Bio:

Liz Argo has a prominent reputation in New England for her contributions to renewable energy, both as an advocate and as a career professional. Liz was an original founder and board member of Clean Power Now in 2003. In her professional career, Liz has been directly involved in the installation of over 1,000 kilowatts of renewable energy, coming in the forms of wind, solar thermal and photovoltaics.

Liz began her professional work in renewables as a Regional Sales Manager for SolarWrights Inc, a renewable energy design and installation firm based in RI. When SolarWrights became Alteris Renewables in 2009, Liz became the Outreach and Assistant Marketing Director.

Liz now leads the consulting firm, Argo Consulting, providing outreach, project administration and technical consulting to commercial enterprises and governmental institutions.

Argo Consulting lists numerous achievements, including the successful feasibility review, grant solicitation and production management for a 100-kilowatt wind turbine at Nantucket High School, and the well-respected orchestration of the Brewster Industrial Park Wind Outreach Campaign.

In 2010, Argo Consulting became administrator and technical consultant for the Cape and Vineyard Electric Cooperative's Multi-phase PV Initiatives. The county energy cooperative has now contracted for over 36 megawatts of photovoltaics to be installed on the Cape and Martha's Vineyard over the next three years.

Liz continues her advocacy in support of her professional work. In 2011 Liz founded the Cape and Islands Wind Information Network, a citizen's group whose research and candid interviews with homeowners abutting wind developments quickly became a respected source for balanced information on land-based wind prospects.
