

WOMENSST691B-SEC01 S- Issues in Feminist Research Spring 2015

Professor Angie Willey; awilley@wost.umass.edu

UMass Office Hours: Wednesday 2:30-3:30 Bartlett Hall 11C and by appointment

o Content Overview:

This course will begin from the question, “what is feminist research?” Through classic and current readings on feminist knowledge production, we will explore questions such as: What makes feminist research feminist? What makes it research? What are the proper objects of feminist research? Who can do feminist research? What can feminist research do? Why do we do feminist research? How do feminists research? Are there feminist ways of doing research? Why and how do the stories we tell in our research matter, and to whom? Some of the key issues/themes we will address include: accountability, location, citational practices and politics, identifying stakes and stakeholders, intersectionality, inter/disciplinarity, choosing and describing our topics and methods, and research as storytelling. The class will be writing intensive and will culminate in each student producing a research portfolio.

Course Objectives:

- For students to become familiar with feminist conversations about epistemology (the study of knowledge – what it is, how we know) and methodologies (how we go about producing new knowledges) and the relationship between them.
 - For students to be able to discuss examples of feminist research in ways that engage key themes in these conversations.
 - For students to develop new or ongoing research projects, incorporating key themes in these conversations.

Required Text (all other readings will be available electronically on Moodle):

Clare Hemmings (2010) Why Stories Matter: The Political Grammar of Feminist Theory. Durham: Duke University Press.

Structure:

The course will be largely discussion based. Occasional mini-lectures will contextualize readings by offering background on debates in and about feminist scholarship. It is imperative that students come prepared to discuss the readings for each class period. You are expected to be able to have access to readings during our discussions.

Assessment:

Participation (20%):

Attendance (both physical “showing up” and presence) is crucial.

About “good” class participation: “Good” class participation does not necessarily mean talking the most. There are many ways to promote dialogue in class, including asking questions, noticing if others are silent and trying to make space for more timid voices, allowing silences just to “be” for a few moments (often silence is not emptiness but rather intense thinking), talking to each other and not just to the instructor, reminding yourself that the goal is not to be “right,” but to collaboratively work through issues and problems.

You are expected to keep a notebook of key concepts from each of the readings and to bring this as well as written questions and comments to every class.

Weekly reflection papers/journals (40%):

These are informal, shared with your peers, and 2-3 pages single-spaced. They are due on Moodle by 10pm each Monday. Before Wednesday you will read and comment on the entries of your group members. Each paper/entry should identify key themes and concepts in the week’s readings and engage them with reference to your own research interests or project, depending on where you are in your own research. You have one pass to skip a reflection paper (NOT Week 4 or 8). If you turn an assignment in late without permission in advance, it will count as your missed assignment.

Research Portfolio (40%):

- Research proposal (5-10 ds pages) – The proposal should have 4 sections: What (topic)? When/Where (Context)? Why (what’s at stake)? How (what do you plan/hope/propose to do)?
 - Annotated bibliography on your topic (15+ sources) – 3-5 sentence annotations that succinctly explain the importance of each text for your project, noting the inter/disciplinary, methodological, and/or theoretical approach of each author. (This should prepare you to explain your “what” and “when/where” and identify something you want to contribute to the conversation – your “why”)
 - 2-3 page lit review synthesizing your topic annotations.
 - Annotated bibliography on feminist writings about research methods/methodologies/strategies you might be interested in using (min 5 sources) – [For example (in any relevant combination): “in-depth interviewing”, “statistical analysis”, “reading for racial resonances”, “archival research”, “performance as methodology”, “Foucauldian genealogy”, “internet research”, “queer/scavenger methodologies”, etc., etc. (see suggested readings)] (This should prepare you to explain your “how”)
 - 2-3 page "methods" paper citing the materials in your methodologies bibliography
 - Report (summary + commentary) on book about doing research (2-3 pages). The book should be approved by the professor. You will present on the book in class.
 - Reflection paper (2 ss pages) – Reflect on how your portfolio demonstrates growth as a reader, writer, and/or researcher over the course of the semester.

Academic Integrity, University Policies, and Late Work

Academic dishonesty destroys trust and the good-faith work of a seminar. Students who get stressed about their grades or having enough time to complete an assignment are sometimes tempted to cheat—to download sections of a paper from the Internet, to borrow quotes or ideas from other students or published sources. Don't. It's not worth it. Chances are good you will be caught and will fail the assignment or the course. (See the UMass policy on sanctions and procedures on Academic Honesty, http://www.umass.edu/dean_students/codeofconduct/acadhonesty/#D) Cite all your sources, all the time.

If you have learning or other disabilities, it is my goal and that of the Disability Services to ensure that you have reasonable accommodations that minimize the impact of that disability on your learning or your ability to demonstrate what you have learned in the context of assignments. It is your choice whether to disclose the nature of your disability to me; you can simply access services through Disability Services (<http://www.umass.edu/disability/current.html>) and ask me to work with that office to provide appropriate accommodations. However, you do need to let me know that you will need accommodation at or near the beginning of the semester, well in advance of any assignments. If we agree on a modified timeline for the completion of assignments or alternative formats, you are still responsible for completing assignments in a timely way and attending class.

All students are required to have a UMass email account, which will be used for all correspondence for this course (if you attend another of the five colleges please let me know right away!). That and registration for this course will also provide access to Moodle, which we will use for supplementary course materials, readings, peer review, and to turn in assignments.

Please note: Syllabus is subject to change. If assignments or deadlines change, you will be notified via e-mail through the News Forum on our Moodle site. You are responsible for all Moodle announcements.

Week 1

- Welcome; introductions; share research interests, projects, and goals; and review syllabus. Form research communities / peer feedback groups.
