a punk, and Bollywood film. The aim of the course is to provide a more nuanced understanding of youth culture, a sense of how youth culture both reflects and shapes existing social relations.

GNDST 333-15 Queer Kinship
ENGL 334/AMST 301 Wednesday 1:15-4:05 p.m.
FILM 370
Iyko Day

This course examines alternative kinship formations in Asian North American cultural production. It will focus on the gender and sexual management of racial bodies since the nineteenth century—from the U.S. Page Law of 1875 that restricted Chinese women on the basis of their presumed sexual immorality to various forms of "racial castration" that mediate Asian masculinities. We will consider how alternative kinship arrangements and queer cultural projects expose and/or upset the narrative assumptions embedded in heteronormative scripts of nationalism.

GNDST 333-16 Race, Gender and the Environment
ENVIRON 321 Wednesday 1:15-4:05 p.m.
Giovanna Di Chiro

An investigation into the sociocultural histories, definitions, and causes of environmental problems. Explores how race, gender, and class are embedded in social, scientific, and political formations, including perceptions of "environment." Using multiple theoretical traditions the course examines ways that different cultures and societies confront questions of identity, power, and knowledge in their ideas and actions to protect the environment. Draws on contemporary scholarship and social activism from national and international contexts and addresses environmental topics including ideas/theories of nature, feminist environmentalism, environmental justice, and sustainable development.

GNDST 333-17 Sociology of Gender
SOC 305 Tuesday 1:15-4:05 p.m.
Eleanor Townsley

This course focuses on the social production of gender relationships across a range of institutional, interactional, intellectual, and cultural contexts. The syllabus is structured around selections from major social, political, economic, and cultural theories of gender in addition to several exemplary empirical studies. Weekly topics include kinship and socialization, the contemporary moral orders of masculinity and femininity, family organization, legal systems and nation-states, war and rape, and the gendered organization and deployment of "expert" authority in a range of social settings.

An introduction to the interdisciplinary field of the study of women and gender through a critical examination of feminist histories, issues and practices. Focus on the U.S. with some attention to the global context. Primarily for first and second year students.

This course will offer an introduction to the central historical and contemporary issues, concerns, and debates in lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer (LGBTQ) studies. Using the course readings, film screenings, and class discussions, we will challenge ourselves to complicate our understandings of seemingly natural ideas such as sex/gender, man/woman or homosexual/heterosexual, as we experience them in our own daily lives and perceive them in the world around us. Through an interdisciplinary approach, we will explore the history, critical theory, cultural production, and politics of queer life in the United States, as well as queer identities in a transnational diasporic context. We will pay particular attention to how ideas of gender and sexuality intersect with social understandings of race, class, and citizenship.

This course is an interdisciplinary exploration of the legal status of women and men in the United States historically and today, particularly focusing in the areas of employment, education, reproduction, sexuality, the family, and violence. This course will examine U.S. constitutional and statutory laws affecting women's legal rights and gender equality. Through a close reading of judicial opinions, we will consider how the law historically has officiated gender relations; how the law has responded to women's gender-based claims for equality; and how inequalities based on class/race/sexuality inform (or not) feminist law reform. Readings and lectures will emphasize: 1) constitutional and statutory frameworks for equality; 2) fundamental rights and intimate life; and 3) legal remedies for inequality.

This course will explore how queer subjectivity intersects with gender, ethnicity, race, and class. How do individuals from groups marked as socially subordinate or non-normative use life-writing to claim a right to write? The course uses life-writing narratives, published in the U.S. over roughly the last 30 years, to explore the relationships between politicized identities, communities, and social movements. Students also practice writing memoirs.
Virginia Woolf was an early, avid reader of Proust. In 1925 she wrote "The thing about Proust is his combination of the utmost sensibility with the utmost tenacity. He searches out these butterfly shades to the last grain. He is as tough as catgut & as evanescent as a butterfly's bloom." In this seminar we will read selected works by these two major figures and discuss the worlds they inhabited and the worlds they create in their fiction. We will pay special attention to gender and sexuality in their novels, turning to later readers such as Monique Wittig and Eve Sedgwick to frame our discussion.

SWG 323  Sex, Trade, and Trafficking  Carrie Baker
Tuesday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

This seminar will examine domestic and international trade and trafficking of women and girls, including sex trafficking, bride trafficking, trafficking of women for domestic and other labor, child prostitution, sex work, and pornography. We will explore societal conditions that shape this market, including economics, globalization, war, and technology. We will examine the social movements growing up around the trafficking of women, particularly divisions among activists working on the issue, and study recent laws and funding initiatives to address trafficking of women and girls. Throughout the seminar, we will apply an intersectional analysis in order to understand the significance of gender, race and class to women’s experiences, public discourse, advocacy, and public policy initiatives around sex trade and trafficking.

AAS 212  Culture & Class in Afro-American Family  Riché Barnes
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

“Middle Class Buppies, Welfare Moms, and Somewhere in Between: Will the “real” Black family please stand up?” This course will problematize the notion of “the Afro-American Family” beginning with an understanding that Afro-American families have always struggled for existence, survival, and meaning. Utilizing ethnography, film, narrative, and forms of popular culture we will discuss contemporary images of black families as they are affected across race, class, gender and sexuality in the U.S. The aim of this course is to broaden the student's knowledge of the internal dynamics and diversity of African American family life and to foster a greater understanding of the internal strengths as well as the vulnerabilities of the many varieties of African American families.

AAS 348  Black Women Writers  Daphne Lamothe
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

How does gender matter in a black context? That is the question we will ask and attempt to answer through an examination of works by such authors as Phillis Wheatley, Pauline Hopkins, Nella Larsen, Zora Hurston, Toni Morrison, Alice Walker, Gayl Jones and Audre Lorde.

AMS 120  Scribbling Women  Sherry Marker
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.
With the help of the Sophia Smith Collection and the Smith College Archives, this writing intensive course looks at a number of 19th and 20th century American women writers. All wrestled with specific issues that confronted them as women; each wrote about important issues in American society. Enrollment limited to 15. Priority given to first year students.

CLS 233  Gender and Sexuality in Greco-Roman Culture
Nancy Shumate
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

The construction of gender, sexuality and erotic experience is one of the major sites of difference between Greco-Roman culture and our own. What constituted a proper man and a proper woman in these ancient societies? Which sexual practices and objects of desire were socially sanctioned and which considered deviant? What ancient modes of thinking about these issues have persisted into the modern world? Attention to the status of women; the role of social class; the ways in which genre and convention shaped representation; the relationship between representation and reality.

CLT 230 “Unnatural” Women:
Mothers Who Kill Their Children
Thalia Pandiri
Monday, Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

Some cultures give the murdering mother a central place in myth and literature while others treat the subject as taboo. How is such a woman depicted -- as monster, lunatic, victim, savior? What do the motives attributed to her reveal about a society's assumptions and values? What difference does it make if the author is a woman? Authors to be studied include Euripides, Seneca, Ovid, Anouilh, Papadiamandis, Atwood, Walker, Morrison.

CLT 268 Latina and Latin American Women Writers
Nancy Sternbach
Monday, Wednesday, Friday 1:10-2:30 p.m.
This course examines the last twenty years of Latina writing in this country while tracing the Latin American roots of many of the writers. Constructions of ethnic identity, gender, Latinidad, “race,” class, sexuality, and political consciousness are analyzed in light of the writers’ coming to feminism. Texts by Esmeralda Santiago, Gloria Anzaldúa, Sandra Cisneros, Judith Ortiz Cofer, Denise Chávez, Demetria Martínez, and many others are included in readings that range from poetry and fiction to essay and theatre. Knowledge of Spanish is not required, but will be useful.

CLT 272
Women Writing:
20th and 21st Century Fiction
Marilyn Schuster
Wednesday, Friday 11:00-12:10 p.m.

A study of the pleasures and politics of fiction by women from English-speaking and French-speaking cultures. How do women writers engage, subvert, and/or resist dominant meanings of gender, sexuality, race and ethnicity and create new narrative spaces? Who speaks for whom? How does the reader participate in making meaning(s)? How do different theoretical perspectives (feminist, lesbian, queer, psychoanalytic, postcolonial, postmodern) change the way we read? Writers such as Woolf, Colette, Condé, Larsen, Morrison, Duras, Rule, Kingston, Shields and Atwood. Not open to first-year students.

EAS 350
Modern Girls and Marxist Boys: Consumerism, Colonialism, and Gender in East Asia
Jina Kim
Tuesday 1:00-4:00 p.m.

This course seeks to explore discourses of modern “femininity” and modern “masculinity” through the study of the two most iconic figures to emerge in the early 20th century: Modern Girls and Marxist Boys. We will use these figures as a way to enrich our understanding of gendered politics, consumer culture, colonial modernity, and international relations. Also of concern is the important historical relationship between Modernity and Marxism in Korea and whether or not these two ideologies were reconcilable just as Modern Girls and Marxist Boys were often brought together as scandalous but typically romantic bedfellows. Students will be introduced to interdisciplinary studies and will learn to critically read and use historical, sociological, fictional, and visual texts.

ENG 292
Crafting the Memoir
Ann Boutelle
Tuesday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

In this workshop, we will explore, through reading and through writing, the presentation of self in memoir. A major focus will be on the interweaving of voice, structure, style, and content. As we read the work of ourselves and of others, we will be searching for strategies, devices, rhythms, patterns, and approaches that we might adapt in future writings. The reading list will consist of writings by twentieth-century women. Admission by permission of the instructor.
FRN 360 Topics in Nineteenth/Twentieth Century Literature: Images of the 'Other': Female Domestic Servants in French Fiction
Martine Gantrel
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m.

In this course, we will read works by major French authors of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, in which a female domestic servant is the main character. What happens to a novel or a play when the domestic servant is given first place? Which concerns or anxieties does the servant character embody or convey to the reader? To what extent have such works changed the way women are represented in literature and redefined the relationship of literature to politics, society, and the self? Authors such as Lamartine, George Sand, the Goncourts, Flaubert, Zola, and Genet. Course conducted in French.

FYS 125 Midwifery in Historical and Cross-Cultural Perspective
Erika Laquer
Monday, Wednesday 9:00-10:20 a.m.

While most births worldwide are still attended by midwives, and almost all births before 1900 occurred at home in the presence of friends and midwives, the midwife in the U.S. today is a rare attendant. This course will examine the history of midwives and midwifery in the European and American traditions, with particular attention to the manuals written by midwives to instruct other women about birth and women's health. Alternately feared and revered, the midwife has often served as a bellwether to how a society values its women and children. The course will also examine the varieties of birth experiences possible from cross-cultural perspectives. Because the Pioneer Valley is an area with particularly active groups of professional and direct-entry (lay) midwives, there will be opportunities to meet and discuss these issues with current practitioners.

GOV 205 Colloquium: Law, Family and State
Alice Hearst
Wednesday, Friday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

Explores the status of the family in American political life, and its role as a mediating structure between the individual and the state. Emphasis will be placed on the role of the courts in articulating the rights of the family and its members. Limited enrollment. Suggested preparation GOV 202 or WST 225.

GOV 269 Politics of Gender and Sexuality
Gary Lehring
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

An examination of gender and sexuality as subjects of theoretical investigation, historically constructed in ways that have made possible various forms of regulation and scrutiny today. We will focus on the way in which traditional views of gender and sexuality still resonate with us in the modern world, helping to shape legislation and public opinion, creating substantial barriers to cultural and political change.

GOV 311 Seminar in Urban Politics: Politics of Urban Social Movements
Martha Ackelsberg
Tuesday 1:00-2:50 p.m.

This course will examine a variety of movements, both historical and contemporary, that have been centered in cities, in an effort to understand their special characteristics, and the relationship between urban spaces and political action.

HST 238 Gender and the British Empire
Jennifer Hall-Witt
Thursday 1:00-2:20 p.m.

Traditionally, historians have portrayed the British Empire as largely the province of male explorers, merchants, missionaries, soldiers and bureaucrats. This course treats such men as gendered subjects, investigating intersections between the empire and masculinity, while also surveying women's colonial experiences. Slave societies and cross-cultural encounters through the lens of gender history. The gendered structure of racial ideologies and the imperial features of feminist concerns. From the mid-17th to the early 20th centuries, with a focus on the 19th century. Enrollment limited to 18.

HST 253 Women and Gender in Contemporary Europe
Darcy Buerkle
Tuesday, Thursday 3:00-4:15 p.m.

Women's experience and constructions of gender in the commonly recognized major events of the twentieth century. Introduction to major thinkers of the period through primary sources, documents and novels, as well as to the most significant categories in the growing secondary literature in twentieth-century European history of women and gender.

HST 278 Women in the United States since 1865
Jennifer Guglielmo
Wednesday, Friday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

Survey of women's and gender history with focus on race, class, and sexuality. Draws on feminist methodologies to consider how study of women's lives changes our understanding of history, knowledge, culture, and the politics of resistance. Topics include labor, racial formation, empire, im/migration, popular culture, citizenship, education, religion, science, war, consumerism, feminism, queer cultures, and globalizing capitalism. How have women contested and contributed to systems of inequality? Emphasis on class discussion and analysis of original documents, with short lectures. Students who have taken HST 178 cannot take this class for credit.

HST 355 Topics in Social History: Debates in the History of Gender and Sexuality
Darcy Buerkle
Wednesday 7:30-9:00 p.m.

This course examines the trajectory of research on the history of sexuality and gender in the modern period, with a primary focus on modern Europe. Topics include historical debates about gender and fascism, the establishment of the welfare state, feminism and war and gendered cultural production. In addition to developing a strong sense of recent historical research on gender, this course will consider how notions about gender in history inform contemporary theory and politics. Sources include original documents, recent historical monographs, autobiography and film.

HST 383 Research in U.S. Women's History: Jennifer Guglielmo
The Sophia Smith Collection (19th and 20th Centuries)
Thursday 3:00-4:50 p.m.

A research and writing workshop in U.S. women's history. Provides the opportunity to work with archival materials from the Sophia Smith Collection (letters, diaries, oral histories, newspaper articles, government documents, etc.) and historical scholarship, to research, analyze and write a paper of the student's own choosing.

This course explores the ways in which music functions in society to reflect or construct gender relations and the degrees to which a society's gender ideology and resulting behaviors affect its musical thought and practice. Using non-western case studies as points of departure, particular emphasis will be placed upon the ways scholars write about gendered musical lives.
MUS 220
Topics in World Music:
Women in Sub-Saharan African Music
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

This course will focus on the role of women within Sub-Saharan African musical traditions. Relying on gender-specific ensembles as well as those involving male and female participants, we will examine how the musical activities of women as well as the organization and structure of performances reflect, reinforce, or challenge African perspectives of gender and structures of power as defined in selected African societies. The course will cover both indigenous and modern musical idioms from different parts of Africa, including the Baganda of Uganda, the Akan of Ghana and the Yoruba of Nigeria. In addition, the emergence of strong female voices like those of Miriam Makeba (South Africa), Stella Chiweshe (Zimbabwe) and Oumou Sangare (Mali) in the twentieth century will provide the basis for examining how female musicians have addressed gender-related issues in their music and attempted to break gender boundaries within their respective societies. No previous musical experience is necessary.

Lauren Duncan
Tuesday, Thursday 10:30-11:50 a.m. |

An exploration of the psychological effects of gender on females and males. We will examine the development of gender roles and stereotypes, and the impact of differences in power within the family, workplace, and politics on women's lives and mental health. This course will emphasize how psychologists have conceptualized and studied women and gender, paying attention to empirical examinations of current controversies (e.g., biological versus cultural bases of gender differences).

| PSY 374          | Psychology of Political Activism
Lauren Duncan
Tuesday 1:00-2:50 p.m. |

Political psychology is concerned with the psychological processes underlaying political phenomena. This seminar focuses on people's motivations to participate in political activism, especially activism around social issues. Readings include theoretical and empirical work from psychology, sociology, and political science. We will consider accounts of some large-scale social movements in the U.S. (e.g., Civil Rights Movement, Women's Movement, White Supremacy Movements.)

This course studies the mystical writings of Hildegard of Bingen, Hadewijch, Julian of Norwich, and Teresa of Avila, and their relevance to contemporary spirituality. Focus on their life journeys in terms of love, creativity, healing, and spiritual leadership. Occasional films and music.
REL 277 South Asian Masculinities
Monday, Wednesday 1:10-2:30 p.m.

Andy Rotman

This course considers the role of religion in the construction of male identities in South Asia, and how these identities function in the South Asian public sphere. Topics to be considered will include: the postcolonial feminization of Parsi elites; Krishna devotion and transgender performance; the cinematic phenomenon of the "Angry Young Man"; hijras and the construction of gender; wrestling and the cultivation of masculinity; and Lord Ram and the rise of militant Hindu nationalism.

SOC 314 Seminar in Latina/o Identity:
Latina/o Racial Identities in the United States

Ginetta Candelario

This seminar will explore theories of race and ethnicity, and the manner in which those theories have been confronted, challenged and/or assimilated by Latina/os in the United States. Special attention will be paid to the relationship of Latina/os to the white/black dichotomy. A particular concern throughout the course will be the theoretical and empirical relationship between Latina/o racial, national, class, gender and sexual identities. Students will be expected to engage in extensive and intensive critical reading and discussion of course texts.

Spanish Hatfield Hall 585-3450

SPN 332 The Middle Ages Today: Queer Iberia
Monday, Wednesday 2:40-4:00 p.m.

Ibtissam Bouacharine

This course examines the medieval and early-modern Iberian understanding and expressions of sexuality within the context of modern critical theory. Special attention will be given to the complex and ambiguous representations of same-sex desire, and the manner in which such representations are shaped by the discourses about nation, disease, and race (limpieza de sangre). Texts include Ibn Hazm's Tawq al-hamýma, Juan Ruiz's Libro de buen amor, selections from al-Himyāri's al-Rawad al mi'ty̲r, Fernando de Rojas's La Celestina, Francesc Eiximenis’s Lo Llibre de les dones, as well as poems by Yehuda Halevi, Walīyda, al-Mu'tamid, and Abraham Ibn Ezra. Course conducted in Spanish, all readings in Spanish translation.
